Congress To-day.

SENATE.—The Chair laid before the Senate a report from the Navy Department, with a statement of the various contracts made by the government for the construction of dry-docks and basins.

A bill authorizing the settlement of the accounts of officers and others who were charged with the distribution and collection of moneys in California previous to the admission of that State into the Union, was taken up, and, after debate, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading.

Petitions were presented from New York, Massachusetts, Baltimore, and other places, urging that additional aid be given to Collins's line of steamers.

Mr. SHIELDS presented the memorial of 500 citizens of Washington city, praying that certain restrictions upon the right of suffrage in this District be removed.

The private calendar was then taken up, and several adverse reports were concurred in.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—On motion of Mr. HOUSTON, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and resumed the consideration of the bill granting to every man, a citizen of the United States, one hundred and sixty acres of land, on certain conditions.

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, resumed his remarks from yesterday, in favor of grants of public lands for the support of the indigent insane, for education, for poor farmers, and for internal improvements in the States.

Mr. CHARTAIN, of Georgia, defended the Constitutional Union party of Georgia, and claimed the merit of the passage of the Compromise measures principally for the Democratic party.

Mr. OLDS made a Democratic party speech.

The Scene on Board the Baltic. The following occurs in the letter of "W. G. S." in the Baltimore "Republican and Argus" of yesterday afternoon:

"It is evident Collins made a hit amongst members of Congress by his noble ship. It was an argument that could not be resisted. All theories vanish before things, where theories are the opposite of the things. They who may argue that the British could have been beaten in the ocean steam-race by steamers of less power, less cost, and less expense than the Baltic, will speak to closed ears, because the eyes of those ears have seen how the great task was achieved. Look out for a speedy and certain passage of a bill granting the Ajax of Atlantic steam navigation what he wants to sustain his line against the British steamer."

If the writer is correct in his predictions, so be it. The Collins steamers are worthy all praise and encouragement, and their acknowledged triumph over the British Cunard line is to us a source of great gratification. Congress is wise, and of course will act with wisdom in the premises; and if it shall give a bonus to this line, we may thereupon look for a much more magnificent bonus to a new line to Africa, that the glorious designs of the colonizationists may be efficiently promoted. These are subjects for statesmen and politicians—not for us.

But a succeeding paragraph in this letter may come within the scope of our comprehension. It is as follows:

"The scene of yesterday, however, on board the Baltic, was disgraceful in the extreme to the six hundred uninvited guests who had the impudence to rush in where they were not bidden. They not only violated all the rights of private hospitality, but outraged the ordinary decencies of society. To see them seize upon and devour the delicacies to which they were not invited—to witness their demolition and absorption of champagne bottles and their exhilarating contents, intended for others—to behold the excited mass making free with what they had no right to, without a blush of shame—men and women heister-skelter—reminded one of a French sans culotte socialist scene of the 24th December—with this difference in the present case, that the actors belonged to the cultivated gentry, or what Bennett felicitously styles the codfish aristocracy!"

We assure the writer of the above that, however the uninvited may have acted, it was the invited, male and female, and the most respectable of them, whose conduct was most exceptional. We are able to prove this assertion. It was not an irresponsible herd of interlopers alone, but a people who were specially favored; and the stigma shall not rest upon our city of having, in the tickets of invitation were very numerous circulated, and not demanded of those who had them. It was therefore intended that the company should be numerous and promiscuous. It was so; and it was to such a multitude that an immense magazine of wine was freely opened. The people should not have drunk it, to be sure; but they were men and women, and men and women do not always resist temptation. We think we speak to the praise of our city when we say that, in the midst of a very extensive boozing, the slightest exhibition of strife or angry feeling was not evinced.

Now to the point. The "big treat" of Mr. Collins was too bacchanalian for the cause of good order, too indicative of a willingness to use improper means of promoting his objects, and too munificent in its costliness for one asking aims, and is condemned in terms decided and severe by thousands in this community. It has not promoted the cause upon which he embarked.

It is said that a private party of a hundred persons is not held in Paris without the presence of an agent of police. He comes unbidden by the host, and, when interrogated, privately shows his authority, and so remains, at times, without being known to any but the entertainers.

Interest. A writer in the Baltimore "Sun" gives the following rule for calculating interest for any number of days at 6 per cent. per annum: Divide the number of days by 6, and multiply the dollars by the dividend, the result is the interest in decimals; cut off the right hand figure and you have it in dollars and cents. Thus: What is the interest on $100 for 21 days? 21 divided by 6 is 3 1/2; 100 multiplied by 3 1/2 is 350, or 35 cents. Again, what is the interest on $878 for 93 days? 93 divided by 6 is 15 1/2; 878 multiplied by 15 1/2 is 5,859, or $5.85 9-10.

We can give a simpler mode: Multiply the amount of money by the number of days, and then divide by 60, and you have the answer in cents. Thus: What is the interest of $100 for 40 days at 6 per cent.? 100 multiplied by 40 gives 4,000, and this divided by 60 gives 66 2/3.

This rule assumes the year to contain but 360 days, (which is common); and 60 days, or 1/2 of the year, represents one per cent. It is therefore plain that any number of days divided by 60 will give the number of cents each dollar should bring. Whether the division be performed before or after the multiplication, the effect is the same. The fewer operations, however, the better; and hence the latter mode is preferred.

Army and Navy Uniforms. Decided improvements have been made in the military dress of all sections of the army, and especially in the cap, which is now fashioned after a common-sense pattern, beveling from the base upward, light and graceful. The adoption of the new style will not be enforced in the army until the 1st of July next.

The new navy uniform is also a decided improvement on the old, in convenience, comfort and graceful appearance. It has been fully agreed upon, but still awaits the official approval of the Secretary of the Navy. Its practical adoption will probably be required by the 1st of January next.

We observe that the several principal mercers and tailors of this city are very well prepared to meet the wishes of army and navy officers, as well as of all other gentlemen wishing fine and well-made apparel. Itinerant clothiers from other cities not infrequently make a loud noise about their ability to supply superior articles at very low prices; but the experience of gentlemen whom we know has taught them that our city men are more reliable, and that it is more advantageous and satisfactory to deal with them.

The Methodist Convention at Philadelphia—Second Day. The following number of churches were represented: Philadelphia, 12; New York, 2; Seneca, 2; Brooklyn, 2; Buffalo, 3; Pittsburg, 2; Pottsville, 1; Alleghany City, 1; Manayunk, 1; Monroe, 1; Chester, 1; Chelsea, 1; Boston, 1; Vermont, 1; Washington, 1; Burlington, 1.

The preamble and resolutions submitted yesterday, relative to petitioning the General Conference, were passed.

Resolutions were also adopted requesting the conferences and churches not represented in the convention, favorable to lay representation, to communicate their views to the General Conference.

Resolutions were also adopted appointing a committee of ten to attend the Annual Conference at Boston for the purpose of urging their views, and also declaring the Convention opposed to all innovation in the itinerancy, and all encroachments upon the episcopacy, and pledging themselves as individuals to give their cordial support to the episcopacy and itinerancy, and disavowance anything which can possibly tend to weaken either. The Convention then adjourned.

Trouble in Pittsburg. The mayor and council are at loggerheads—the latter assuming the appointing power, and the former refusing the aid of officers of police not of his own selecting. On Tuesday night the police committee of the city council and the new night-watch appointed by them, accompanied by a large crowd, went in a body to the mayor's office, and demanded immediate possession of the watch-house. This being refused, they then broke open the doors of the watch-house, and John Scott, one of the police committee, declared his intention to shoot down the first man who should offer any resistance. After having gained possession of the watch-house, an attempt was made to obtain the books, but the iron safe resisted all the efforts that were made to break it open by the official mob. The roll of the new watchmen was then called, who immediately went on duty, and the crowd dispersed. Mayor Guthrie was not present at the time, having been sick for several days past. The vagrants and night offenders had a hearing next morning before Alderman Steel, who will probably hereafter exercise this portion of the mayor's functions.

These Pittsburgers are a nice set of fellows.

Who'll be our next President? Will it be FILLMORE, or WEBSTER, or CALHOUN, or STYLLIE, or LITTLE, or BURNES, or ALLEN, or BUTLER, or DOUGLASS, or STOCKTON, or the brave, or SCOTT, the old hero, or BUCHANAN, the grave, or DUNSMITH, MARSH, or WOOD, of New York, or SEWARD, or KOSUTH, or some full-bearded Turk, or ALLEN, or LANE, or SAM HOUSTON the fierce, or CHITTENDEN great, or our friend Mr. FRANK?

The people will answer in loud pealing voices, and the freemen will promptly answer for their choice! Ye choose ye the purest, the greatest and best. Ye have none that can equal Old Hat of the West!

A Pennsylvanian has invented a collar for horses, which is made of India rubber. It is said to be a great improvement, or comfortable substitute. He ought to invent a more easy one for politicians.—Baltimore Clipper.

This Pennsylvanian is Mr. T. M. Coleman, now in this city, who expects soon to obtain a patent for his horse-collar; but he does not care to adapt it to the less comely animals indicated by the "Clipper." The ears of these stand too prominently in the way.

Excision of a Tumor. A tumor of a malignant character was a day or two since extracted by Dr. DUKES, from the left breast, immediately in front of the left shoulder, of a lady residing on 10th street, in this city. The patient was under the influence of chloric ether, and the operation was performed in a few minutes. She is now doing well, and appears to have a very grateful appreciation of the agency of a weapon feared by many—to wit: a keen-edged knife.

The Baltimore "Pica-yune," a new and energetic daily paper, hitherto independent in politics, has announced its determination to support the nominee of the Democratic Convention for the Presidency. John Cragin is its editor.

If you like good coffee, go to W. C. Harper & Co.'s, Pennsylvania Avenue, south side, between Fourth and-a-half and Sixth streets. You can always rely on these gentlemen.

A Telegraph Line to the Pacific. Henry O'Reilly, of telegraphic celebrity, the Philadelphia "Sun" remarks, is one of the promoters of men of the age; and over seven thousand miles of telegraph constructed under his supervision are a standing monument of his enterprise and energy. He is now earnestly engaged in promoting the project of extending the telegraph westward to the Pacific, and is sanguine of being able to have it in operation to San Francisco within eighteen months, provided Congress shall make a favorable response to his memorial asking for the right of way through the wilderness, and protection to his wires. He seeks no pecuniary aid, but simply proposes to supersede the present system of forts, at long distances, with large garrisons, by establishing stockades twenty miles apart, each of twenty dragons. He proposes that two or three soldiers shall ride daily each way from each stockade, so as to transport a daily express letter mail across the continent, while at the same time protecting and comforting emigrants and settlers along the public domain, and thus incidentally furnishing all the protection which the telegraph will require. Seemingly, this is a very ingenious and practicable mode of securing a great national object, with comparatively small expense. The distance between Missouri and San Francisco is about 2,300 miles. The mail service, conducted with military precision, therefore, ought to be accomplished in from twelve to fourteen days.

A Bit of a Row. An alarm of fire at 7 o'clock last evening set going the somewhat noisy bell of the Persey, and soon brought out "the machines." As there was no fire, but a good deal of rain, these soon went home again. The Union reel, from the First Ward, however, was less fortunate. On its way up the Avenue, "manned by a few boys," as an eyewitness has informed us, it encountered some of the covets "vich runs with the Franklin," a miniature row ensued, and ended with the cutting up of the Union hose, and "chucking" the reel into the canal at the foot of 18th street.

These things used to fret us; but we have got bravely over that. We regard them now as simply ridiculous. Riots and the destruction of the city property—sometimes even murder—and all by a few dozen whippersnappers whom any citizen would contract to keep quiet at a couple of thousand dollars a year! It is ludicrous. A fire department and insurance concern should be one and the same thing; and its officers and agents should have official authority over all persons in times of fires, and riots, and scandalous demonstrations.

A Lady Preacher. The Boston "Freeman's Journal" speaks of Miss Antonette L. Brown, whom it describes as a "strong-minded" young lady, recently graduated from the Oberlin theological school, in Ohio, and says: "Last Sunday afternoon she mounted the rostrum usually occupied by Theodore Parker, at the Melodeon, and discoursed on St. Paul's doctrine that women should keep silence in the churches. The darling preacher is apparently twenty-one years of age. She is slender and genteel in form, and pretty in feature, with a fine expressive face. She wore glossy black hair, neatly arrayed, a close-fitting, high-necked dress that became her vastly, and altogether she made a favorable impression upon the audience by her modest deportment and her pretty face, as by her chaste language and logical discourse."

Some of the papers speak of this lady very coarsely—but only the coarser papers, however. We are much in favor of women's adorning, as she does, the domestic home; but we are not right sure that one who is a good writer or good speaker should put her light under a bushel. We would have her exercise her talents for the benefit of the world.

Homestead Exemption in Tennessee. We are gratified to learn that the State of Tennessee, with an eye to its permanent welfare, and the prosperity and happiness of its people, has, by both branches of its legislature, passed a well-guarded homestead exemption bill. It is said that it requires the person intending to profit by it to file his intentions to this effect before the issuance of execution. This is just. Such a law should permit no deception to be practised. He who intends to retain possession of his home should frankly avow his purpose to the world, that he may not receive credit from the belief that he will not claim the right to do so. Let the law be well guarded, but let it be the law of our entire land.

Endurance. New Orleans papers state that a Captain Tompkins has received in that city $5,000 for walking 60 consecutive hours without sleep or rest. The trial was instituted by the medical faculty "to test the full extent of nature's endurance;" though this we of course do not believe. The faculty stand in need of no such test. A reliable friend of ours has assured us that he once knew a woman who labored in the midst of her sick family without sleeping from Sunday morning until Wednesday morning, and who did not receive $5,000 for her privations; nor do we believe the medical faculty ever even recorded the extent of her endurance.

J. SHUBERT, 10th street, a worthy old veteran of the type-case, goes the rounds of our city with a basket of perfumes and "notions" upon his arm. Types, and presses, and copy, and proofs, are no longer handled by the old gentleman. His eyes and his fingers have done full service in his time. Yet he scorns to be idle! Give him a kind word and make a little purchase when you meet him. He could once afford to be liberal himself. Kind be yet is.

Moral Sanction. The Derby "Journal" tells about a man in that town who has received in pay for liquor, from an impoverished family, all the bed curtains, window curtains, knives, forks and spoons; and concludes that moral sanction would not be so effective in changing that man's conduct as the Maine law. The "Journal" has hit it there.

Stevens! His fame is everywhere, and so is the fame of his beautiful birds. By the way, they have not yet been lettered off! But Stevens is out in flying colors! He has the hats for the season, and everything else a gentleman would wear. He may be found under Browns' Hotel; and, "when found, make a note of it," as the captain would say. His new style of hats are perfect loves!

The "Daily Times," a large daily paper, at $8 a year, was commenced at Louisville on the 28th ultimo, by Messrs. Howard, O'Hara & Stapp. It is hoped by the editors that it will be "the organ of the Democratic party of Kentucky." Its articles are ably written.

The Maiden's Mistake; or, a Kissing Adventure. BY CHARLEY BOWLINE.

Say what you will about it, I am ready to swear that I never was kissed, as far as I remember, but once. But that once has not been forgotten; and if you will leave your main-yard aback, I'll tell you the story, though it won't do for me to catch you laughing at it.

I lacked only half an hour of midnight. I had been on a visit to one of my neighbors, and found such agreeable company that the hours passed by unnoticed—by me, at least; but I finally got under way for my lodgings. The night was cold and nearly starless, and the wind blew fresh from the north; but it did not hurry me much, for I snattered along whistling the very familiar tune of "O no, I never mention it."

Suddenly, while passing an aristocratic-looking mansion, I saw a front window in the second story softly raised, and a white hand seemed to beckon me to approach. Wondering who it could be, and what was wanted, I darted through the front gate, and was soon under the window.

"Is that you, Charley?" asked one of the sweetest voices you ever dreamed of hearing. Pretty well convinced that it was me, and nobody else, I replied— "Yes, here I am!" "Well, I'm ready!"

The unseen lady lowered the end of a rope-ladder to the ground, seemingly inviting me to ascend; but I fell back aghast. However, I was spared the agony of a refusal. I saw in an instant that the lady was about to descend to the ground; I saw her suspended between heaven and earth.

And, O, joy! the instant she touched the ground she threw her arms round my neck and kissed me again and again! "Wasn't I happy? Of course, I pressed her to my bosom with all a lover's ardor, and returned her kisses with more than compound interest.

"O! I am so glad you have come!" murmured the fair creature, in tones that thrilled my heart with delight. "I have taken nothing but my jewel and ready money for I have hopes that a reconciliation will be effected. If not, we will live, love, and be happy in a little world of our own. And now let us hurry away before we are discovered," said the lady, taking my arm and leading the way. No doubt she thought me very backward, but, to tell the truth, I didn't know where to direct my steps. Following the "bent of her inclination," we passed rapidly up the street.

Our rapid pace soon brought us to the gas-light on the corner, and then, for the first time, she caught a glimpse of my features. The effect of that look was electrical. She disengaged her arm from mine, recoiled a few paces, and murmured wildly— "Merciful heavens! you are not my Charley!"

Her face was turned towards mine, and never had I seen woman more beautiful. Her eyes were as dark as the starless night that enshrouded us, and expressive of her gifted soul. While I was gazing upon her, I heard somebody in the direction of the house we had just left whistling the same tune I had been indulging in a few moments previous. My fair companion darted away in the direction of whistler No. 2. The whole adventure seemed a mystery to me; and there I stood, wondering what would be the next move. The cup of my bliss had been overturned.

Five minutes passed, and then the lady made her appearance, leaning upon the arm of a noble-looking man of about my own age. I was about to ask myself, who could furnish pistols for two and coffin for one, when the lady took my hand, and looking archly up into my face, she asked— "Will you not accompany us to the Rev. Mr. Smith's residence, and see us married?"

The truth flashed upon my mind in an instant. The lady was the only daughter of wealthy parents, and they were opposed to her lover, considering him too poor, as he was a young merchant who had just set up in business. He was forbidden the house, and, as a natural consequence, the lovers planned an elopement. She was to give notice of this whereabouts by whistling the tune of "O, no, I never, &c."

To make a long story short, I accompanied them to their place of destination, and saw the lovers united in the holy bands of matrimony. The next morning I called upon the lady's parents—gradually imparted the news to them—received their forgiveness for the lovers, and saw them reconciled.—Western Emporium.

KOSUTH has not succeeded in the West as well as was anticipated; and, falling there, we presume it may now safely be said that his efforts to get up an "intervention" feeling in this country have entirely failed through, and that the "material aid" furnished does not at all equal the amount expected. The disappointment of the great Hungarian begins to manifest itself in words and actions. He will, probably, leave our shores "a wiser," if not "a sadder" man, than when he first landed on them. But the lesson will be salutary. Nor will it be taught to him alone. All Europe will see and know, that not only our government, but our people, while they deeply sympathize with every struggle made in the old world for free government, cannot, on that account, be induced "to leave their own to stand on foreign ground." The United States have "a destiny" to fulfil, too; and that is, we hope, by strict adherence to the principles and precepts of Washington, to set such an example as will induce, peacefully, all other nations to respect the rights of man.

The Presidential Vote.—The following is the relative vote on the Presidency at the last and at the next election, under the apportionment by the new census. The Southern States gain four and lose five members, making a net loss of one member; the net gain of the North is seven, of which California gives four:

Mr. McGregor, 7th street, opposite the Exchange Bank, has in store a splendid assortment of household furniture. We walked through the three stories of his warehouse the other day, and were astonished at the extent and variety of his assortment of goods, both plain and fanciful. Housekeepers, or those who intend to become such, should call and inspect his wares. Few things can be needed that he is not prepared to supply.

Mrs. Collison is daily growing in favor with the fashionable ladies of this city. Of late she can scarcely open her goods fast enough for the demand. We have heard some wise ones wondering at her rapidly increasing prosperity. There need be no wonder. She attends well to her business, and advertises freely.

T. B. Griffin, on Pennsylvania Avenue, between Ninth and Tenth streets, has a fine assortment of ladies', gentlemen's, youths', and misses' boots and shoes. For nice articles, go to Griffin's.

Louison & Co., in Browns' Buildings, have on exhibition splendid dress goods of all descriptions; also army and navy decorations, including swords, epaulets, buttons, caps, &c.

The Presidency. "Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none."—Macbeth.

The New York "Herald" says: "We have reasons for believing that Mr. Clay prefers Mr. Fillmore. In passing either to Scott or Webster—as the next Whig candidate for the Presidency. The same distinguished man has already expressed his preference of Mr. Cass as the candidate of the Democracy. All the old Whig friends of Mr. Clay also prefer Mr. Fillmore."

It is said that General Jackson made two Presidents. Mr. Clay may make one.

Laudable Benefits. The splendid patronage known as the Seven-Mile Mirror has been so liberally patronized by the citizens of Washington during the past few weeks, that its proprietor, Mr. Peavey, has given up evening, and intends devoting other evenings, to assist the charitable institutions of our city. Yesterday afternoon the St. Vincent Male Orphan Asylum realized upwards of $100 by the exhibition. On Tuesday afternoon next the Protestant Orphan Asylum takes a benefit. It gives us great pleasure, not only to record these generous offers upon the part of Mr. Peavey, but also the active sympathy of our citizens, which renders these tokens of favor substantial aid and comfort. Exhibitions are given every afternoon and evening.

Fortunes Unclaimed. A committee of the New York legislature, after an investigation into the trust funds of the Chancery Court, have reported that there is nearly a million and a half of dollars now held in trust, and that the rightful owners of nearly a million of this large sum are unknown. Whose kin were in litigation there? Is there none to speak? What are the New York attorneys about?

The First Baptist Church, Tenth Street. We yesterday stated that at this church, (whereof the Rev. Mr. Hill is pastor,) baptism would be administered on Sunday night next. We also learn that the fiftieth anniversary of this church will be commemorated on Sunday, that there will be service at 11 a. m., 8 1/2 and 7 1/2 p. m.; and that preaching may also be expected there every night during next week.

Criminal Court. The trial of John Day did not commence to-day, as was expected.

John O'zly, charged with an assault upon Cross, is now being tried. The District Attorney and Mr. Morgan for the prosecution, and Messrs. Ratcliff and Latham for the defence.
