

The Senate did not sit to-day.

WASHINGTON:

SATURDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 27.

Office on Pennsylvania avenue, south side, between Four-and-a-half and Sixth streets.

We refer to all the pages of our paper for readable and interesting matter.

Old Bull.

Carusi's Saloon last night presented the most splendid array we ever saw within it. It was full and filled with as rich an aggregation of broadcloth, silks, satins, jewelry, beauty, intelligence and intellectuality as can in this republic be well comprehended within the limits of a hall of its proportions.

Old Bull was evidently inspired by the scene before him. He was delighted, and he made a little extended horse-hair play such feats upon some strands of catgut as would have excited the special wonder and admiration of both horse and puss, could they have been present to witness it.

We never before knew what could be done with that much-abused instrument, the violin. It laughs and weeps, exults and complains, speaks and sighs, rides the billowy ocean, encounters storms and shrieks in affright, ascends craggy mountains and shouts upon their summits, descends to shadowy vales and reposes in their groves.

We look with wonder upon the instrument, and upon the hands that operate upon it with grace and agility beyond conception, and we feel the magic influence of the spell by which he leads us whithersoever he would go. But there is another influence operating upon every spectator. It is the presence of the man!

Old Bull appears to be less than forty years old. He is tall, not thin enough to be called slender, yet lightly and gracefully formed. His temperament is triple—a blending of the bilious, nervous and sanguine; his head is good, his forehead clear and full; his eye highly expressive of kindness, good sense and intelligence; his face is exceedingly prepossessing in feature and expression; and every look, action and word appears to indicate the lofty conception of a child of nature—a true poet and a true artist.

And Old Bull is a true poet, as well as artist. "I do not," he said to us in conversation—"I do not achieve my professional performances by the sole aid of rules and prescriptions. When I am going to do well, I know it here"—pointing to his heart—"and when this speaks a consciousness of power, I never fail. This, then, is true. It is from it I derive my knowledge of a God, which I have never doubted. I never will doubt the truth my heart discovers." Is there not poetry here?

But last night, in a little extempore speech, the poetry of his nature was aptly illustrated. Bowing profoundly to the torrent of applause that rewarded his effort, he retired from the stage without perceiving the splendid bouquet that had been thrown to him by a lady sitting near the President. He instantly returned and seized the prize, then walked a pace or two forward, and, in the most easy, graceful and earnest manner, said: "In this"—presenting his violin—"there are tones—only tones—and they will die, and be forgotten; but the memory of the pure spirit that has given me this"—placing the bouquet next his heart—"shall live forever!"

The bouquet!—The beautiful bouquet was presented to Old Bull last night by JENNY BUSK, a sweet little girl who will yet do honor to the musical reputation of our country. This petite and talented vocalist is fortunate in enjoying the patronage of the most estimable family of our worthy President; and Old Bull will be none the less proud of his memento when he learns that it is the appreciative offering of a young heart glowing with aspirations to emulate his own great genius.

Lectures of Rev. Dr. Dewey. On Thursday evening next will be delivered, at the Unitarian Church, the first of a course of twelve lectures on the "Problem of Human Destiny," by the Rev. Dr. Dewey. We have authority for saying that in these lectures there is nothing that will conflict with the opinions of enlightened Christians of any denomination. The comprehensiveness of the subject chosen, the reputation of the eloquent and distinguished lecturer, and the taste of our citizens, guide us to the conclusion that a season of high enjoyment and profit is now before us. See the advertisement.

Methodist Conference. We refer the Methodist public to the advertisement in our columns announcing the intended publication of a "Daily Zion's Herald" during the approaching session of the General Conference in Boston. Presenting, as it will, a daily report of the debates and proceedings of the Conference, with interesting "personal sketches of some of its principal members and visitors," we presume few who are able will begrudge the trifling cost at which so rich a treat will be furnished. Austin Gray is the agent for this city.

Advertisements. An unusual quantity of them yesterday abridged our news and editorial space, somewhat to our gratification and somewhat to our regret; but on opening that large and excellent paper, the New York Sun, this morning, we found the editors had to restrict themselves to less than three columns. These things are only occasional; but when the occasion becomes frequent with us, our readers shall have all the profits. We will spend our profits on our business.

New Goods. We to-day commend to the attention of our readers the advertisements in our columns generally. They will find that the merchants of Washington are coming up to their duty handsomely. Refer to Claggett, Newton, May & Co.; Yerby & Miller; W. R. Riley; M. Lean & Harry; Brown; Mrs. Collison; Mrs. Moffett; E. Myers & Co.; Maxwell & Sears; G. Savage, Hall & Brother, &c., &c.

Storerooms. We are informed by a gentleman from Harper's Ferry, who arrived here this morning, that on Wednesday, from 11 until 4 o'clock, there was one of the heaviest snowstorms of the season. He also informs us that on leaving Harper's Ferry at 3 o'clock yesterday, the mountains were still white, and that the storm was severe yesterday also, accompanied with thunder and lightning.

Candles were lit throughout the market-house and elsewhere for a good part of the time from half-past seven to ten. The wind was from the north-east, thunder and lightning frequent, hail as large as marbles, and then a shower of rain somewhat saturating. April is coming!

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES. The deficiency bill having yesterday afternoon been reported to the House, the question was this morning stated on concurring in the amendments, and ordering the bill to be engrossed.

The main question having been ordered, Mr. MARSHALL, of Kentucky, moved to lay the bill upon the table; but the question was negatived—yeas 66, nays 97.

This may be regarded as an indication that the bill will pass.

Editors and Readers. The editor who never makes known his opinions is less than a cipher in any position. The editor of a party paper must make them known, and defend and propagate them. The editor of an independent paper should make them known candidly, but not press them upon his readers, nor suppress antagonistic opinions. It is thus we act, and we are gratified at the evidences we daily receive that our course is commended.

But we are sometimes misapprehended by candid and friendly persons, who inconsiderately think it impossible for an editor to express the bias of his mind and feelings without identifying himself as a partisan. Were this the case, there could be no independent press, since no independent editor can stifle his honest sentiments. Let us all understand each other on this point.

Criminal Court. The court still holds under consideration a motion, by the District Attorney, for a continuation of the case of Dr. Gardner, charged with a fraud in the settlement of the Mexican indemnity. Carlisle and Bradley for defence.

William Kingsley was found guilty of being concerned in the robbery of Purser H. Eiting, of the United States Navy, some time last month, by cutting his trunk from behind a hack whilst passing from the railroad depot to Browns' Hotel. Sentenced to two years' labor in the penitentiary.

The grand jury was discharged until Monday morning at eleven o'clock, and the petit jury until Monday at ten o'clock; to which latter hour the court adjourned.—Republic.

The Presidency. Can we not keep the parties straight? We have before us a Democratic paper in which Gen. Cass is fiercely denounced by an editor who prefers another candidate. He may swallow his words before long!

In alluding to certain Whig attacks upon Gen. Scott, the Richmond Republican well says: "Although not preferring Gen. Scott as the Whig nominee, we must protest against such injustice to a man who has faithfully served his country in the field."

We want to see a fair fight this time, and every man true to his own side. That's the way to triumph with honor!

We regret to learn from the Mobile Advertiser, of the 20th, that Charles C. Langdon, esq., the able editor of that paper, had been severely ill for several days, and was at that date but partially recovered. We trust Mr. Langdon's days may be spared, and that he may yet reach the well deserved reward of faithful and acceptable public services that has been singularly withheld from him in past times.

The Park. The property thus named, near our city, is offered for rent. It is a desirable stand for an energetic business man. See the advertisement.

Messrs. Editors: An "Honest Inquirer" published in Thursday's paper a letter asking whether the "Serious Family," played at the National Theatre on Thursday last, was not a "very funny caricature in ridicule of the religious and benevolent enterprises of the times." The play will be repeated to-night, and I invite the "Honest Inquirer" to go and see it, and he will then come to the conclusion whether it is as he supposes. M. H.

Walter Lenox, Silas Hill, and John W. Maury are mentioned as candidates for Mayor of Washington city at the election in June.

And so are J. T. Towers, A. Rothwell, and Thomas Blagden—good men and true, every soul of them.

O. for a newspaper war among them all!
