HARE GOD AND THE SUN.

CURIOUS INDIAN LEGEND OF HOW THE EARTH WAS FLOODED. The Hare God Starts Out to Slay the Sun Because the Latter Burned His Back. He Creates Consternation on the Way by Killing Men, Women and Animals.

Traditions of a great deluge which at one time covered the earth are found in almost all ages and all religions. It is the culmination of Rajnarok of the Norse Sagas and of Wagner's "Twilight of the Gods"...

As the Hare God slept one day the sun burned his back, and waking in wrath he set out to slay the aggressor. On the way he became hungry and took some food and when those who had planted it found that it had been stolen they set off in pursuit. The Hare God burrowed into the ground, and when his pursuers shot their arrows into the hole he turned them aside with his magic breath...

Next day he saw two men heaving rocks and chipping arrow heads from them. "Let me help you," he said, "for hot rocks can't burn me." "Would you have us think that you are a ghost?" they replied. "No, but I am a better man than you. Hold me in these rocks, and if I don't burn you next lot me do the same to you."

Next day he saw two women making water jugs of willow baskets lined with pitch, and heard one of them say, "Here comes that bad Hare God. How shall we destroy him?" "What were you saying?" asked the Hare God, coming up. "We said, 'Here comes our great enemy, our common enemy of endurance.' 'Is that all? Let me get into the water jug. Now braid the neck.' They braided the neck very small and laughed to think they had entrapped him, but when his magic breath burst his prison and overflowed with jugs about them to prove that while they held water they could not hold men and women."

Next day he met the Bear, who was digging a hole to hide in, for he had heard of the Hare God and was afraid. "Don't fear," said the Hare God. "I am not the man to hide from. How could a little fellow like me hurt so many people?" He helped the bear to dig his den, but when it was finished he hid behind a rock and as the bear thrust his head near him he launched his ball at his face and made an end of him. "I was afraid of this warrior, but now he is dead in his own den," said the Hare God, and sounding his war whoop he went on.

Next day he met the Tarantula, a knowing fellow, who had a club that would deal a fatal blow to others, but would not hurt himself. He began to groan as the Hare God came near, and cried that he had a pain, caused by an evil spirit, in his head, and asked to have it beaten out. The Hare God took the weapon and whacked soundly, but when the Tarantula shouted, "Harder," he guessed that the club was enchanted and changed it to his magic ball, which finished the Tarantula at once. "That is a blow of your own seeking," remarked the slayer. "I am on my way to kill the Sun. Now I know I can do it." And sounding his war whoop he went on.

Next day he came to the edge of the world and looked off into the space where thousands of careless people had fallen, and there he passed the night under a little tree. With the coming of the dawn he stood on the brink of the earth and the instant that the Sun appeared he flung the magic ball full in his face. The Sun was used into a thousand pieces that splattered over the earth and kindled a mighty conflagration. The Hare God crept under the tree that had sheltered him on the night before, but that was of no avail against the increasing heat. He tried to run away but the fire burned off his feet, then his feet, then his legs, then his body, so that he ran on his hands, and when his hands were burned off he walked on the stumps of his arms. At last only his head was left and that rolled along over hills and valleys until it struck a rock, where it lay until the rollers that rushed forth spread over the land, putting out the flames but creating a flood. When the deluge had subsided the Sun was congealed, and at his trial before the other gods was scolded for his conduct and condemned to travel the world across the sky every day by the same trail—Brooklyn Eagle.

A BIRD'S QUEER HIDING PLACE. Miss Eva McFadden, of Oxford, had an adventure with a rat one day recently. She took a loaf of bread from the pantry, and when about to cut it a rat jumped out of it and scurried around until she finally set it on the floor and endeavored to eat a hole into the loaf and ensconced itself therein.—Philadelphia Ledger.

WHEELMAN MURPHY. He Recently Broke the Record in a Twenty-Five-Mile Road Race. The second annual twenty-five-mile hand-cycling road race was run recently over the Irvington Mill race course in Orange, N. J. The course is a five-mile stretch of road, of fine surface but very hilly. There were ninety-six entries, of which sixty-five came to the mark, and of these fifty-one finished. Although the winner started up in W. F. Murphy, of Philadelphia, Century Wheelman, the real contest was between W. F. Murphy, W. Van Wagner and E. C. Anderson. All three have made low manifestations...

Escaped Her Mind!

The Arcade interviewed a lady this week who went to a certain dry goods store and bought a bill of goods. A close comparison of the prices paid and the prices she could have gotten at the Arcade disclosed the fact that the Arcade is the cheapest place in Wichita to buy dry goods. The lady paid $1 50 for a silk umbrella the Arcade sells for $1.35. The lady paid 65 cents for a lady's lisle thread vest the Arcade sells for 50 cents. She paid 35 cents for black hose the Arcade sells for 25 cents. She paid 7 1/2 cents for yard wide muslin the Arcade sells for 6 cents. She paid $1 a yard for a dress pattern the Arcade only asks 88c, and when these facts were presented to her and her loss figured out her only excuse was that it had escaped her mind, "but next time I will know better." You cannot afford to pass the ARCADE.

PHILADELPHIA'S (P. L.) BACKSTOP. I. Cross is the efficient backstop of the Philadelphia club, Players' League. Besides being a fine catcher, he is a good batter and has been making his services very valuable to the club. He was reserved by the Athletics but jumped his contract in Philadelphia.

GENERAL ATHLETIC NOTES. The field sports of Hamline college of Minneapolis, brought out a first rate all round athlete named J. S. Edwards. He won the standing broad jump with 37 feet 9 inches, the running broad jump with 17 feet 9 inches, throwing 15 pound hammer, 55 feet 6 inches, running high jump, 4 feet 10 inches, standing 100, step and jump, 29 feet, running 100, step and jump, 35 feet 9 inches. There were eleven other events on the programme. Edwards is a well built student with plenty of stamina.

George R. Gray's recent sweeping change in the shot putting records proves that he is rapidly becoming a power in his favorite game. His performance of 46 feet with the 16 pound shot speaks for itself, and it is doubtful if Charles Carrio or John D. McPherson, the two best professionals in America, can give him many inches in any weight of shot.

Arthur Kaiser, who won second place to John Kaiser in the pole vault at the Pacific coast championships, is continuing his practice with the hope of clearing 10 feet. His recent performance was 9 feet. The best Pacific coast record is 9 feet 4 1/2 inches, and if Kaiser improves in proportion to his form previous to the championships the mark he has set will not be out of his reach.

Those two great pole vaulters of England, E. L. Stone and Tom Bay, have met several times recently and show by their performance that they are still very evenly matched. Bay has taken on each state the championship game last year and now weighs over 200 pounds in athletic clothes. Stone still remains at about 154 pounds. Both have done 11 feet 7 inches.

Word from England is that Charles G. Prentis, the American amateur carman who is now in England training for the Heavy weights, is heavily backed to win the struggle against Nicholas Gardner. The average loss of weight of the eight oared crew of the Boston Athletic association in training for its recent race with a crew from Bowdoin college was 215 pounds.

Edward Haman has returned to Toronto, and will now go into special training for the great regatta during the latter part of July at Detroit. He says he is in the best of health, and expects soon to be in condition to hold his own with any carman.
