WHICH ONE? One of us, dear— But one— Will sit by a bed with a marvelous face And clasp a hand, Growing cold as it feels for the spirit land— Darling, which one?

One of us, dear— But one— Will stand by the other's coffin pier And look and weep, While those marble lips straighten and keep— Darling, which one?

One of us, dear— But one— Fate will drop a tear, And homeward go, The anguish of an unshared grief to know— Darling, which one?

Water That Let a Customer. It is fun to watch the pineapple man. He is a generous fellow, and the slabs of pine that he cuts off and retails for a nickel are thick and sweet, and his trade is large.

Water That Let a Customer. A Wall street banker stops and buys a piece; an editor refreshes his inner man with a slab of pine; a street gamblers wheedles a nickel slice out of the old man for a penny. An old, decrepit woman, with a cheek as hard as that of the statue of Liberty, comes up and asks him for a slice. The pineapple man looks at her a minute, subtracts a thin slice from the heap and gives it to the beggar, and she goes on her way rejoicing.

Water That Let a Customer. At last the curbside merchant gets out of his dinner pail and eats a hearty meal. It never occurs to him to flavor it with some of his insidious stock in trade, and he goes despondent.

Water That Let a Customer. When he is through he takes out a very small tin pail of water and sprinkles some of it upon the fruit to keep it from getting dry. Then he carefully washes his hands in the pail, and then, oh, heaven! he carefully covers up the pail, as if water were precious under the shadow of the postoffice and with the free drinking fountain not thirty feet away!

Water That Let a Customer. Thank you, not today! I was going to treat myself to pines, but something has suddenly stolen my appetite away.—New York Herald.

The Neglect of the Groom. A person about to be married has sent in a complaint for public consideration against the constant neglect which the bridegroom receives from the press, from the friends of the contracting parties and often from their immediate families.

The Neglect of the Groom. All interest centers in the bride, whose dress is described in voluminous detail, whose bouquet is not considered beneath mention, and whose face, blushing beneath her veil, is the most pleasing attraction of the wedding.

The Neglect of the Groom. The bridesmaids, lovely girls, fluttering in dainty colors, are worth more than a passing notice. The ushers, the guests, and even the organist, are spoken of in an appreciative manner. Sometimes there is consideration shown to the sexton of the church. But where is the groom? There are columns of descriptions of weddings in the daily press, and in these columns the personality of the groom is passed over without a glimmer of apology.

The Neglect of the Groom. How does the groom dress? What is his choice of flower? Do his gloves fit? Are his shoes of patent leather? Nobody knows these interesting details, although they are undoubtedly important to the neglected man. His presence is supposed, from occasional mention of the "young couple," and he probably may be seen skulking around the corner of the palpit; but he is evidently in a hurry for the completion of the matter. It is not his occasion. Unfortunate man, he is the chief and notable instance of "Hamlet" left out of Hamlet.—Boston Journal.

WASHINGTON, August 7.—The secretary of the treasury has been advised that a bold attempt will be made during the present week to rob the treasury by a strong determined band of men organized for that purpose. The plan is to start fires in various parts of the city for the purpose of diverting the attention of the police, and then to overpower the treasury watchmen and loot the money vaults. The information was given in a letter signed by "King of the Tramps," who explained his knowledge of the plot by the statement that he was the leader of the band. Condon, commanding the revenue cutter Fish, reports to the treasury department, under date of Omaha, July 9, that on the 6th inst., while cruising to the northward of Chumash Pass for the purpose of capturing vessels in pursuit of seals not to enter Bering sea, he fell in with the British schooner, E. J. Marvin, Capt. McDougall, master, of Victoria, B. C., having on board twenty-three men and all the implements necessary for sealing. Upon being hailed, Capt. McDougall said that he was sealing, and was bound by the United States steamer Thetis and furnished with a copy of the president's proclamation and the necessary papers for sealing. The master not to try to enter Bering sea for the purpose of sealing. On that occasion the master entered that he had no seal-skins on board. He refused to show the vessel's register, the fact that he had been sealing was reported by the officers as "unusual." On an examination by the officers of the boat, two fresh seals were found on board. The circumstances of the case were considered sufficient by the vessel's crew, arms, skins, papers, etc., were subsequently turned over to H. B. M. ship Nymph.

A Soft Answer. Francois is an excellent servant, and always sits up for his master. One night Viscount de S—, Francois' master, came home from his club at 3 o'clock in the morning. He found his faithful valet in the bedroom, reclining fast asleep on the sofa near the fire. Instead of waking him, he quietly undressed and got into bed. Ten minutes afterward Francois awoke and exclaimed, "Pair à o'clock, and the best hasn't come in yet!" The viscount raised his head and said, in a very gentle voice: "You may go to bed, Francois, the best has got back to the lair."—L'Univers.
