The Thanksgiving Feast

To which we invite you does not consist of turkey with cranberry sauce and other "entries" that usually compose the "menu" of today's spread, and of which, perhaps, you partake too freely, and afterwards repent, but is one of BARGAINS in men's wear, the possession of which gives you enjoyment for more than a day, and the longer they last the more thankful you become. We return thanks because of our ability to meet present condition. By reducing expenses and chopping off profits, we are enabled to retain not only your confidence, but your trade, and through your entire satisfaction with our goods and methods, the trade of many of your friends and acquaintances. You will not only enjoy your turkey more, but will be in a more thankful frame of mind, if you come to us this morning and purchase that suit, overcoat or whatever of furnishings you lack to complete your winter wardrobe.

You will have nothing to repent if you accept our invitation—Come.

THE FATALISTIC TURK.

How He Braves Death at the Holy City of His Faith. The account given by the pilgrims of the way in which cholera attacked them is terrible in its grim fatalities, says the London Spectator. June 24, two days before the Courban Bairam, upward of one hundred thousand Mussulmans, Arabs, Turks and Indians had gathered on this sacred mount to hear the solemn address which is delivered to those who wish to become hadji. Many of these people were in the most wretched condition, and some had not even a loaf of bread.

It was here that the disease appears to have struck them like the blast of a poisoned wind. When next day the onward movement to the holy city began it was found that the ground was strewn like a battlefield with the dead and dying, and so terribly virulent was the type of infection thus engendered that it was, says the account, impossible for any living creature to approach the place.

The authorities seem, however, to have realized that something must be done, and that the bodies could not be left to rot. Accordingly, a Turkish regiment was sent to perform the work of burial and to remove any of the pilgrims who still lived. Never did troops in the heat of battle receive a command more fraught with peril. The risk, as it proved, was literally greater than that of facing machine guns, and the moral effect was far more terrible. There are ten men who will face death to one who will face death by cholera. Yet these Turkish soldiers, with the fatalistic courage of their race, obeyed as they obeyed at Plana.

The battalion, when it reached the mount, was seven hundred strong. After the work had been done two hundred men only remained to go back to the coast. Five hundred of the soldiers had died of cholera. That is, nearly three-quarters of the regiment perished in the work of burial. No doubt English troops would have been upheld by many considerations—by religious feeling and by the instinct of mercy, and they would, moreover, have been well fed.

The Turkish troops probably felt the sense of pity very little, and their officers were almost certainly men with anything but a high sense of conduct. They acted merely from the most naked sense of the duty of not finching at a command. It was an order given from afar and from above, and that and faith are to them all one.

"The subject for discussion at the next meeting of the Village Debating society is 'What is Truth?'" "Indeed? Well, that is a question that should be easily answered."

TO BE A NEW NATION.

Delegates from the Central American Republics Will Meet.

Barrios and Ezetas as Rivals.—The British Minister Accused for Fostering Discord—Five Governments in the Project.

TO BE A NEW NATION. To make a new nation out of many is not an easy thing, as the five republics of Central America are learning to their cost. For the first time in many months the representatives of Guatemala, San Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica, whose meetings were long, irregularly held in the old capitol building at San Jose in Guatemala, have been able to reach something like an understanding. At the final conferences, which come very shortly and continue for some weeks, the new confederate Republic of Central America, comprising the five independent states of this revolution-racked region, is expected to assume something like constitutional shape.

It was partly on this account that Gen. J. M. Reyna Barrios, president of Guatemala, not long ago proclaimed himself dictator of his native land, dismissed the congress then in session and ordered a new election immediately. His ambition is declared to be the chief magistracy of the new nation, an ambition which Dr. Bonilla, elected provisional president of Honduras last year, has done his best to thwart and to which the new Honduran leader, Gen. Vasquez, has never been friendly. Poncivado Leiva was accused of intriguing, during his official career as president of Honduras, with the same end in view. After his deposition he led the federal movement, as it is styled in Central America. Costa Rica has long been in favor of confederation. Jose Joaquin Rodriguez, elected president of that republic in 1890, had a dispute with the congress concerning the sending of delegates to San Jose, and he proclaimed himself dictator last year. He is also accused of a longing to make himself head of the new state. At the time Dr. Roberto Sacaiza undertook to govern Nicaragua a few years ago he was known to be very favorable to the scheme of a consolidation of Central American states. When his authority was practically taken away, several weeks since, the delegates from that little republic to the convention at San Jose were not chosen. Now, however, comes word that the new congress of Nicaragua is pledged to ratify the constitution under the provisions of which these republics will amalgamate. This fact will have decided influence upon the fortunes of Gen. Carlos Ezeta, San Salvador's president. He had never come out in favor of the federative measure, but his partisans say that should it be passed he must be made ruler of the Central American countries. Thus there are already candidates for the still uncreated presidency and their clashing arms are alleged to be the only obstructions in the way of the new constitution.

GEN. CARLOS EZETA.

The latter is about what might be expected from Central American statesmen. It provides for the inevitable president with a term of four years. Senor D. Salinas, well known as the vice president of the Nicaraguan senate, advocated a six year term, for the chief magistracy and ineligibility to reelection, and this proviso may be embodied into the instrument. There is to be a senate composed of four members from each of the high contracting states, with a term of six years each. The popular branch of congress is to be chosen by universal suffrage. The judicial power will be created about as we have it in our own country. Of course when the delegates get together this winter there may be various changes before the constitution as revised goes to the legislative bodies of the respective republics for ratification. It will have to run the gauntlet of opposition, and when it has at last become the organic law elections must be held under it.

DR. BONILLA.

Meanwhile preparations for the assembling of the delegates are active-making. Sig. J. Leiza, who is the most influential Costa Rican that ever represented his country in Salvador, has already formally extended an invitation to President Duran, of the San Salvadoran chamber of deputies, to visit the Guatemalan capital. In the latter place Vice President L. M. Flores has been formally receiving such of the foreign representatives as have been arriving. Secretary de Leon, head of the Guatemalan department of state, has never looked enthusiastically upon the constitutional convention's labors. He does not like the merging of so many nationalities into one. The representative of Honduras in Guatemala, Alessandro Rodero, was specially charged to convert the secretary of state to the confederate side. What success he has met with the coming sessions will show. The Costa Ricans, notably Secretary M. V. Jimenez, of the department of justice, Gen. Iglesias, of the war department, and Dr. Valverde, of the treasury, have all along supported confederations. Opposed to them were A. Zuniga, Dr. Bemdand and Gen. C. F. Alvarado, who, during Leiva's term as president of Honduras, were an influential trio, but who now have not the same influence. Bishop E. F. Velez has lately come out in favor of a strong central government for the five republics, and the strength of the Roman Catholic church in these countries would thus seem to be in line with the plan.

The stately capitol buildings at San Jose and at Guatemala will thus be come the theater of most complicated intrigues before many weeks. If Barrios should feel that the Ezetas are outwitting him in the congress (which by the way numbers some forty members with deliberative authority only) his only way to balk their schemes will be by uncompromisingly opposing confederation. But his own power is now trembling in the balance, and such Guatemalan leaders as President Salazar of the supreme court and Gen. Mendizabal have come out in direct antagonism to the president. Guatemala is the most important of the countries involved, and whatever she does can scarcely fail to decide the fate of the federation scheme. For about twenty-six years this nation formed part of what was known as the Confederation of Central America, and the prosperity of every country which was included in that union has declined since its dissolution. Revolutions have come regularly. Commerce and trade no longer flourish.

Senor Jose Vargas, of Costa Rica, will, it is announced, proceed to Guatemala in the interests of federation, and during the congress is to urge hostility to the United States of America. This ardent gentleman was very bitter against our country during the Chilean imbroglio. He accuses us of being selfish and of asserting the Monroe doctrine from unworthy motives. His adherents in the Costa Rican chamber of deputies (a few of whom will go to San Jose this winter to vote for the new federal constitution) are likewise enemies of the North American eagle. Indeed, it is curious that our republic has manifested very little interest in the efforts of the five Central American governments to form a united nation.

The drift of opinion is that Gen. Barrios will be made first president of the new republic. One of the Ezetas would probably be given the second place. But the trouble is that these rival leaders are so anxious for power that one would very unwillingly play second fiddle to the other. This fact has given rise to a moderate party, pledged to republish all present laws and elect non-military officials under the federal constitution when it has finally been made the law of the land. In Honduras and in San Salvador, where the people are suffering from revolutionary adventures, this policy finds most favor. But these states are both of minor importance. It is just forty years since both went out of the central federation and in the line of retributive justice that both are now clamoring to get back into it.

Her beauty makes the sad rejoice, All eyes that watch their merry way; Yet somewhat plaintive is the voice Of our beloved Sister Gray.

She greets, like one long used to sorrow, The perfume and the blush of May; "So blue a sky means rain to-morrow," Says, mournfully, kind Sister Gray.

Our neighbor's rosy boys delight All eyes that watch their merry play; "Oh! how so rich conceals a blight," Signs dear, pathetic Sister Gray.

Of grace a light, of strength a tower, Was our lamented Elder Day; "A saintly soul, but lacking power At funerals," thought Sister Gray.

May mercy grant that out of the key She do not find some other key; "And that her angel robes may be A perfect fit for Sister Gray."

Why always view the seamy side? Why chasing ever motes astray? "The well we're faultless, who can hide Your single fault, my dear Sister Gray."—Jennie Colton, in N. Y. Independent.

ANIMAL FERTILIZERS.

A New Way to Fertilize Plants with Electricity. A dead animal of any kind, fish, fowl or beast, buried near the roots of a fruit or other tree, will cause a wonderful growth, says Foster's Weather Bureau. The animal substance does not pass into the vegetable, but being a natural and a powerful generator of electricity, increases the current that passes from the atmosphere to the earth, and thereby a larger quantity of support is drawn from the atmosphere. You can grow a good crop of potatoes on a brick pavement if moisture is retained and the potato vines are connected with moist earth by copper wires.

Commercial fertilizers do not enrich the soil, do not add anything to it that is of value. The object sought in these fertilizers is to put the soil into a condition that will enable it to conduct electricity. The electrical current passes into the vegetable through its leaves, carrying with it the gross matter that goes to build up the vegetable cells, and after that matter is deposited in the vegetable the electric current must have a conductor through which to pass to the earth. Worn-out soils are poor conductors, and the acids used in the commercial fertilizers, which are little more than acids and sand, pulverize the dead soil and enliven it for a short time. These acid fertilizers are largely used in the New England states and in the cotton countries east of the Mississippi. But few people in the upper Mississippi and the Missouri valleys ever saw a commercial fertilizer. If science can find something that will render worn-out soil a good conductor it will save millions of dollars annually that is now paid out for commercial fertilizers.
