Mr. Ingalls' Opinion. From the Atchison Globe. John J. Ingalls was telephoned this afternoon, and asked what he thought of the election. "I don't know anything about it," replied Mr. Ingalls. To a reporter this morning, he simply said: "It is extraordinary."

Interruptions Helpful. In any of the fragments are more than the whole. In the life and work of Jesus Christ what fascinated are the interruptions. He would be going somewhere and very busy and someone would stop him. Some contention with a sick servant; some woman with a dead child; some blind Bartimaeus by the roadside; when he was at dinner with Simon He is interrupted by a girl of the street. His main journey becomes a series of halts. Now He is talking with Zaccheus and now with the Samaritan woman at the well, and now with a young man rich and sorry. These interruptions are more interesting than the journey.
