GALVESTON'S JUBILEE. GALVESTON, Nov. 20, '90. To the Editor of the Eagle: The Galveston deep water jubilee was inaugurated on the morning of the 18th by a grand excursion on the Steamship Comal of the Mallory Steamship line at 9 a. m. to the jetties and outer harbor. At 2 p. m. an oyster roast and lunch was prepared near the Beach hotel, at which all the visitors to the city participated. Ex-Governor Lubbock, of Texas, as champion oyster eater of the day, was presented with the leather medal and in a fitting speech acknowledged the compliment. Senator Hoeggen, Congressman Stewart and Moore of Texas, made short complimentary speeches. Mayors Gardner, of Cleveland, O., and Clement, of Wichita, were introduced and spoke in glowing terms of the hospitality of the Galveston people.

The houses given below are representative ones in their line, and thoroughly reliable. They are furnished thus for ready reference for the South generally, as well as for city and suburban buyers. Dealers and inquirers should correspond direct with names given.

THE LATEST IN JEWELS. Tortoise shell hairpins set with diamonds and turquoise are fashionable. A Parisian novelty in way of hairpins consists of gold balls united by chains, an idea taken from the peasantry. An attractive ornament for the collar is a dagger of amber lined tortoise shell with the hilt incrustated with gems. Watches run small to medium in size and there is a marked tendency toward decorative cases. Jewels and colored enamels are favorite modes of ornamentation. The butterfly spreads wings of rare lace this season, on which scintillate small gems to correspond or harmonize with those of greater size that form the body of the insect. A pretty bracelet seen was composed of two gold chains, and had as a fastening two little ovals, with plumage in pearls and diamond beads, their blinking eyes being single rubies. A pretty conceit in the way of a jeweled pin, to be worn either as a brooch or ornament in the hair, consists of a small gold dagger set with diamonds at the hilt and point. A chain of interlinked pearls and diamonds is fastened at either side. -Jeweler's Circular.

LANDING THE SHORE END. An Interesting Description of How a Cable Is Secured on Land. We steamed off and anchored as near inshore as we could get, opposite the place intended for the landing place. All was now activity on board. No sooner were we at anchor than a couple of boats were dispatched for the beach, with a party of men and the necessary tools and implements for use on shore. On board both picking up and paying out gear were being made ready for action, as they both played their part in landing the shore end: huge coils of rope and a number of collapsed air balloons made their appearance from below. These balloons were inflated with air to their full diameter of three or four feet, and the quarter deck of the Dalmatian began to assume the appearance of a giant's toy shop. Meanwhile the shore party had firmly anchored the beach two large "spider sheaves" on skeleton iron pulleys. These were placed some two or three hundred yards apart, forming two angles of a parallelogram, of which the bow and stern sheaves of the ship made the other two.

The Decline of "Robinson Crusoe." The schoolboy of today, it is said, is rather bored than otherwise by a perusal of "Robinson Crusoe." M. J. J. Simon declares that the Nineteenth century had worn its novels either bloodthirsty or sentimental. This taste "Robinson Crusoe" fails to gratify. It has no heroism, and the blood shed in its pages is but a thimbleful compared with the gallons of gore poured out by the pens of modern romancers.

When the Wheelbarrow Was Invented. Now a writer in the French scientific journal La Nature calls attention to an old book printed in 1555, in which is a curious wood engraving that represents a single wheeled harrow pushed along by a laborer. Another plate of the same book shows a trimmy car running upon rails. This puts the use of the wheelbarrow back more than a hundred years earlier than the time of Pascal.

W. I. Harris Says There Is Lots of It in the Players' League.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

The Capitalists of the New York, Brooklyn and Cleveland (P. L.) Clubs Hold the Key to the Situation—Col. McAlpin's Suggestion.

The key to the situation in the baseball muddle is certainly held by the capitalists of the New York, Brooklyn and Cleveland Players' league clubs. These capitalists also own very nearly a controlling interest in the Cincinnati club, and it is claimed could succeed in bringing that organization into line with any plan which they might agree upon. Whether they really can do this remains to be seen. The Players' league capitalists in Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago appear to be determined to continue the warfare of 1890 another season, and if they can hold the Players' league together and control it the fight will go on, perhaps not so directly as conflicting forces would make it, but there will be no peace of a nature likely to benefit the national game itself.

No matter how it may appear on the surface, there is a wide breach between the capitalists of the Players' league. Four clubs are apparently unalterably opposed to consideration and in favor of perpetuating the Players' league. The clubs that have been doing all in their power to bring about a lasting peace which may insure harmony among all factions and insure the future prosperity of the game. The Buffalo club has no capitalists behind it, so far as is known, and it cuts a small figure in the main. The action of the Cincinnati club, owing to the uncertainty about the feelings of the different owners, is equally undecided. The men who desire peace are trying to force consolidation, and those who are against it are trying to force the peacekeepers to remain in the Players' league and the clubs remain in a state of strife. The more both sides scheme and maneuver the further apart they get and the harder it is for them to reconcile their differences of opinion.

When I say that the New York people hold the key to the situation I mean simply that if they hold out and carry out their plans, and the other clubs remain obstinate, the baseball war will be practically settled, for although the Players' league may continue in existence it is not likely to be a very formidable rival to the National league without a club in New York and with the money who have been backing the New York, Brooklyn and Cleveland (P. L.) clubs in the National league that organization will have little to worry it.

Messrs. McAlpin, Talcott, Robinson and their allies are satisfied that there is no room for two clubs in New York, Brooklyn and Cleveland, and they are well satisfied that the people demand that this senseless warfare over the control of professional baseball shall end, and that its continuance will ruin not only all concerned financially, but the professional game itself, so far as it is to be considered as a profitable investment.

If they favor what is known as the "rule or ruin" policy, and to a certain extent that is what their insistence upon peace means, they are in no way behind their opponents in this regard. To use a sporting expression "it is horse and horse" and with the money who have been backing the New York, Brooklyn and Cleveland (P. L.) clubs in the National league that organization will have little to worry it. On the other hand, the men opposed to the consolidation are in favor of a policy which is equally worthy of being called "rule or ruin," for it is a continuance of a strife which is the deliberate opinion of seven-tenths of the baseball managers of the country will ruin the game, and if this opinion is the correct one it is well all concerned to the extent of their vested interests therein.

The New York men have no disposition to let others make the money they have already invested a dead loss, and so far as I can judge by many conversations with them I think that when it becomes evident that a general consolidation is possible and that money can be raised for their club membership in the Players' league and consolidate their clubs with the National league clubs. This opinion applies merely to New York and Brooklyn. Whether Al Johnson will follow them in case matters reach such a crisis is a question of some doubt.

Col. McAlpin made one offer to the Players' league, and I think he is still ready to stand by it. He told his associates that when capital engaged in a fight with capital all interested should bear equally the burdens of that fight, and he proposed it was decided to fight to the death that each club should put up $25,000, as a fund from which all losses should be made good. He even offered to make the amount $50,000 for each club. This offer was not accepted. Col. McAlpin's theory is a business one, and will commend itself to business men everywhere as being the only proper way to carry out war between capitalists.

The capitalists who are opposed to any move which threatens the existence of the Players' league, charge that the New York men and those who aid them are traitors to the cause, and that while they can have no objection if the money of the Cincinnati and Talcott want to lay down, they consider that if those gentlemen wanted to quit they should have gone about it in a different way. They think the proper thing for the New York men to have done would have been to notify them quietly and allow them to have purchased the club, and not do the business in a way that would "throw down" their general partners in the enterprise. They say that they will not allow the New York men to get out unless they sell out to them, and they propose to enforce this claim, with the bond signed by all parties to the league was organized. Under this bond they claim they can while the New York men remain in the Players' league. Against this the New York men say they will not sell out, and they will be satisfied.

Turf Notes. Roy Wilkes, the champion pacer, has gone lame. Tatal and Barnes are at present two of the most popular riders on eastern tracks. A colt by Eagle Bird, 2:31, three weeks after being put into harness trotted a quarter without a break, at Lexington, in 3:35 seconds. James G. Laid & Son, of Beatrice, Neb., have purchased of Nat. Brewer, of Burlington, Ia., the training station Lobosco, bearing 2:41, for $10,000. At Lexington, Ky., Oct. 13, 1890, Alerton trotted a mile in 2:15, but on the following day was defeated by McDool in the contest for the $5,000 stallion stakes. McDool's time was 2:15.

Capt. Brown's De Muth, by Ten Brock and Belle of Narrana, was recently sold to McLeese & Co. for $14,000. Buddies brought $5,000, Reporter $4,100, Long Run $4,000 and Detweiler $3,500. The yearling colt Victor Phallos, by Phallos, has been sold to Felix Flanagan, of Lawrence, R. I., for $5,000, and the trotter Van Buren Wilkes to Thomas Welch, of Pawpaw, Mich., for $5,000. A sporting authority says: The difference between a 2:10 horse and a 2:14 horse is 200 feet or 25-70 inches. This is almost a distance in a race of nine beats. What folly, then, to talk about the 2:14 horse and the 2:10 horse being in the same class!

When the British vice consul at Los Angeles, Cal., suggests in his report that it would be to the advantage of his government to buy horses in California for the British army he called down upon his head a perfect torrent of abuse from the British press. Clara C., engaged by mare by Imp. Brigadier, out of Nannie Mae, while being exercised, suddenly fell to the ground, and upon examination it was found that her spinal column was broken, resulting in her death. She was owned by W. L. Cassidy & Co. and valued at $3,000. The St. Louis pool rooms are reported to have lost $100,000 this present season. The bookies claim that there is a close in that city which makes betting on horse races a regular business, and has this style of speculation reduced almost to a science. The consequence is that the bookmakers have been hit severely and heavily. A saddle made for a woman who wears a bifurcated skirt to her knees and proposes to ride an Indian pony in a class in that city which makes betting on horse races a regular business, and has this style of speculation reduced almost to a science. The consequence is that the bookmakers have been hit severely and heavily.

Some of our readers' questions, in this view they are satisfied by Judge Bacon, of New York, who says that there is nothing in it which can prevent them from leaving the Players' league should they decide to do so. How the Players' league can continue successfully with its backers antagonized in this way is a problem. It would seem that the organization would have more chances for success by letting such unwilling partners go and forming a new circuit. W. I. Harris.
