CHURCHES OF NORWAY.

OLD WOODEN ONES STANDING AFTER SEVEN CENTURIES.

How the Ancient Pines of the Northern Lands are Preserved in Sacred Edifices Hundreds of Years of Age—Description of Some of the Buildings.

The "Stavekirke," or ancient wooden churches of Norway, are in their way almost unique among the ecclesiastical buildings of Europe. True, they have not the historical interest which attaches to many other buildings, but yet I think they deserve more notice than has hitherto been taken of them, both on account of their age and the curious and beautiful carving to be found on them, and also that they date from a period when the men of the north were still the terror of many a European coast.

It is not a little remarkable to find at the present day wooden buildings from five to seven hundred years old, consisting, in the main perhaps, of the same timbers, in those with which they had been originally constructed. Here and there, of course, they have been renewed, but still there is much which we may regard as original, to attest both the skill of the builders and the solidity and weather resisting powers of the pine trees of medieval Norway, which for so many centuries have withstood the fierce frosts of an almost arctic winter, as well as the scorching rays of the summer sun.

The endurance of the structure is due in no small degree to the peculiar manner in which the timbers were placed. That method, known as the "stave" method, is a network, a word derived from the verb at stave (to raise), and a reusurk building is one in which the timbers are raised, or placed perpendicularly, and not laid horizontally, as in later work. "Stav" is of course the same as our word staff, or stake, and the stavekirke is called in Norwegian bogstav, or beech wood, at Laurvik. If one may judge from the massive beams to be found in many of the stavekirke, the ancient pine forests of Norway must have supplied many trees like those tall pines which Milton tells us were fit—

THE MATERIAL. The material used in the construction of these churches is invariably pine. Oak is only found in the south of Norway, and the beech in but one place, the mountain bogstav, or beech wood, at Laurvik. SKIN DARK AS COAL

Eczema Afflicts a Well-Known Gentleman. Pliable Subject to Look Upon. Suffered Terribly. Whole Body Covered.

Given up by San Francisco Doctors. Might Have Saved $600, as He Was Cured for $8 by Cuticura Remedies.

I have many times studied over what CUTICURA has done for me. It restored me to good health and happiness, for before I tried CUTICURA I was given up by all the doctors in San Francisco, but if I had only taken CUTICURA sooner, I should certainly have saved from $50 to $60. I was a most pitiable subject to look upon, with eczema and other terrible skin diseases, as dark as coal from my head up to my knees on both legs, and after that it broke out all over my body, but after using half a dozen boxes of CUTICURA, I was perfectly restored to good health, and have enjoyed the same ever since (which is for ever yours).
