

THE EVENING CRITIC, ESTABLISHED AUGUST 1868.

WEATHER INDICATIONS. The special bulletin issued from the Signal Office today says: Fair weather is indicated for Saturday in New England, the Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic and Gulf States.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS. TONS wholesale at 730 Seventh street. There were forty-four arrests made by the police yesterday.

MARY ANDERSON filled the theatre to its utmost capacity last week in Philadelphia.

MARY ANDERSON's winter wardrobe, gloves, hats, shoes, etc., at A. T. Jones, 125 North Capitol street.

AN ARKAR thief succeeded in stealing several overcoats from the Tremont House yesterday.

ONE HUNDRED dollars damage was done last night by an accident at the house, 1400 M street northwest, owned by Mrs. Professor Henry.

Mrs. MARY ANDERSON is an actress that may well hold the highest honor of her profession, and carries the reputation far wherever she goes.

A SPLENDID breakfast on the table arranged by a family of Cougus. They used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and that family now keeps it always in hand and recommends it. Price only 25 cents a bottle.

FRANK RILEY, a white boy, had a quarrel a few days ago with a boy named Herbert, and when Herbert's sister came out of the house, he insulted her in an indecent manner, and was fined $10 by Judge Smith today.

THE will of Judge Morgan was filed with the Register today. After the death of her husband she bequeaths to her daughter, Mrs. Mary Ellen Gallagher, part of lot 4, square 825.

SAMUEL SHEPHERD, who has reported some nights past on the softest side of sundry collisions, will be provided with better accommodations at Gen. Crocker's popular winter resort, the having been by Judge Smith sent down this morning.

GOTLIEB YONTSKY, an old tramp, bearing a striking resemblance to "Rip Van Winkle," with a white beard, and a hat, and a long nose, was guilty of using some reckless and family language, and was sent to jail for fifteen days today.

DURING A FIGHT between three colored women at the corner of Eleventh and Q streets, last evening, Susan Grant, one of the number, attempted to cut one of the women with a razor, but failed to do so, and accidentally cut her own face, severing an artery, and causing a painful but not dangerous wound.

JOSEPH A. KELLY, for threats of violence toward his sister, Mrs. Berry, was today put under bonds in the sum of $500. Kelly, who was a prosperous brewer, had some quarrels in the past, but he has never been in court many times on the same charge of violence toward his sister. Judge has taken his personal bonds, but refused to do so today.

MARY ANDERSON is the brightest light that shines in the theatre, and has accomplished more in five years than others have attained in a lifetime.

JOHN H. BAYBARD, of New York, and Aaron H. Allen, of Massachusetts, were yesterday in the District of Columbia, asking that the latter be compelled to pay for certain suits manufactured and used at the school buildings. The defendants claim that the suits were issued to the parties had expired, and no return had been made, but in the month of October, 1870, the court decided that the return was good and valid, hence this suit.

THE ASSASSIN'S TRIAL

(Continued from First Page) "Are you sure that you never did it?" "Well, after some hesitation, 'I went once to see if he was there.'"

Gen. Garfield's Little Church. "Did you see him?" "I did not see him." "Did you have your pistol with you?" "I did not have it with me." "And your only motive was to see whether he attended that church?" "I wanted to see where he sat."

"Was it near a window?" "Yes." "Did you go and look outside to see if you could see the President through the window?" "I did not." "Did you think you could hit him if you shot?" "I did not think so."

"Did you take out your pistol?" "I did not." "Because I did not want to shoot him then, I never went around to the window until after he left the church." "And all these preparations were on political grounds?" "Yes." "For the good of the American people?" "Perhaps," then, quickly, "it was my inspiration."

"You were inspired by the newspapers, I suppose." "The Daily inspired me, and the newspapers confirmed the inspiration." [Laughter.] "I never intended to shoot him." "What did you have your pistol for then?" "I was in the habit of carrying it."

"Did you not intend to remove him the first chance you got after the 1st of June?" "No, not until after the 10th or 12th. I had too much else to do." Here a recess was taken.

After Recess. The prisoner said the President went to Long Branch the Saturday after he saw him in church, never saw the jail until after he was in. He went there after being inspired the 1st of June, but then he was a stranger, and wanted to look around, only got as far as the garden's office, visited the cemetery that day also, when he hired the hackman at the depot he told the hackman to drive toward the Congressional Cemetery, wanted to go to the jail that night in the alley, but the pistol did not use to use it. It was not because he feared striking Mr. Blaine that he did not shoot, it was a hot, rainy night and he felt tired and did not feel like shooting.

The Murder Confessed. "But you did shoot the President finally?" "Yes, under a most powerful influence, shot twice and hit him once." "And murdered him?" "I did not say so. I never committed any murder and never conceived such an idea." "The Daily just said to you that Garfield should be released?" "Yes." "The Daily addressed you in those words?" "In substance, yes." "Guitouan had an imperfect recollection of the President's drive out to Soldiers' Home?" "He had seen him out on several occasions, sometimes had his pistol and sometimes had not; his idea was to remove the President any time after the 1st of June, and he slept on the night of the 17th at Mr. Grant's, the next morning rose between 5 and 6 o'clock, it was dark, he first went to the river and was with a view of making his aim in shooting at the President sure." Here Guitouan objected to going over the same ground.

"I will ask you some other questions then," said Judge Porter, adding: "What was your object in visiting the jail before the shooting?" The prisoner said that he wanted to inspect the place in order to know what sort of quarters he would have after removing the President. "What did you expect to be taken to jail for?" "For protection." "Did you not expect to be tried for shooting the President?" "The witness added that he had taken such precautions to protect him."

Escape Mob Violence. And knew that the Government was bound to protect him. He was questioned about the time when he declined to shoot the President at the depot when Mrs. Garfield was with him. "Did you think Mrs. Garfield's presence should have overruled the will of the Deity?" "I never thought about it. It was in her humanity on my part."

"What would not shoot because of your own will?" "The witness became highly excited at this point and got up another scene, in which he reiterated his refusal to answer questions, claiming that the ground had been gone over several times." "Your Head is So Thick." He yelled at the counsel, "and you cannot then in these facts, I will endeavor to beat them in for you." [Laughter.] "The prisoner then sat himself more firmly in his chair and adjusting his eyes, spoke freely of his own mind and began reading. Judge Porter asked several questions without eliciting answers, and then Mr. Seville arose and appealed to the Court to forbid Judge Porter from going over the facts already brought out several times. The appeal was not heeded, and finally Judge Porter asked Guitouan about the movements on the morning of the shooting. The prisoner said he had slept at the Soldiers' Home the night before; arose early, walked over to the White House, then went down and arranged about the carriage, and after that went and stood at the President's side. "Did you not aim to strike your victim in the hollow of his back?" "And from that hour to this you have never felt any remorse?" "I knew that the act was a necessary one."

"And you feel no more remorse than you did when you threw that dog down stairs?" "My mind has been a blank on the subject. I never conceived that it was a murder." "And yet you feel no remorse at making a good woman a widow?" "I tell you my mind was blank on that subject."

Guitouan Acknowledges Remorse. "And yet you have still felt no remorse?" repeated Judge Porter, pressing that point. "Well," said the prisoner, desperately, "I have felt remorse, of course, as far as my personal feelings are concerned." "The Cross-Examination Closed. Judge Porter: "That will do, prisoner; your cross-examination is closed." Guitouan would not down, though. He blurted out that his act was not a murder, and that the Deity inspired him. Here Mr. Seville took him in hand and endeavored to dispel whatever impression had been made on the jury by Judge Porter's closing point by asking what he meant by remorse. Guitouan repeated in substance what he had replied to Judge Porter. "Concerning the result of the shooting, he asked: "Did you take in view whether it would cause suffering or not?" "I never thought that conception of it. I did not think about it."

"Do you remember an interview I had with you in the jail after the shooting?" "Yes." "You, District Attorney Corkhill, and Mr. Bailey were there, and I want to say right here, while it is fresh in my mind, that I told Mr. Bailey then and asked him to put it down strong, that the President would not get well, some of them said that he was not much shot and would recover. I said that the Lord did not intend that he should get well, and he would not."

Guitouan's Newspaper Ventures. "In regard to the newspaper in the District, you said that is one I wrote to John H. Adams in regard to establishing my newspaper in the District, I wrote to him, and he said he would do it for $10,000 into the venture, but did not do so." "Yes." "Mr. John H. Adams was going to put $10,000 into the venture, but did not do so." "I remember that he was the letter dated November 5, 1865, stating that his newspaper enterprise was progressing finely and he should enter into the venture with his whole heart. He intended to have his insurance and make it security for the money loaned to inaugurate the enterprise." "He remained the resident for the first year to be $1,042,500; expenses, $547,500, and net profit, $485,000." "Is it your belief, Mr. Seville, that the Ocala Company?" "Yes." "He was Novoy's right hand man, and believed in his success as great a man as Novoy?" "Yes." "What was his trouble with the Company?" "His daughters were ruined by Novoy and one or two others and Mills kept up a fuss about it. They finally bought him out and he took his family and went West." "Mr. Seville carried him over the same ground with reference to his life in the Community that had been gone over to a great extent before during which Guitouan referred to his life of wretchedness."

FOR GOD'S SAKE

to destroy the Mormon nation, whose sufferings are the same as were mine. I want to ask him and the National Congress to do their best to wipe out that striking, miserable fanaticism."

He emphasized his concluding words by hammering the rail of the witness-box vigorously. After a few questions by Mr. Davidge, Guitouan was then, at 2:13 o'clock, requested to leave the stand, which he had held for three days.

Other Witnesses. Dr. Alexander Neff, Columbus, Ohio, testified that he had been in prison in Columbus in 1878; he was attempting to lecture on theology and he was selling an inspired volume of his own authorship, he called on those to sell a book; he said it was one of the finest literary works ever produced by an inspired pen.

The witness introduced him to several gentlemen, who had had some experience with the cases of insanity, from conversations with the prisoner thought him a fanatic. Cross-examined: Had three or four conversations, from three minutes to half an hour, with the prisoner, he met him casually on the streets, and a crowd generally gathered around, had never had any occasion to examine his condition with reference to his responsibility for committing crime.

Col. J. O. P. Burnside, Charles P. Farwell, Edward A. Bailey and Edward Daniel were called, but did not respond.

The court then at 2:28 o'clock adjourned.
