THE Nihilist CONSPIRATOR. Hartmann Waiting and Watching on the Border.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Hartmann, the Nihilist, is not in Canada, as has been stated, but is at Niagara Falls village. He arrived here on an early train yesterday morning, but managed, with the assistance of friends, to keep his whereabouts secret.

He was seen yesterday here on the afternoon train for the Falls. It is said he intends to place himself conveniently on the border, so that he can claim the protection of either the United States or Canadian authority as circumstances may from time to time dictate.

Crops in Indiana and Michigan. CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Telegraphic advices of the crops were received this morning from Indiana and Michigan.

In Indiana the amount of the wheat crop is not up to the average in any of the crops. It has in many sections been damaged by drought. One county report increased acreage, but a yield of not more than one-half to two-thirds of an average crop.

Thousands of acres of wheat had been ploughed under, and the remainder, though harvested is only ten to twenty bushels to the acre.

In Michigan the wheat crop has turned out better, and the yield is placed one-third higher than earlier estimates. In exceptional localities the yield is twenty-five bushels per acre, a fair average. The berry is large, plump and heavy. Harvested is only ten to twenty bushels to the acre.

Both the potato and apple crops will be scant.

Fourth race, purse $300, all ages, one mile, was won by Knight Templar, Brooklyn second, time, 1:42.

A Suicide in the Cool. NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Louis Ottensen, a German saloon keeper, at 318 Fourth avenue, committed suicide early this morning.

He entered a large tea box, in which there was a gas jet, shut the door tightly and turned on the gas without lighting it. He was dead two hours when found.

Wiped Out by Fire. SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—The town of Covelo, in Mendocino County, has been entirely wiped out by fire. Details and losses not received yet.

HARTMANN IN CANADA. Across the Border for Fears of Arrest.—A Question of Law.

The Russian Nihilist, Leo Hartmann, who arrived in New York on Wednesday week last, has come to the conclusion that America is no longer the land of the free and the home of the brave.

He entered a large tea box, in which there was a gas jet, shut the door tightly and turned on the gas without lighting it. He was dead two hours when found.

As under the rule of the British government he resides in London, Hartmann was in no way molested by the English authorities, and as even the possibility of his extradition has not been entertained either by the English government or by the London press, Hartmann naturally feels safe in the American dominion of Queen Victoria.

It will be of interest to recall the fact that Hartmann, after taking part in the Moscow railway explosion, resided consecutively in Switzerland, France and England without being delivered up to Russia.

France refused his extradition on the ground of his being a political refugee, and in England the question of extradition was once raised in Parliament, when the British government assumed that extradition in a purely political case was impossible.

Our Secretary of State seems to have a different view on the subject, and is not inclined to pick up any quarrels between an attempt against the life of the Czar, actuated by political causes, and an attack against a private citizen, springing from private motives of hate or revenge.

Against the proposition of Hartmann's case his friends bring forward the following arguments: They say that it is impossible in this case not to make a distinction between a common and a political murder, because the Russian law makes such a distinction. An attempt at murder, it is claimed, is not a capital crime in Russia, and is punished only with ten years' penal servitude.

This is a murder, and is not a political crime, and is punished by the Russian law as high treason, and is punished with death. Thus, if Hartmann should be extradited, the Government of the United States would deliver up to Russia, not a common murderer, but, according to Russian law, a political criminal.

This, Hartmann's friends think, is impossible. Therefore they feel sure that as soon as the Government shall have thoroughly investigated the case, a demand for Hartmann's extradition will have to be denied.

In the meanwhile, however, they deem it more prudent for the Government to refuse to extradite Hartmann, unless he is within the limits of Queen Victoria's dominion, under whose rule even the possibility of extradition has never been taken into consideration.

Speakership of the House. The contest over the Speakership of the next Congress promises to be a very bitter and animated one.

Already the candidates for the position are writing letters to members of the next House putting forth their respective claims. Kasson, of Iowa, Hiscock, of New York, and Kiefer, of Ohio, are the three most prominent candidates now in the field.

Each of these candidates has about the same strength. Already the probabilities of a dark horse entering the race and carrying off the prize is discussed.

In this connection the name of Wm. H. Calkins, who for the past four years has represented the Laporte, Ind., district, and is proposed for a third term, is mentioned.

Mr. Calkins' friends say he is fully as capable as any one of the three named to fill the position. Col. Calkins is one of the youngest men in the House and has had considerable legislative experience.

There is trouble in the Methodist Church at Hickory Point, Ill., because cigars were sold at the Sunday-school festival to small boys, several of whom indulged in their first smoke on the occasion.

VIRGINIA POLITICS.

The Feeling After the Convention--The Coalition Convention Next Week.

Special Correspondence of THE EVENING STAR. RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 6.—The excitement over the events of yesterday and the day before has died out. Nearly all the delegates to the Democratic Convention have returned to their homes.

The dissatisfaction expressed by some yesterday with reference to the choice of nominees for Governor passed away before the adjournment of the convention yesterday afternoon, and quite generally the choice was conceded to be a good one.

After the nomination of Harbour for lieutenant-governor and McKinney for attorney general, the malcontents were more reconciled, as those two nominees had been chosen unanimously and were the strongest men that could have been nominated.

Their nominations, as stated in THE STAR yesterday, created considerable enthusiasm.

A Brief Sketch of Mr. Harbour. Hon. James Harbour, the nominee for lieutenant-governor, comes from a race of Georgian nobles, and uncle having been Governor of Virginia.

He has long occupied a leading position as a lawyer and legislator, having served several times as chairman of the finance committee of the Virginia House of Delegates.

Mr. Harbour is a brother of Hon. John S. Harbour, president of the Virginia Midland Railroad and Congressman-elect from the 7th district of Virginia, and his popularity at home was attested a few years ago when, as a candidate for Congress, he received a majority of 2,000 over Gen. Eppa Hunton in Culpeper County.

He was for a time one of the leaders of the leading party, and was the author of the "Bartlett bill" for the settlement of the State debt.

Last year Mr. Harbour abandoned Mahone and his followers, and supported the regular Democratic electoral ticket. Besides being an able lawyer and astute politician he is a vigorous writer, having edited the Richmond Engineer some time with decided ability.

Sketch of Capt. McKinney. Capt. Philip W. McKinney, of Farmville, Prince Edward County, is one of the most prominent men in South-Side Virginia, as well as a leading lawyer in this section.

Twice before he has been pressed for the attorney-generalship by his friends, and twice he has declined the nomination always carried the unanimous vote of his section.

He served with credit during the late war on the Confederate side, and since the war he has enjoyed a lucrative law practice. During the late presidential canvass Capt. McKinney was a Democratic elector at large and made a State reputation as a skillful lawyer and debater.

He was recently pitted against Col. Cameron, the Readjuster nominee for governor, in which he always acquitted himself to the satisfaction of his party friends.

Capt. McKinney's friends had designed pressing him for the gubernatorial nomination, but he seems to have seen the chances on the ticket which has been assigned him.

Next Week's Convention. The Republicans and Mahone Readjusters are making active preparations for their convention next week, at Lynchburg. The straight-outs are confident of contesting a good working majority, but fear that the coalitionists will capture the convention by trickery.

They maintain that contents have occurred in nearly every county in which coalition delegates are said to have been selected. They further say that if such is the case the straight-out element will not stand upon ceremony, but will split at the convention and hold an independent session of their own and nominate a straight-out ticket.

This will place three tickets in the field. There will be a ticket on a debt-paying platform. The coalitionists, however, are by no means untimely. They say that it will be an easy matter to split the coalition.

They say that they will have no intention of running in bogus delegates, and say that they will most assuredly discontinue all bolters. The Lynchburg convention meets next Wednesday. There will be over two hundred delegates.

Death of Orville Grant. MORRISTOWN, N. J., Aug. 6.—Orville Grant, brother of ex-President Grant, died in the Morristown Insane Asylum yesterday.

(Orville E. Grant was well-known in Washington, having lived here for several years. He was at one time an Indian agent, and through the patronage of his brother, then President, amassed a considerable fortune. About four or five years ago his mind began to weaken, and for the past four years he has been a harmless lunatic, crazy on the scheme of speculation, with wilder views than Col. Sellers. He lost and spent what money he had, and of late was in sorely reduced circumstances. Orville, without a friend, while Ullysses was being feted by kings and princes, was wandering about the streets of this city in rags and almost barefooted, borrowing dimes and quarters with which to purchase food and lodging. He disappeared from here about eighteen months ago, and no track was kept of him further than that he had been appointed to some small nominal position in the Chicago post-office. The deceased was about 48 or 50 years of age.—E.)

The Hoehl Abduction Case. The Baltimore Star of to-day says: "Godfrey Koffenberger, Edward A. Healey and Frank Abbes, constables, were yesterday arrested by Sergeants Seibold and Droste, on the charge of assaulting Andrew Hoehl, whom they arrested on Wednesday night and took to Washington on a serious charge. At the hearing before Justice Benner, at the western police station, Mr. Hoehl testified that upon being arrested and informed of the charge against him he was anxious to meet it, knowing his innocence, and went to Washington willingly for that purpose. He testified that on the way to Camden station Constable Healey offered to let him go for $10, which he declined. Mr. Hoehl, who is a German, was much impeded in giving his testimony by his unfamiliarity with the English language, which was spoken at the hearing, and he was apparently somewhat fearful of making too strong a statement of his grievances. Koffenberger and Healey were released on bail for the Criminal Court, and Abbes was discharged. The charge of assault was made on the advice of State Attorney Kerr, before whom all the facts in the case were laid by Deputy Marshal Peay."

AT A MEETING of the Bar this afternoon, to take action with regard to the death of the late Wm. H. Ward, Joseph H. Bradley was chosen chairman and the following gentlemen formed the committee to prepare resolutions: J. J. Johnson, J. F. Riley, F. S. Miller, Charles Pelham, R. F. Meigs, jr., and J. Donahue. The usual
