HONORED BY CLEVELAND.

Gen. Stornberg, the New Surgeon General of the Army. He Occupies a High Position Among His Brother Officers and Is Well Known to the Medical Profession of Europe and America. President Cleveland recently appointed Lieut. Col. George M. Stornberg to succeed Gen. Charles Sutherland as surgeon general of the United States army. The post is the highest one in the medical department of the army, and carries with it the rank of brigadier general. Gen. Stornberg is a native of New York, having been born June 8, 1838. He was appointed assistant surgeon, with the rank of first lieutenant, from New York, May 28, 1861, and assigned to duty with Gen. Sykes' command, Army of the Potomac. Dr. Stornberg served with Gen. Sykes until August, 1862, distinguishing himself on the field of Bull Run, and gaining the commendation of his commander at the battle of Gaines Mill, the engagement at Turkey Bridge and the conflict at Manassas Hill. After doing a similar duty for a short time at Port-mouth Grove, R. I., he was, says Harper's Weekly, with Gen. Banks' expedition, and assistant to the medical director in the department of the gulf, until January, 1864. He was then stationed at Columbus, O., and later in charge of the United States general hospital at Cleveland. From July, 1865, to April, 1866, he was with the Thirtieth United States infantry at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. He received the rank of captain in May, 1866, and until October, 1877, was post surgeon at Fort Hancock, Kan., when he rendered valuable service during the cholera epidemic. Dr. Stornberg was then stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., and during

YOU GET STRONG.

If you're a tired-out, "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to restore women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy? The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. For ulcerations, displacements, bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that's safe, and permanent cures.

FARJEON, THE AUTHOR.

The Most Active and Vigorous of England's Literary Men. B. L. Farjeon, the celebrated English novelist, is a tiny man—short of stature, thin of body, dressed after the careless fashion of the literary man, with the tendency to drop into dreamland of the born story teller. But there is such life, such electricity, such quicksilver in his blood that he can't remain still for a moment; and when you think you have pinned him down into a seat and he takes his place on it as though he were going to be glued to it for half an hour—he presto! he is up again and has taken three laps around the room as though he were competing in a long distance championship match. Everything about the man speaks of his extraordinary vivacity of mind and body. The eyes—small, brown, twinkling—are never really at rest. When he wants to tell you a thing he grabs you by the collar and wags his finger at you as though you were a naughty schoolboy. Every word is illustrated by a gesture; he has an eternal cigar, which alternates every five minutes between his lips and his fingers—as an aid to imagination in the one case, as a convenient pointer to a gesture in the other; and the cigar has a companion in a match box which is constantly opened and shut in the unending effort to talk with the rapidity of an Italian improvisator and to enjoy the tranquil joy of a smoke. And Farjeon's character is pretty much what you gather from this restlessness and vitality, says T. P. O'Connor, who interviewed him recently. Amid all the hard work there is none who works as he does. One of the first to discover the magnificent possibilities and the miraculous helpfulness of the typewriter, he has a whole storehouse of these "aids to reflection" and composition. "I have in my time," says Mr. O'Connor, "had as many as three typewriters; but Farjeon has five—all within the narrow compass of his house in South Hampstead, while mine have been scattered between my house, my office and the house of commons. I have done some hard work and some long stretches in my time; but this little man, who looks almost as if you could blow him off your hand, not infrequently sits down at his desk at 10 in the morning and does not rise till 3:30 on the following morning, not even going to the dining-room—for at such stretches he lives on soup and tobacco."

AROUND THE GLOBE.

MAY 29 was celebrated in many parts of Great Britain as "Royal Oak day," it being the anniversary of the restoration of Charles Stuart to the throne. A romantic tale connects Paris with Berlin. It is used for postal purposes, and makes it possible for a letter mailed in Paris to be delivered in Berlin in thirty-five minutes. The London Optician says that great men are usually blue-eyed, and instances Shakespeare, Socrates, Locke, Bacon, Milton, Goethe, Franklin, Napoleon, Bismarck, Gladstone, Huxley, Virchow and Renan. The Russians still retain their old barbaric love of splendor, and when the empress shows herself she is a vision of unmatched gorgeousness. She is one of the few monarchs of Europe who still make a practice of wearing a crown on great occasions. There are said to be but four hundred and fifty words in the Chinese language, all monosyllabic. Those with different accents and intonations, are expanded into twelve hundred and fifty words. Each word has many different meanings, some as many as forty. The largest pie ever made was baked at Denley Dale, England, for the queen's jubilee. It spoiled, however, so that when it was opened the stench was awful. The next week another was made, of six hundred and twenty-two pounds of flour, thirteen hundred pounds of potatoes, one heifer, two calves and two sheep. AS THE WORLD GOES ROUND. A POSITION of the bones of a mastodon were recently unearthed on a ranch on Snake river, in Idaho. The frame of the mastodon is said to cover a surface of one hundred feet, and some of the bones measure three feet square. An omnibus has been started in Glasgow furnished with pneumatic tires, which are protected from injury by sharp stones or glass by canvas and wire-woven netting. There is no jolting or jarring, and the noise is reduced to a minimum. A CANCER ate away part of the upper lip of a man in Shelbyville, Ind. A bright surgeon has supplied him with a rubber lip, adorned with an artistic mustache, which seems so natural that only a close observer would note that the whole thing is artificial. A FOUR-WHEELED wagon whose motive power is supplied by a benzine engine has been satisfactorily tested in Germany. It is intended to carry passengers through the city streets or country roads, and can be run at the rate of half a cent a mile. The wagon and engine can be made for five hundred dollars. The speed is as high as fifteen miles an hour. Proposed Substitutes for the Caps and Helmets Now in Use. The war department of the United States now has under consideration a change in the headgear of the soldiers and officers to replace the forage cap and helmet now worn in the service. INFANTRY CAP. CAVALRY BUSBY. The Detroit Free Press publishes cuts of the proposed innovation. The forage cap, intended for all branches of the army, is what is known as the German pattern, and it is claimed for it that the visor, being turned down instead of being straight, gives more protection to the eyes. The top is soft and pliable and has the advantage of keeping the head cool. Many officers favor its adoption, while not a few look upon it with disfavour, owing to the fact that it is almost the exact counterpart in shape, but, of course, not in material, of those so frequently met with on the heads of emigrants from the Fatherland. The other design, known as the busby, is for the cavalry and is exactly similar to that worn by the Light Horse Hussars of the English army. It is made of black astrakhan cloth and will weigh, complete, about ten ounces. It also has a sloping visor, but very small. The cut shown is for officers. For enlisted men it will be the same minus the pompon or top ornament. Every cavalry officer at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., twenty in all, favors its adoption. In stationary fashion tends to the use of oblong envelopes, instead of square ones. The paper folds but once. Extraordinary colors, such as deep orange, willow green and mauve are in vogue. "Grape teeth" are a novelty hailing from Australia. The fruit of the vine, piled in baskets, wreathed with vine leaves, is the leading refreshment. It is a trifle early here for grapes, but "strawberry teas" would not come amiss.

SURGEON GENERAL GEORGE M. STORNBURG.

the Indian campaign was in the field from April, 1890, to 1870. A year later, when at Fort Columbus, New York harbor, he did good work during the yellow fever epidemic. After twelve months' service at Fort Warren, Boston harbor, he was ordered to the department of the gulf in July, 1872, and was acting medical director at New Orleans for a short time. He then was assigned to duty as post surgeon at Fort Barrancas, Fla., and served through two epidemics of yellow fever, where he proved to be most efficient and valuable in fighting the scourge. On December 1, 1875, Dr. Stornberg was promoted to be major and surgeon, and, after a short absence from duty on sick-leave, was made attending surgeon at the headquarters of the department of the Columbia, May to September, 1878. From that time until May, 1879, he was post surgeon at Fort Walla Walla, Wash., and saw further duty in the field during the Nez Percés campaign in 1877, when he was mentioned for his "heroic conduct." Dr. Stornberg had previously earned such a reputation as an authority on yellow fever that he was made a member and secretary of the Havana yellow fever commission of the national board of health in 1878, and continued on the national board until 1881. He then went to the department of California, and was post surgeon at Fort Mason, Cal., until May, 1884. Afterwards on duty at Baltimore, Md., and in charge of medical provyding department, San Francisco, in February, 1892, being made lieutenant colonel and deputy surgeon general, January, 1891. Since the early part of 1892 until the present time Dr. Stornberg was attending surgeon at New York city. Last year, during the cholera scare, he was appointed consulting bacteriologist to the health officer of the port of New York, in compliance with special request. Previous to that time he was on special duty as delegate from the United States to the international sanitary conference of Rome, and detailed also to make investigations in Brazil, Mexico and Cuba relating to the etiology and prevention of yellow fever. Gen. Stornberg is a member and fellow of many medical and scientific societies in various parts of the world, and has published a number of works and valuable treatises upon medical and scientific subjects. He occupies a high position among his brother officers, and is well known to the medical profession. A San Francisco Bathhouse. There is a marvelous structure in process of construction on the cliffs overlooking the bay of San Francisco. It is a bathhouse of base of mammoth proportions, having six bathing-tanks filled with water at varying temperatures from 100 to 120 degrees. The capacity of one million gallons of water. No pumping is necessary, as the building is situated in a horseshoe cove, the conformation of which makes the flow of water from the ocean continuous. In the calmest weather all the tanks can be filled with water in fifty minutes. The interior will be a vast amphitheater under a glass roof, with tiers of seats to accommodate thousands of spectators. Space for four hundred luxurious dressing-rooms on four stories is found beneath the seats. There is an elegant clubroom on every floor, and elevators carry patrons from story to story. Hamlet. Oh! Hamlet in your newly tomb, Where loving friends have laid you, You'd turn clean over if you knew Now certain actors played you. —Detroit Free Press. Pleasant for Their Successors. "You understand, Betty," said the mistress, "that we are to move out of this house the first of next month." "Yes, ma'am," all the dirt into the registers for the last three weeks, mum." —Chicago Tribune.
