BITTING BROS.

Why do two suits which are both made of the same material differ so much in appearance that, at a casual glance one looks as though it were made of finer fabrics than the other? It is simply a matter of fine finishing. In the one case justice is done to the material and to the purchaser; in the other it isn't. The conscientious workman is willing to have his product turned inside out; the slipshod workman makes the surface cover a multitude of sins. We believe that what is worth doing is worth doing well, and that is why our clothing will bear the closest scrutiny. If you want something that you can rely on, try our Clay Worsted suits in Prince Albert and cutaways. Our stock of hot weather coats and vests from 50c to the finest is very complete; have them for very large men, up to 50in size. Special good values in outing and night shirts. Sorry we couldn't wait on all our customers yesterday; try and come early on Saturdays. Special bargains in straw hats and summer clothing this week.

THE THIRD PARTY.

TWO VIEWS OF THE NEW POLITICAL ORGANIZATION.

The Chairman of the National Committee Discusses the Future of the Movement.

Possible Candidates for the Nomination for President—The Chances of the Man from Kansas With the Whiskers.

The Present Leader of the Prohibitionists Disgusted With the Outcome of the Conference—The Idea of Making the Government a Pawbroker Characterized as Idiocy. Another Whisky Party Added to the List—Notes.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 23.—Representative Laubeneck, chairman of the national committee of the new party, has returned home. In an interesting conference the work of the convention at Cincinnati, he said: "There are several things in the platform adopted at Cincinnati which I do not like, but on the whole accept it as a reasonably good basis for the third party movement. Individually I should have been very glad if the sub-treasury scheme had been left out of the platform altogether. I have never endorsed that scheme. As a matter of fact the former organization in Illinois have never had any occasion to endorse the sub-treasury plan. The demand for it has come mostly from the south. There may be more merit in the scheme than I heretofore thought, but I would rather it had been left out of the platform."

"It was unavoidable, of course, that we should have a good many cracks and cranks of all kinds in the convention. There has never, to my knowledge, in the history of this country been a third party movement that has not at the outset attracted most of the cranks of the country. It has been more or less true of all parties. As a party grows and drops the visionary and impractical men from its ranks. "I was well pleased with the spirit of the Cincinnati convention, and my impression is that the third party movement is stronger today than it has ever been before. Of course, I am not predicting a victory next year. I am not over-enthusiastic, for I have seen too many times in the past. I believe that the third party movement will eventually succeed. I believe that the election of 1892 will show a vast growth in the party all over the country. There will be state tickets in the field this year in four states—Iowa, Ohio, Kentucky and Mississippi. In Ohio our great object is to beat John Sherman. In my opinion Sherman, more than any other man, is responsible for the financial policy of this government, and we will do all we can to defeat him. As a way and rather than a Democrat to the United States senate, if thereby we can cause the defeat of John Sherman."

"Who, in your opinion, will be the nominee of the People's party for president in 1892?" "It is rather too early to make any definite predictions in that direction. I expect in the congress next December will develop and bring to the attention of the country the stronger of the third party men that will occupy seats in the national congress. I expect to see Gen. Weaver, Ignatius Donnelly, Wilkin, Kansas; Davis, of Texas, and several others I might mention, are all possibilities. Peter is a very conservative man, a very safe man—too conservative, I think, for the convention over which he presided at Cincinnati. He is undoubtedly an able man and a ready speaker. The next congress will very likely make him a formidable candidate for president of the United States. Donnelly is also an able man and I believe will be a very strong candidate. Wilkin is both popular and man of great ability."

"At the present time it looks to me as if Peter, if he is not chosen, will be broken within the next year, stands a very good chance of getting the presidential nomination of the People's party of the United States. If he is broken he will be a senator of Illinois, he would undoubtedly have been the strongest candidate the third party could name. But as he was defeated his nomination is probably now out of the question. All efforts possible will be made to consolidate the People's party before the opening of the campaign in 1892. If the convention is held in Cincinnati the 20th of February does not result in the perfection of a third party and the naming of a national ticket, the national committee of which I am chairman, will call a convention to be held not later than the 1st of the following June, and will put a ticket in the field."

THE SAINT DISMISTED.
St. Louis, May 23.—Ex-Governor St. John, of Kansas, in a talk with a reporter in this city with reference to the third party conference, among other things, said: "I want to attend the much-talked-of third party and reform convention simply to look on. I watched the proceedings closely, and I must say that as a reform convention it is the biggest failure I ever saw. All meritorious reforms were neglected, and the only thing that was discussed was the old party conventions was its visionary sub-treasury scheme, which has no foundation either in justice or common sense. I watched the whole proceedings of class legislation. It would afford no relief whatever to the very poor, the class that need relief most. The idea of making the government a pawbroker is such a scheme would bankrupt any government."

As far as the rejection of prohibition is concerned I have this to say: The convention ignored it entirely, and whenever it was mentioned it was vociferously howled down amid the greatest confusion. No other party has ever made more substantial concessions to the liquor interests than the one which just met at Cincinnati under the guise of reform. Really it could not be called a convention. It was simply a mass-meeting and not a very large one at that. Kansas had 41 delegates, so-called Ohio had 31, and the great state of New York had as many as two. Ohio and Kansas together had a majority of all the delegates, so called. There were seventeen states and territories without representation. Ought such a thing as that be called a national convention? The failure to express even cordial sympathy for the cause of temperance or morality will drive thousands out of the movement into the ranks of the prohibition party. It is simply the birth of a third whisky party. "I admit that the convention had quite a large number of good men in it, but they were powerless to accomplish anything at all. As a national convention and a reform movement it was a flat failure. He said that by ignoring prohibition the third party would cause a large increase of the prohibition vote in Kansas for the reason that no party could be successful in that state who did not declare against the liquor traffic, which took more money

COMMENCEMENT AT CHENEY.
CHENEY, Kan., May 23.—(Special.)—The commencement exercises of the public schools were held in the Reformed church on Friday evening, May 23, in the presence of a large and appreciative audience. Superintendent Pence and Prof. Kemp, of Wichita, were expected to attend but did not come. However, an excellent time was enjoyed by all, even if these eminent gentlemen did not attend. After the invocation by Rev. Mr. Stinson, the choir rendered the song of "School Days" very effectively, as any one who has heard the choir sing already know, as Cheney can boast of some splendid singers, and they always sing well.

Miss Mary Brown then read an essay on "The Advancement of Education in America," tracing the progress of education from the founding of the schools in Virginia in 1658 to the present time, ending with an appeal to all for earnest, persistent efforts in the way of education.

Miss Minnie Curriton read an essay entitled "The Influence of Our Surroundings on Our Moral Nature," which showed careful thought and preparation. She spoke of the influence of the beauties of nature, the influence of our occupations, and, particularly, of the influence of good books, saying that there is no excuse for any person's not being surrounded by literature of the best quality in these days of abundant leisure.

Miss Ida Hessel, the valedictorian, read an essay on "A Town in Southern Kansas," tracing the history of Cheney. This was a very humorous essay, ridiculing the habit of terming every little town, destitute of street lamps, sidewalks, etc., a city. Of course this latter was not directed at Cheney.

Mr. Maxwell made a short, humorous address, which was well received, ending by introducing G. A. Christon, who presented the diploma with a few remarks complimenting the graduates and thanking the people for coming out and taking such an interest in educational affairs.

Herbert Barton made a few remarks encouraging the young ladies in their work, telling them to continue striving for an education. He said he was proud of Kansas and of Sedgewick county in their prominence in educational matters, after which the choir sang "Consider the Lilies," and the people were dismissed.

A BLACK EYE FOR SALOONS.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 23.—Judge Field, of the circuit court of this county, rendered a very important decision, based on the dram shop act of 1890, this morning. The case is an injunction proceeding brought by an adjoining property owner to close a saloon. The judge made permanent the injunction restraining the saloon-keeper from conducting the dram shop business. The county and city licensees of the saloon-keeper were declared void on several grounds, among which are the failure to secure a petition for the issuance of a license signed by a majority of the citizens living in the block in which the saloon is located; the failure to indemnify the city against Sunday opening, selling to habitual drunkards, and permitting gambling and music in the saloon; because the amount of the bond was left blank, whereas the statute requires it to be $2,000; and a failure to incorporate in the bond the provision in the latter part of section 4374 of the revised statutes. The decision holds that a saloon license may be attacked both collaterally and directly; also that a saloon running without a license is a nuisance, and that an injunction is the proper proceeding. This is said to be the first case in the state where an injunction has been resorted to in order to close a saloon, and the decision is based on like proceedings which have been sustained to close beer houses. The case has been appealed, if the decision should be sustained by the appellate court, every saloon in this city would be affected and every saloon license void.

A FATAL MISTAKE.
DENVER, Neb., May 23.—While a party of vigilantes who had captured a cattle-thief named McAiver near here were bringing the prisoner to town last night, they mistook another party of vigilantes. The slight was very dark, and each party took the other for thieves. Fire was opened by both sides, and before the mistake was discovered Judge Aiken, county treasurer, and McAiver were killed. No arrests have been made.
