

THE NATIONAL INTELLIGENCER. We publish to-day the prospectus of this time-honored journal. Taken as a whole, it is, perhaps, one of the ablest papers that ever emanated from Mr. Gales' pen.

— We thank Mr. BUCKLEY, of Adams & Co.'s Express, for a copy of the Evening Times of the 26th of last month.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

To hear our opponents and to believe them, one would suppose that all the honesty and fidelity in the country, are to be found in the persons of Democrats. If a Democrat is removed from office, forthwith he is canonized as a political saint in the party calendar.

PUBLIC OFFICE.

We commend the following sensible remarks from the Cincinnati Gazette, to our Whig as well as Democratic readers. Perhaps they will open their eyes to a correct view of a subject of deep interest to the out as well as the ins.

The opinion prevails to a considerable extent, that public office is established for the benefit of the people who may be employed in it. In fact, they are necessary creations, established by government, to secure the most efficient and agreeable execution of its laws—laws enacted to promote the happiness of the people.

We sincerely trust that the Whig public will promptly rally to the continued support of our contemporary.

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO CANAL.

It has been frequently assumed that the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal would be completed by the first of July. We have taken some pains to ascertain the condition of the work along the entire line, and are enabled to present the following satisfactory facts.

NEW YORK POST OFFICE APPOINTMENTS.

HEAVY CLAY—REARER TO REARER.

At a meeting of the Clay Association, held at the residence of the Hon. Henry Clay, in the town of Bedford, with a distinction of party, the following resolution offered by John Roberts, Esq., a Whig, was adopted.

THE UNION ENDOAVORS TO SHOW.

The Whigs will have more than 108 members in the next House of Representatives, while to the Democrats it assigns 113, and to the Free Soilers 11. Our neighbor need not think that it alarms the administration by its calculations. It leaves the people to think and to vote as they please for themselves.

THE UNION SAYS THAT IT DOES BELIEVE.

We are in the confidence of the administration. That's of no consequence, for nobody supposes any more faith in what our contemporary believes, than in what he says!

THE UNION SAYS THAT IT HOLDS SLANDER.

to be of very little importance. We are sorry we can't say even this of our neighbor, for he holds slander to be of no importance at all!

THE UNION SAYS THAT IT DOES NOT BELIEVE.

we are in the confidence of the administration. That's of no consequence, for nobody supposes any more faith in what our contemporary believes, than in what he says!

OFFICIAL.

GENERAL ORDER, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, No. 35. WASHINGTON, JUNE 9, 1890.

THE FOLLOWING ORDER IS RECEIVED FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF WAR FOR PUBLICATION IN THE ARMY:

WAR DEPARTMENT, June 9, 1890.

With feelings of deep regret and grief, the President announces to the army the death of Brevet Major General EDWARD PENDLETON GAINES. He died of the epidemic prevailing at New Orleans, on the 6th instant. Thus terminated the long and eventful life of this veteran soldier and patriot on the bank of his beloved Mississippi, a fit emblem of his character—placid as his wave, but on occasion resistless as its torrent.

General GAINES entered the service of his country on the tenth day of January, 1799, with the rank of Ensign. From this humble position he ascended, step by step, to his honorable and elevated rank.

It may be said with perfect truth, that the productions of Mr. GAINES' pen rise to editorial statesmanship. There is no man in the country, who unites in himself so many of the qualifications of the statesman, as Mr. GAINES.

He has what none of our public men have,—a forty years' experience in public affairs, and the practical knowledge derived from an intimate acquaintance, during that long period, with all the individuals, who have been connected with the federal government. Seated, all this time, upon the watch-tower of freedom, as a public journalist, whose judgment has never gone astray, participating always, in a large and deserved degree, in the councils of his party-friends, whether in or out of power, and enjoying even the confidence of his party opponents for his candor and his moderation, he has spoken, from his seat, the words of wisdom to perhaps more people, than it has fallen to the lot of any man in any country to be able to say. The character of the National Intelligencer is as firmly established and as widely known, as that of any of our most eminent statesmen; and we regard the opportunity, which a long life of honorable and wise exertion in the public service, enabled it to embrace on Saturday last, to sum up in brief its labors in the cause of good government and political morals, as one that it may well be proud of, and one that is rarely found though so anxiously sought for by all its contemporaries. A word to the wise, &c.

ARMY NEWS FROM THE PLAINS.

Correspondence of the St. Louis Republic.

PORT LEANORWORTH, May 25, 1890.

MESSRS. EDITORS: During the present exciting times of fitting out escorts and trains for New Mexico, I have had the honor to receive from you a card not to be missed to give you your interesting paper, and of the details connected with the above.

On the 10th, the command of Brevet Lieut. Col. Alexander, of the 10th Cavalry, with his company, and the 1st and 2nd companies of the 10th Cavalry, and two companies of artillery, (the 2d regiment,) under the command of Brevet Major Kennerly, left this post for New Mexico. Under the protection of the 10th Cavalry, the 1st and 2d companies of the 10th Cavalry, and two companies of artillery, (the 2d regiment,) under the command of Brevet Major Kennerly, left this post for New Mexico.

On or about the first of June, Brevet Lieut. Col. Roberts, with his company, 'C', rifles, and company G, 6th infantry, leave with the supply train of about 150 mules, and a pack train of about 100 mules, for the mouth of the Colorado River, under the command of Commissary and A. TO THE EDITOR OF THE NATIONAL WHIG.

CABINET SKETCHES. The Secretary of State.

THE PAPERS OF ATTITUDE.—NO. 111.—NEW SERIES.

One of the earliest, nay, the earliest, of the Executive was the appointment of JOHN M. CLAYTON, Secretary of State—a man who, for a quarter of a century, has ranked among the first men of the country in respect to ability and patriotism, and whose ability and patriotism, and political sagacity, always prompt, always bold, always in the ascendant, has been his country's pride. During his protracted senatorial career, he was ever found where duty called him, and even among the foremost and the firmest to support the honor and integrity of the Union. It is useless to single out particular instances of his generous devotion to the national interest—the common good. The whole history of his brilliant legislative career fairly challenges a comparison, with that of any other of the distinguished men, who have reflected such unflinching glory upon the character of our republic. In the meridian of life he has attained meridian fulness of fame; and few statesmen, who have accomplished the allotted span of human existence, can look back over their diversified and time-honored career, with less to regret or more to rejoice at, than the subject of these sketches. He is now in the prime of life, and the pride and boast of his State and of his country. He is always in the property and claim of the whole country. No narrow, local, or sectional preferences limit his patriotism—it knows no limit, but the boundaries of the entire republic.

That the Secretary is a Whig, and a decided and determined one, no man can question—that he is a member of a Whig cabinet is equally undoubted—and that he will remain a Whig, in adversity as well as in prosperity—in evil and in good report—no one properly who knows him will venture to deny. Whatever reproaches he may incur by his political faith, from the Locofoco press, relying upon his consciousness of right, he will unflinchingly endure.

It is his high opinion of the Whig party, and of the Whig Government, that he is a member of a Whig cabinet is equally undoubted—and that he will remain a Whig, in adversity as well as in prosperity—in evil and in good report—no one properly who knows him will venture to deny.
