The election of General Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire, as next President of the United States, speculation is rife as to whom shall be selected as members of his Cabinet.

We have heard many suggestions in the street and in political circles on the subject, and the following names are prominently mentioned: Messrs. Buchanan, R. J. Walker, Douglass, Dodge, of Iowa, Penn, Jefferson Davis, Cobb, H. S. Foote, Dix, Allen, of Ohio, Dickinson, Ruak, Floyd, and John Van Buren.

General Cass is mentioned as Minister to England, if he accepts; and Senator Soule as Minister to France, which it is understood he will accept.

However, speculators on the subject must wait until after the next fourth of March; and then, in the language of the Virginia veteran of the press, Mr. Ritchie, "nous verrons."

Labor Saving Machinery.

A writer on the benefits machinery has conferred upon man, anticipates the day when it will perform nearly all the domestic drudgery now done by hand. It will carry hot and cold water to all parts of the house, bring coal up stairs, and carry dust down, answer the door, make the beds, clean shoes, attend to the cooking, and perform a thousand other similar offices.

The poor have worked for the rich in all times, and no otherwise could it be. It was the law of nature to win a plan for the thinkers to stand on, and firm the escape of humanity from the hell of oppression. The steam engine came and took out itself man's drudgery—process after process was turned over to it—the emancipated slaves, time amalgamated by their drudgery humbly striving with it as a blind man with his friend, whom he mistakes for a foe; but still went on the strife; drudgers disappearing, and losing themselves in humanity—a struggle that will go on till drudgery be no more.

The Philadelphia Franklin of Wednesday states that the President elect intends shortly to pass through Philadelphia on his way to Virginia, where he will spend the winter.

The performance of the "Fisherman's Dream" last evening, was graceful and appropriate. It was received with great applause, and it is one of the most chaste ballets we have ever witnessed.

Editors' Correspondence.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 9—P. M. I have scarcely had time to write you since the recent election. The warfare is now over and democracy has triumphed. Let the past go.

The American Telegraph did its part honorably, faithfully, in supporting the great Whig cause. The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Enough to know that what has been done has been done well, and with a purity of purpose. Such, I feel confident, may be said of your journal.

In the multifarious mutations of this heterogeneous world, it is not uncommon to meet with change. Times and circumstances change, and with them, men, who, like all other mutable things, change with time. It is a matter of regret that the original founder and editor of the Telegraph has been induced to participate in those changes.

The literature of politics, as most readers are aware at the present day, has greatly degenerated, and as a general thing, except where the public mind is absorbed in it, possesses but little interest for the general reader.

Such an institution ought, and I have no doubt will bring great benefit upon our city, and I trust will be eminently successful.

With great respect your obedient servant. W. W. CORCORAN.

Affairs in Georgetown.

Georgetown, Nov. 11—12 M. Mail Robbery.—A youth by the name of William Moxley, the mail carrier between Georgetown and Washington, was arrested yesterday, by officers Adams and Gross, charged with purloining from the mail, and letters containing money and drafts. He was taken before Justice Reaver, who fully committed him to jail. He was detected by a yellow man named Alfred Lee, whom he requested to cash a draft from the Commercial Bank in this place upon the Union Bank of Baltimore. It is supposed he obtained the letters by cutting larger a small hole which had been worn in the mail bag by the lock. Several letters containing money belonging to persons in this place are missing, but it is thought probable they have been misappropriated.
