INCITED TO RIOTING. Leaders of the Anarchists of Paris and Lyons Arrested.

PARIS, April 29.—Forty more anarchists, among them being an Italian who gave his name as Capriani, were arrested in this city today for attempting to create disorders by workmen.

Twelve anarchists were arrested in this city yesterday. Among those taken into custody are the Marquis Demores, his secretary, M. Mondar, and M. Prevost, secretary of the French Dressing union.

The Temps says the police discovered in the house of the Marquis Demores printed documents designed to incite workmen to disorder and found in M. Dumont's house a secret press, manifestoes urging the troops to mutiny.

PARIS, April 29.—It is reported that M. M. Naduet, Derouille and La Grotte, the noted Boulangers are now on the point of Jersey making arrangements for General Boulanger to return to France on May 1 and take part in the labor demonstration that the workmen propose to make on that day.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 29.—A repetition of the labor troubles of 1886 on the old Black road is feared. Unless the strike does not show which way the wind blows very much in the next few days, the labor troubles on the Black road, as Blue Island avenue is called, will be repeated.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 29.—The Journal says that an agreement for the resumption of work by the striking carpenters and the new houses actually have actually been reached and that the men will resume work on Friday.

and we would probably have been willing to suffer in silence if they had not cut the passenger rate between St. Louis and Kansas City, which is our bread and butter. I am naturally anxious to maintain rates and am now ready to make any agreement which will provide for a proper distribution of traffic such as that followed by the trunk lines, but I am not willing to waste time and money over make-believe contracts. The president's agreement was all right as formulated in New York, but when they took it to Chicago they cut the life out of it and it has been nothing but a rope of sand ever since."

The case of the Wichita Wholesale Grocer company vs. the Missouri Pacific Railway company will be the last jury case this term before Judge Balderston. The case involves the question as to whether the two car loads of sugar burnt at the time of the fire in the Grocer company's premises were legally delivered. The railway claims the goods were delivered Sunday at 4 o'clock.

On and after May 1 passengers by the Missouri Pacific leaving Wichita for the east on the 12:30 train will take supper at the Fifth avenue hotel in Fort Scott. Carriages will be furnished to transport the passengers back and forth, the only charge being the usual 75 cents for the meal. The wait will be fifty minutes. The west bound trains will breakfast at Fort Scott and the same facilities will be afforded the passengers.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT. On behalf of the Central W. C. T. U. we return most sincere thanks to the Y. M. C. A. audience for the testimonial to our work, so graciously given on Sabbath afternoon at the Colonial Ball lecture, amounting to $107.50. Mrs. MASON, Mrs. FIELDS, Committee.

The benevolent society of the First Presbyterian church will meet with Mrs. J. P. Burrell, 432 Riverside, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. L. J. PHILLIPS.

The ladies of the German society will hold their monthly meeting next Thursday, the 1st of May, at the residence of Mrs. Springborn, corner of Water and Gilbert streets. All members and friends of the society are cordially invited to come. By order of the president.

It is easy enough, perhaps, for us to tell what we admire, esteem and respect in a man, but to tell what we love is not so easy. Among the vast number of phoos in this world there is only a phoo who are born so. Accepting truths that is not out of the lot much better than to be a receiver of stolen goods.

Those who have once tasted the joys of humanity will tell you that it is the sweetest gift their heavenly father ever held to their lips.

A good conscience is the best friend we can have, and a bad one the worst, because it never deserts us.

Marrid life is too often like a game of checkers—the great struggle is to get into the king row.

Four makes everything and every body masters of us; it is the worst slavery there is. How common it is to lose foibles laid vividly without meaning anything; this I call boot lighting.

I say, owe no man, owing is but little better than stealing.

We are governed more by opinion than we are by conscience. This is giving up a noble prerogative, and playing a very poor second fiddle.—New York Weekly.

The Chopticks. It is a pretty sight at the beginning of a Japanese or Chinese feast to see the host help his guests to sweets, as then is displayed the best and most graceful play of the chopticks. One can take the lesson as the master of the feast daintily lifts cakes or confections and places them on the plate or paper before each guest. The Chinese chopticks are longer than the Japanese, often metal tipped and decorated, and are used again and again. Landladies carry their own silver tipped ivory chopticks to a feast, with their cloths, and carry them home again when it is over.

In the common restaurants in Chinese cities the chopticks constitute a lottery for the patrons. All the sticks are kept together in a deep, round box, and certain ones are marked on the lower end with a Chinese character or number. The ones who select those chopticks from the box are entitled to an extra dish or portion without charge. In the old city of Tin-Tin, particularly, one is half-deferred when he pees a restaurant by the rattling of the boxes of chopticks and the shrill voices of the proprietors searching the merits of their establishments at the top of their lungs.—Eliza Rubanant Seidmore in St. Nicholas.

The Thumb in Lanes. A physician in charge of a well known asylum for the insane recently said: "There is one infallible test either for the approach or the presence of insanity. If the person whose case is being examined is seen to make no use of his thumb, if he lets it stand out at right angles from the hand, and employs it neither in salutation, writing, nor any other manual exercise, you may set it down as a fact that that person's mental balance is gone. He or she may converse intelligently, may in every respect be guarding the secret of a mind diseased with the most care and caution, but the tell-tale thumb will infallibly betray the lurking madness which is concealed behind a plausible demeanor."—Philadelphia North American.

Nothing in It. The inhalation of hot air as a remedy for phthisis, having been advocated by a German doctor, has been recently tried and reported upon by another doctor in practice at St. Petersburg. The cases selected were purposely those in which the upper part of the lungs or adjacent tissues were affected. It being thought that however hot the air, it must get cooled before reaching the more remote structures. The treatment, although tried with every precaution, and over a period of many weeks, was found to have no remedial effect whatever.—Zemblaing.

Not Unique in That Respect. "What were you about to remark?" "Nothing at all, I assure you," replied Willie Washington.

"You are, I'm verily deceiving that way. I've often thought, despite that I had something to say, and discomfited affairs I said it that I hadn't."—Washington Post.

Love Is Careless. A young couple at Trenton, N. J., arranged to elope to Philadelphia and get married. They were to meet at the depot. He got there on local time, and she waited for standard, and the difference enabled her mother to appear with a big bread knife sharpened to a point and warn the young fellow out of his boots.—Detroit Free Press.

The new Duke of Aosta has the photographic hobby, but as he is worth about $6,000,000 he can afford to indulge it. They say he has long been the terror of the photographer's household on account of his pocket camera, with which he would "get them" in situations or positions rather devoid of grace and repose.

The Gap Was Gail. A man who had been eye-bashed and his head banged up entered the Third street depot the other day and asked of Officer Burton: "How many trains leave this depot in a day?" "Oh, about fifty."

"Good! Get me tickets to go on the whole line, and if there are any special rates for me in 'em, for I want to get out of this town in a hurry!"—Detroit Free Press.

Developed by Much Use. Shoe Clerk—Isn't your foot swollen? Mr. Moneybags—No. Shoe Clerk—Born that way? Mr. Moneybags—No, but I've got nine marvellous daughters. Call around and see us some evening.—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Monthly.

A Reminiscence. While the Texas veterans were holding a reunion in Austin, not long since, two venerable men who had seen each other for many years were talking about the early history of Texas, and how much better things were managed in those days than they are now.

Among the incidents of bygone days was a murder trial which took place in the days of the republic of Texas, not long after the battle of San Jacinto. A man was brought before the court charged with having murdered a neighbor, the father of a large family. The murderer himself was an unmarried man. The presiding judge, having read the indictment, told the prisoner to stand up and said to him: "Bill Jones, you have not acted right in this matter. You have deprived a good woman of her husband and made orphans of her children. If I turn you loose will you marry the widow and support the family of the deceased?"

The prisoner said that he was more than willing to do so. In fact, he had shot her husband in order that he could do that very thing.

The widow had no objection, except that she wanted a little more time to fix up for the occasion. She, however, announced that she was ready, and the judge pronounced the happy couple man and wife without any delay.—Texas Sittings.

A Great Difference. "Ah, you know my brother," said an Englishman to an American acquaintance. "Accepting truths that is not out of the lot much better than to be a receiver of stolen goods."

"No, I can't say that I do." "But there is a great difference. Our characters are totally different."

"In what way?" "Well, you see, Henry always winks his watch in the morning and I wind mine at night."—Arkansas Traveler.

Sure of It. "You ask my daughter's hand in marriage," mused the old man, as he looked the candidate over. "Yes, you sure you love her?" "I know I do."

"And can you support her on your salary?" "I can."

"You know Ellen has expensive tastes." "You let I do! She's costing me as high as $6 a week for ice cream, soda, and carnards, but that leaves $4 for rent and provisions, and I am sure we can pull through."—Detroit Free Press.

A Fair Proposition. Customer—This is the cough mixture for my grandchild? Dr. Clerk—Yes, and it costs forty cents. As you have only paid thirty, please hand over ten cents more.

Customer—I have got it, but I'll tell you what we can do. Just you take a couple of swallows, and then there will only be thirty cents' worth in the bottle.—Texas Sittings.

A Bright Copper. Policeman (to pedestrian)—Stop where you are! Pedestrian (frightened)—W—what's the matter?

Policeman—It's all right now. I just wanted to see if you could talk. A deaf and dumb bloke escaped from the asylum last night.—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Monthly.

A Hint for Him. "Do you think your father likes me, Maggie?" "I am sure he does."

"What makes you sure?" "Because it was only yesterday he asked me when you and I were going to be married."—Boston Courier.

A Natural Query. "When I'll grow up I'll be a man, won't I?" asked a little boy of his mother. "Yes, my son, but if you want to be a man you must be industrious."

"Why, mamma, do the lazy boys turn out to be women when they grow up?"—San Francisco Call.

Going It Blind. Gamin (to street peddler)—Say, mister, are you really blind? Peddler—No, I sell those cough drops for my blind brother, who stays around the corner to look out for cops.—Philadelphia Society.

Things Are Changed Now. Bank President—Do you believe that honesty is the best policy? Cashier—I do—that is, if the new extradition treaty with Canada continues in force.—New York Morning Journal.

He Took Her Advice. "They say his plainly shows that every man is known by the company he keeps." "No, they say you."

If you believe it true? And the young man at the maiden shy peep. Said she: "The true, I say. 'Tis proved on every day. The good will go, the bad will wicked go. You should go with the good; 'Tis right and proper that you should do so."

Said he: "Of course it's right, and I this very night. Accept ye, and courteous advice. 'But you, my dear, you must go with the good. For you are good and true, and kind, and also."

She sweetly smiled on him. The dim light grew more dim. And all was sweet as grandma's punks pie. And could he help but think himself a very knowing chap, and say:—Thomas Burke in Yankee Blade.

Growing Peasants in Hartford. A lady who lives on Farmington avenue has a servant who is very fond of plants and flowers. Last spring, as an experiment, she planted some peanuts. They were placed in the earth under the lee of the house, and in a spot where they would get as much sun as possible. They came up and with careful watching and very tender treatment were induced to grow quite well. Recently she went out and dug two handfuls of very excellent peanuts.—Hartford Courant.

OTHER WORLDS THAN OURS.

Discoveries Concerning Sirius That Point to That Belief.

By means of the spectroscopic a very wonderful discovery has been made respecting Sirius. Astronomers had noticed that this star was in rapid motion through space, as it was found that year by year it was changing its position in the heavens, traversing in about fifteen hundred years a space equal to the apparent diameter of the moon, at a velocity of no less than twenty miles per second. Of course, by actual observation the only motion capable of being detected would be that which was square to the line of sight, so that although Sirius appears to us to move across the heavens, he may really be traveling in a slanting direction, either toward or from us. No one would ever have expected to be able to tell whether a star was approaching or receding from us, yet even this seemingly insurmountable problem has of late years been accomplished by the spectroscopic. Dr. Huggins, our greatest authority on this subject, having identified certain lines in the spectrum of Sirius as those of hydrogen, found on comparison that these were displaced in such a manner as to indicate that the star was receding from us. It has been estimated that this recession, combined with the thwart motion of twenty miles per second, gives us the actual movement of Sirius in space a speed of about thirty-three miles per second.

These, then, constitute some of the chief items of information about Sirius at present within our knowledge.

There seems to be no reason to doubt that, in common with other stars, he has his system of planets circling round him after the manner of our own sun; and what a system! Vast as ours appears, it is dwarfed into insignificance compared with a system whose ruling orb is 5,000 times larger than that which does duty for us. There seems, also, no reason to doubt that these planets are intended to be the abode of life; it may be that at the present moment none of them present any signs of life, but I think we may safely infer without improbability that each one of these worlds has a destined period in its development during which life, similar to that which now prevails on our planet, would be in existence. What a world such a one would be, in size perhaps not inferior to that of our sun, himself a million times larger than our earth, and it may be that as this Sirius world is so vastly superior to ours in size, its inhabitants would be on a scale in proportion to its dimensions, a race of beings of such intellect and civilization compared with whom we are but savages.—Chambers's Journal.

A Student's Clever Scheme. There was a rather popular, extravagant young fellow, well known and well liked in all sets, whose popularity led him frequently into financial crisis. He was the nephew of Mr. Mortlock, the great Cambridge banker, and also of the Bishop of Ely. The relatives did all they could—paid and paid until they would pay no more, and at last desired him to take his name off the boards. This he refused to do, but adopted an unusual expedient to have his debts paid.

He hired an apple stall and a small tent, placed them exactly opposite Mr. Mortlock's bank, with the inscription in large letters on the stall: "Fruit stall kept by Mr. Mortlock, nephew of Messrs. Mortlock, bankers, and of the right reverend the Lord Bishop of Ely. No change given." He passed the day seated in the tent in a magnificent velvet-lined cloak, books on the table, beside him was a plate to receive donations, which poured in—sovereigns and half sovereigns abounded. As there was room for two in the tent, friends took it by turns to sit with him. Mr. Mortlock, the banker, could not move out or even appear at the windows without seeing a crowd, whose sympathies were all with the stallkeeper and who enjoyed the joke immensely. The result was inevitable. He had to be bought off. However, he did not remain at college; the authorities found an early excuse to get rid of him.

Almost a Swindle. "Well, I declare. It's too bad!" exclaimed a maiden of the "Seventy" Presbyterian church. "What's the matter?" "That young pastor of ours. While he was preaching on trial he never breathed a word about his being engaged, but as soon as the church called him he went right off and got married. He's a fraud, that's what he is!"—Brook.
