THE DALTON GANG. THE BODIES OF THE DEAD ROBBERS BURIED AT COFFEYVILLE.

The Dying Bandit's Brother Arrives at His Bedside—Cashier Ayres Thought to Have a Chance for Recovery.

Allie Ogee Eludes His Pursuers in the Territory—The Survivor of the Raiding Party Badly Wounded—The Bankers of the Country Called Upon to Raise a Fund for the Families of the Citizens Killed in the Fight.

Ogee's Record. Notes.

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Oct. 6.—The excitement over yesterday's tragedy, in which four of the Dalton gang were killed, continues today. Emmett Dalton still lives, and although the physicians say that he can hardly recover, he seems to be doing well. There is some talk of bringing him to Coffeyville, but it is believed that the excitement will subside before that outrage can be perpetrated.

The bodies of the four dead bandits—Robert and Gratton Dalton, "Texas Jack" Moore and Jim McArthur—were buried today in a lot owned by the Daltons in the little cemetery here. There were no funeral services. The bodies were taken to Coffeyville by a private funeral home, and were buried in the cemetery here. The mother of the Daltons was telegraphed yesterday, and this morning a message was received from Bill, the eldest of the boys, stating that he would come on here. Bill has never been with the boys on their raids. He is a farmer, living with his mother at present near Kingfisher, O. T.

Emmett Dalton is wounded in the right hip and right arm by Winchester bullets, and in his back and neck by a revolver bullet. The latter being the shot which knocked him off his horse. He had reached his horse and mounted, with the bag of money from the First National bank on his arm, when, seeing Bob fall, he turned back to assist him. It was then that he received the fire which brought him down.

The money secured from the First National bank amounted to $30,240, and that from the Cotton bank $8,000. The money was turned over to the bankers here. It is now thought that only five men took part in the robbery, and if this be true the entire gang was exterminated. The body of Lucius Baldwin was taken to Burlington, Kan., this morning by his mother. That of Charles Brown will be sent to Harley, S. D., where his wife is. The funeral services for Marshall Connelly and George Cubbin were held this afternoon. The remains of Connelly will be buried at Independence, Kan. Cashier Ayres' wound is not so serious as first thought, and unless blood poisoning sets in he will soon recover.

THE OGGEE FAMILY. TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 6.—Allie Ogee, the only member of the Dalton gang who escaped at Coffeyville yesterday, was a native of this (Shawnee) county, and is well known here. He is a son of John I. Ogee, a citizen of Pottawatomie county, by his second wife, and consequently a half brother to the large and wealthy Ogee family now living near Silver Lake. He is one fourth Indian. His parents never got along well, and he was consequently left Ogee a short time before the boy was born. They lived in Topeka awhile, then went to Lawrence, and from there to Coffeyville, where his father was raised in the family of Dr. Wood. He came back to Shawnee county four years ago, and his oldest half brother, Robert Ogee, raised the question of his inheritance of the property rights in his father's estate. B. M. Curtis, now police judge of Topeka, and candidate for county attorney, was appointed guardian of the boy. The case was heard before A. B. Quanten, then probate judge, who decided in the boy's favor. He left here two years ago, being then about 18 years of age, taking $500, all that remained of the expenses of the suit had been paid, and went to the Indian territory. He seemed to be an orderly and quiet boy, and it was he had the Indian characteristic of a roving disposition.

COLE YOUNGER. STILLWATER, Minn., Oct. 6.—A reporter who today called on Judge Younger, who Cole Younger as to the relationship existing between him and the members of the notorious Dalton gang. Cole said that he was not sure of any relationship, but he continued: "I think a third cousin of mine married a Dalton in Kansas many years ago, and I know absolutely nothing about the Kentucky family. I cannot see where anyone got the authority to say that because these men were related to Frank and Jesse James they were related to me. That statement is absurd. I am not related to the James boys, and previous to my coming to this prison there existed a bitter hatred between Jesse James and myself."

WILLIAM DALTON. GUTHRIE, O. T., Oct. 6.—William Dalton, a brother of the famous outlaws, passed through Guthrie today on his way to Coffeyville, Kan., to take charge of the dead bodies of his brothers, and to talk to the wounded brother, who, it is believed, desired to talk to him before he died. William Dalton is an ex-member of the California legislature. He refused to talk much, but showed by his actions that his heart was with his unfortunate brothers.

THE DYING BANDIT. COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Oct. 6.—At 11 o'clock tonight Emmett Dalton was still alive. He suffers great agony from his wounds, and the physician attending him does not think that he will survive another day. William Dalton arrived this evening from his home in Oklahoma and is in constant attendance upon his brother. Cashier Ayres is resting easy tonight. He will probably recover.

THE PARTY THAT STARTED IN PURSUIT OF ALLIE OGGEE returned this morning having lost track of the fugitive bandit in the wild country below here. Ogee is badly wounded, and it is believed that he will turn up in some Oklahoma town where he will probably go to get medical treatment.

AT MIDNIGHT Emmett Dalton was slowly sinking, and was no longer likely to survive beyond two or three hours. His brother remains constantly at his bedside, and attends him as faithfully and tenderly as if the dying bandit were an uncle or boy instead of a hardened ruffian.

A FUND PROPOSED. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 6.—The following telegram explains itself: "To William E. Green, secretary American Bank Association, New York. 'Why not call upon all members of the American Bank Association to contribute each $5 to $10 to a fund for the families of the men shot down in defending the banks at Coffeyville, Kan., in the Dalton bank robbery raid?'"

SEDAWA, Mo., Oct. 6.—James C. Thompson, cashier of the First National bank, proposes that a fund be raised for the families of the Coffeyville citizens who lost their lives yesterday in the battle with the Dalton gang. He says that the bankers of the country especially the southwest owe a debt of gratitude to the defenders of Coffeyville banks, which can be graciously acknowledged and paid by subscription. He proposes that each bank subscribe $500 and has pledged his bank for that amount. He has started a correspondence on the matter.

MRS. HARRISON'S CONDITION. NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—A Washington dispatch to a morning paper says that a cloud of despondency has gathered about the executive mansion; for the president, his family and his intimate friends now realize that Mrs. Harrison is beyond recovery. They have fought against that belief for many weeks past, and the physicians have sought to hold out hope, but the truth has at last been faced, and they feel convinced now that no earthly skill can bring the sufferer back to health. The mental and physical strain on the president during the past two months has been great and has left its mark upon him. Mr. Harrison is a most devoted man. His devotion to his family is one of the beautiful features of his life. Yesterday, at the cabinet meeting, Mr. Harrison, for the first time, spoke of the great affliction which is haunting over him. His advisers counsel him to resign, and he has been too deeply moved to discuss affairs of state under such trying circumstances.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Aside from the usual change characteristic of consumptive cases, there has been no particular alteration in the condition of Mrs. Harrison since she was brought to Washington four weeks ago. Although she is critically ill and in a condition where a new complication might speedily prove fatal, her case is not absolutely hopeless. There is a possibility of her recovering, but it is a dangerous condition, and has often so far recovered to enjoy their health for years. The president and his family and friends are clinging to the hope that Mrs. Harrison may prove an exception to the rule. The great danger to be feared is a reproduction of fluid in the chest cavity, which might gather in twenty-four hours and prove fatal. Mrs. Harrison's right lung is entirely consolidated, so that she has no use of it whatever. The left lung is not involved.

Although anxious for prolonged life, the patient does not exhibit that cheerfulness and hopefulness that is usually so apparent when needed. The best and most simple and gentle remedy is the Syrup of Figs manufactured by the California Fig Syrup company.

ANIMALS' VIEW OF MEN. They Fear the Savage More Than the Civilized Being. The savage man, who has generally been first in contact with animals, is usually a hunter, and therefore an object of dislike to the other hunting animals, and of dread to the hunted. But civilized man, with his supply of bread and beef, is not necessarily a hunter, and it is just conceivable that he might be content to leave the animal in a newly discovered country unmolested, and descend, when not better employed, to watch their attitude toward himself, says the Popular Science Monthly.

The impossible island in "The Swiss Family Robinson," in which half the animals of the two hemispheres were collected, would be an ideal place for such an experiment. But, unfortunately, uninhabited islands seldom contain more than a few species, and those generally birds or sea beasts; and in newly discovered game regions savage man has generally been before us with his arrow, spear and pitfall.

Some instances of the first contact of animals with man have, however, been preserved in the accounts of the early voyages collected by Hakluyt and others, though the hungry navigators were generally more intent on victualing their ships with the unsuspecting beasts and birds, or on noting those which would be useful commodities for "trafficking," than in cultivating friendly relations with the animal inhabitants of the newly discovered islands.

How Gold is Shipped. Shipments of gold from New York to Europe are ordinarily made in very strong hardwood kegs, each keg containing fifty thousand dollars. At each end of the keg four holes are bored through the projecting ends of the staves, and through these holes pieces of red tape are drawn, meeting in the center, where a large wax seal is applied, bearing the stamp of the house which makes the shipment. A material cause of loss in this handling of specie is the rubbing of the coin or bars one upon another; and for this reason twenty dollar gold pieces are preferred to ten or five dollar pieces, the surface exposed to abrasion being less. Each keg contains ten canvas bags, and in each bag is five thousand dollars. In the United States assay office the rubbing of the gold bars upon each other is prevented by packing them in sawdust.

Coffee in Guatemala. Guatemalans believe that there is no better coffee in the world than that raised on their own plantations, and Central American coffee has of late years acquired a high reputation in the markets of the world. It is usual for wealthy Guatemalans to make more of good coffee in traveling by taking along a store of their own. A long glass tube, several inches in diameter, but tapering to a tunnel at one end, is filled with ground coffee and through the mess is poured cold water.
