The Star Route Cases. Messrs. Shellbarger & Wilson, Ingersoll, Totten & Chandler, counsel for Geo. Thomas J. Brady, J. L. French, Wm. H. Turner and S. P. Brown, in the Star-route cases, yesterday afternoon served upon Col. Wm. A. Cook, of the counsel for the Government, copies of the motion to quash the information and their affidavits which appeared in full in yesterday's Critic. A notice has also been served on the special attorney that on Friday next they will come into court prepared to argue the motion filed by them.

The following was the notice: "Please take notice that on Friday, the 14th day of October, at the opening of the court on that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel be heard, we shall call up for argument and final disposition the motion to rescind the order herein made on the 30th day of September last, and to strike the information from the files of the court. At the same time we will call up for argument the motion for the production of records, files and papers. Copies of said motions and the affidavits therewith filed are hereto attached.

"Shellbarger & Wilson, attorneys for Brady, French and Turner; Jeff Chandler, attorney for Brady; Enoch T. Taylor, attorney for French; R. G. Ingersoll, attorney for Brown."

To this notice the following answer was to-day returned, and it indicates that the notice will not be heard until next week: "I desire to notify you, that by telegram just received Tuesday or Wednesday of next week will suit Col. Bliss and Mr. Brewster to enter upon the arguments in the case of the United States against Thomas Cook, J. Brady and others. They cannot be in attendance on Friday.

"Respectfully, Wm. A. Cook."

It is remarkable how much more indignant we may become at another person's faults than our own.

THE FAIR TO-DAY.

Distribution of Prizes, &c. The Fair grounds presented a decidedly better appearance to-day than any day since the commencement of the Fair. There were more people present and the interest manifested in the distribution of the prizes for the best stock was of a lively character. The display in horticultural, machinery, and the main hall improves with each day. Nearly all the space in each of these departments is now taken up. A list of the exhibitors has already been published in THE CRITIC.

In horticulture, the best exhibiting florists, John H. Small and John Smith, have on exhibition a collection of rare exotics. Lewis Schmidt & Sons exhibit in the same hall a magnificent collection of florists' supplies, including grass bouquets, artificial flowers, fancy bouquet paper, straw work, etc.

The School Board. A meeting of the School Board was held last night at the Franklin School building, and a number of applications were received for teacher's positions. A communication was received from the Commissioners asking an expression of opinion as to what authority the District Commissioners could legally exercise over the public schools. The question was referred to the committee on rules. A letter from the auditor asking that the pay-rolls of the school teachers for September be reconsidered, was referred to a special committee.

A report on the subject of admitting the son of Prof. J. M. Gregory to one of the white schools was laid over for further consideration. It was reported that changes had been made in the plans of the two school buildings in the second division which will increase the expense about $500. A motion to close the schools at noon on Friday was unanimously adopted. A resolution that the new school at Mount Vernon be called the Anacostia School was adopted, and a proposition to call the Bladensburg road school building by the name of Palmer School was laid over.

The Pay of the School Teachers. The complications arising out of the demands of the Auditor of the Treasury Department, that the pay-rolls of the public school teachers made out so far in the month of September, be made out in the time for the September payments, and the Auditor of the District notified the board of trustees that a change would have to be made in the way the rolls were prepared, otherwise no money could be paid out on them. An interview between the Auditor and Trustee Brown showed what was requisite to perfect the pay-rolls, and the requisite money was supplied.

Burglars Sent to the Grand Jury. George E. Crago and George M. Roberts were arraigned in the Police Court to-day, for the burglary, on the night of October 5, of the house and drug store of Middleton Butcher, at the corner of Fourth and I streets northwest. The two men, in company with Toby Green, entered the building by cutting a name from the first-story window and stole a box of cigars, two boxes of cigars, and a small sum of money. Officers Shiga and Fisher made the arrest and appeared against the defendants to-day when both were sent to the grand jury on $500 bonds.

The Tailoring Department of Elemen Bros., corner of Seventh and E streets, is being worked to its fullest capacity now. The unusual success of this department is due to the superior workmanship furnished at moderate prices.

Suit for Divorce. James Barnes to-day filed a bill in equity for divorce from his wife, Margaret Barnes. The case was set for trial in this city, when the petitioner falls to say that the defendant's maiden name being Margaret Scott. THE INSANITY DODGE

The Card to be Played in Guiteau's Case. "How did you succeed in Baltimore?" inquired THE CRITIC reporter of Mr. George Scoville, brother-in-law of Guiteau, whom he met on the street this morning. "I did not go," he answered. "I got hold of a Baltimore directory, and failing to find the gentleman's name in it I wanted to see if he had moved elsewhere. He was at one time a lawyer in Chicago, and I knew him quite well, and thought, perhaps, that I could get his assistance, but I guess I shall have to give it up."

"Have you tried to secure other counsel besides those already spoken of?" "No; but I shall, of course. In case of failure, however, I am posting myself as fully as I can to go on with it."

"I was down to the jail last evening after the copy of the indictment was served upon him. He turned over to me all the papers, and I have been trying to become acquainted with them."

"How did he appear?" "Well, he was more excited than I have ever seen him—on account of receiving the indictment, but I attributed it to other causes. I tried to obtain from him the names of persons for witnesses in the towns and counties where he had been, for the purpose of finding out his conduct and condition of mind before coming to this city. He would not give me a single name and refused to converse about the case. His lawyer, Samuel H. Smith, had the desire of getting out his book. He has been greatly deceived in that respect and shows it. He supposed that his statement had been published from time to time and was all before the public now."

"Who was he?" "Why he thought all about Mr. Bailey, the stenographer for District Attorney Corhill, was doing it. He says that when the District Attorney came to see him, he accompanied by Mr. Bailey, it was understood that if he made a statement, embracing the history of his life, that it would be furnished to the public. Since he discovered that this has not been done, he wants everything else suspended until his book is issued."

"Does he not feel the seriousness and responsibility of his situation?" "Oh, yes; but he seems to think that if he can get his book out and before the public that he can justify himself and allay the excited state of mind now existing in connection with himself."

"Does he expect to convince the public that his act was a justifiable one?" "That is what he thinks, and if he can get his book out, as he calls it, before the public, he will convince everybody that what he did was right."

"Don't you think that will be a difficult thing to accomplish?" "I have never expressed an opinion upon the subject."

"When will Guiteau be arraigned?" "I do not know, and probably will not be advised; at least I do not expect to be informed of it. All I wish to know is when he reaches the Criminal Court, and I will be here at that time, as it will be my duty to be."

"Is he likely to be arraigned this week?" "I cannot say. That rests entirely at the option of District Attorney Corhill."

Guiteau's Appearance To-day. A gentleman who saw Guiteau in his cell this morning says that he found him sitting on his bed reading a book. The prisoner's eyes were terribly blood-shot, and he was evidently in a high fever. He expressed himself as being afraid that his strength would be so much weakened that the assassin talked rapidly and incessantly, his health being the only subject upon which he conversed, and it was evident to his visitor that Guiteau was on the eve of what might prove a serious illness.

SOLDIERS TABOODED

The soldiers who fought in the Union army for four years to maintain the Republic have been deprived of their just recognition in appointments in the several departments. The statutes are being violated every day. The soldiers through the Grand Army of the Republic have tried to find out why it was that a soldier, all things being considered equal, could not get an appointment in any of the departments. At last some light is about to be shed on this subject.

A Cincinnati post-office, which was approved by the Postmaster-General, and made applicable to all the Presidential post-offices in the United States, was shown to THE CRITIC reporter this morning, which says that no application for a position will be considered if the applicant is under 30 years of age or over 39. It will be seen that the enforcement of this rule excludes every Union soldier in the United States. The rule is published in a pamphlet, consisting of eight or ten pages, entitled, "Regulations of the Post-office General, Ohio." These regulations and rule 5, the substance of which is quoted above, have been adopted by every post-office in the United States, the postmaster of which is appointed by the President; and it is said, upon good authority, that the General Post-office Department in Washington adopted and enforced the same rule. These regulations were gotten up at Cincinnati in 1870, and approved by the then Postmaster-General, Benjamin F. Johnson, introduced in the Senate, in a day or two, inquiring into the occasion for this apparent unjust discrimination. The Post-office officials may endeavor to make it appear that this rule applies only to letter-carriers. Even if that is true, it is discriminating against the soldiers just the same. The present Postmaster-General's attention has been called to this rule, but he has declined to rescind it.

Her Ladyship's Broken Crockery. Lady Pigot was the possessor, among many art manufactures equally beautiful and scarce, of an old Worcester tea service, which was occasionally in use, and which consisted of eight cups and saucers and a little teapot. One fatal afternoon the footman, in carrying out the tray with these charming objects upon it, tripped over the lap-dog, or the rug, or some unlucky impediment, and sent everything flying.

The effect of this awkward mishap was that the entire service, excepting one solitary cup and four of the saucers, was smashed to atoms. So hopeless appeared the wreck that, though it was carefully gathered together and preserved as a memento, the ward maid to quite the fragments. There was nothing among them so presentable even as those "broken teacups, wisely kept for show, which on the chimney glittered in a row," as chronicled by Goldsmith, in "The Deserted Village." Last week at a sale of the ladyship's effects, the single cup and four saucers realized something over £30, while the broken pieces brought the remarkable sum of 50 guineas.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Widow Bedott." This play of Paganini V. Nasby's holds the boards at the Opera-house. As Petroleum V. N. never wrote anything worth reading, the comedy, if original from him, would be worthless; but fortunately, it is a dramatization, and in its line quite clever. There is not a great deal to it, but Mr. Bishop is exceedingly original in his conception of the character of the widow, and his support is very good indeed. Matinee are given to-day and Saturday.

National Theatre. "Michael Strogoff" at the National grows in attractiveness night by night. As an acting play it is excellent, and as a variety and spectacular drama, unequalled. The ballet is simply beautiful, the dancing novel and almost unexceptionally elegant and perfect. Matinee to-day and Saturday.

Theatre Comique. Not even the Baltimore Oriole can call off the crowds that throng the Comique. This abode of amusement and refined humor was never more characteristically attractive than this week. Matinee at 2:30 Friday.

The Fly. Much has been said of the fly of the period, but few write about him who are bald-headed.

Hence we say a word. It is of no use any more to deny the horrible truth. Although beautiful as a peri in other ways, reading the comical, if original from him, would be worthless; but fortunately, it is a dramatization, and in its line quite clever. There is not a great deal to it, but Mr. Bishop is exceedingly original in his conception of the character of the widow, and his support is very good indeed. Matinee are given to-day and Saturday.

That is our fix. When we have our hat on and go chasing down the street, with that camel glide of ours, everyone asks who that noble-looking Apollo with the curly mane and melancholy eye is; but when we are at the office with our hat hung up on the French walnut sideboard, and the sun comes in through the rosewood shutters and lights the shellac polish on our intellectual dome, we are not so rectry.

Then it is that the fly, with gentle tread and seductive song, comes and prospects around on our bump of self-esteem, and tickles us and nips us and nudges us.

When we get where foreboreance ceases to be a virtue, we haul off and slap the place where he was, while he goes over to the inkstand and snickers at us. After he has waded around in the carmine ink awhile, he goes back to the bump of spirituality, and makes some red marks on it.

Having laid off his claim under the new mining law, he proceeds to sink on it. If we write anything bitter these wight days; if we say aught of our fellow man that is disagreeable or unjust, and for which we are red-headed ticked off, it is because at times we are exasperated and are not responsible.

If the fly were large and weighed two hundred pounds, and came in here and told us that if we didn't take back what we had said about him he would knock us out of the window with our remains and let us fall a hundred feet in the busy street, it wouldn't worry us so much, because we could strangle him with one hand, while we could strangle the editor with the other. We do that frequently. But a little fragile insect, with no home and no parents, and only four or five million brothers and sisters, gains our confidence, and then tickles our scalp till we have to write with a sheet of tow roofing over our head.

The Stenben Family. The members of the family of the Baron von Stenben embarked on Tuesday on board the North German steamer Bender, for New York. They attended service for the President in Berlin on Monday before their departure. The German Emperor is reported to have been greatly pleased on being informed of the American Government's invitation to the Stenben family to attend the Yorktown celebration. He not only regards it as a further bond of amity between the two countries, but also expressed his gratification at this proof of America's general feeling ever exhibited for the German people.
