The Baltimore Democracy are beginning to move towards the Presidency.

The Baltimore Democracy are beginning to move towards the Presidency. They have held primary meetings in all the wards, and elected delegates to the city convention, whose duty it shall be to elect delegates to the State convention, which will be empowered to elect delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

From the best informed I learn that these delegates are, with but few exceptions, favorable to the nomination of General Cass. Of this fact there can be no question. I find, however, one dissenting voice. T. Parkin Scott, a delegate elect, publicly announces in the Argus to-day, over his own signature, that he, for one, is not for Cass, but opposed to him, and took especial pains to let his sentiments be known on this matter prior to the election.

Mr. Scott is a very clever gentleman, and an active and influential Democrat. Speaking, however, as one who takes no part in politics further than to look on through the eye of independence, I must say that my friend Scott is no so adroit as I had supposed him to be. He can do no good by publicly asserting his decided opposition to the General; and if, in the course of events, that distinguished hero and statesman should be elevated to the Presidential chair, Mr. Scott cannot look for many favors.

I think it scarcely admits of a doubt that General Cass will get the vote of Maryland in the National Convention. Every indication points to this result. Next to him is Douglas.

It would be a very handsome contest to see General Cass and Mr. Fillmore in the field. The country would be safe under the administration of either. Every candidate yet spoken of would make, I have no doubt, a good President.

The Whigs are warming up, and will soon be in the field. They are full of hope, and so far as Maryland is concerned, will enter the field with energy and undaunted courage.

Mr. Fillmore will get Maryland's first vote in the Whig National Convention; of this there is no doubt. It is now very well known that our townsman, John Glenn, esq., has been nominated for the United States district judgeship of Maryland. He will fill the high position with ability, and make a most admirable judge.

The appointment gives general satisfaction. I observe that the Hon. R. M. McLane, our late Representative in Congress, has returned from California, where he has been for a year or more.

A grand lumbag was played off upon our citizens last night. They were invited to attend a grand monster prize concert, at the new Assembly Rooms, at the tune of one dollar apiece. Gold watches, diamond rings, and other glittering prizes were to be distributed to the fortunate drawers.

About fifteen hundred people were present—fairly packed in. The whole thing ended in a sort of a row. The prizes, excepting a few trifling ones, were not forthcoming. The high hopes of the audience were sadly tricked, and they returned home beautifully tricked.

Miss Julia Dean—the lovely Julia—is performing to very full houses at the Museum. Murdoch is drawing well at Holiday-street. The Front-street is also handsomely patronized. Macallister, the magician, is astounding the curious with his astonishing performances.

Our city generally is gay and lively. Many strangers are in town. Business is brisk. Flour is selling at $4.12. Red wheat, 90¢/93 cents; white wheat, 90¢/103 cents. Corn, 50¢/68 cents. Clover seed, $5.75/$6.

Provisions are firm; prices are advancing. Groceries steady. Coffee, 9¢/10 cents. Whiskey, 21¢/22 cents. Money easy.

A Sagnacious Horse. The following narrative has been communicated to us by our Baltimore correspondent, "Chesapeake," who repeats it as a story accredited in the locality where the incident is said to have occurred.

Some six years ago, in the vernal season of the year, when floods and swollen waters are most frequent, a beautiful young lady, residing in Frederick county, Maryland, had gone from home on horseback to pay one of her neighboring friends a visit. During her sojourn, a heavy shower came up. For several hours rain descended in torrents. Towards sunset the clouds passed off, leaving a beautiful cerulean sky and a balmy atmosphere.
