WILLIE ON A GRID

BRECKINRIDGE'S OPPONENTS SERVE HIM UP ON TOAST.

Ex-Congressman Jere Wilson Takes Him in Hand and Cross Examines Him on the Subject of That Memorable Drive—Breck Finds the Toasting Process airksome and Becomes Frustrated A Sultry Day For Him.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Great expectations have been focused upon the cross-examination of Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge by ex-Congressman Jere Wilson, particularly here in Washington, where the abilities of both men are appreciated. The expectations began to be realized after the noon recess today when the colonel was delivered over into the hands of his opponent. He had continued his story of the intrigue with Madeline Pollard through the morning, entering many and reiterated denials of various statements made by her, and relating his own version of the interview with the Washington chief of police, and of the correspondence between himself and the plaintiff. He had been testifying for nearly two court days when his direct testimony was finished, and although Mr. Wilson pelted him with questions all the afternoon, the cross-examination seemed to have but just begun. It had been expected that the colonel would be requested to reconcile his position as a church man and moralist with his course of conduct in this respect, but he was not asked to do so. The examination took the direction from the start. The first time the defendant has shown marked embarrassment during the trial was when an envelope was handed him with the request that he read the direct on and the contents, which he did reluctantly, because of the presence of Miss Pollard in February, 1893, requesting the honor of her presence at a reception to be given in honor of Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge at the Norwegian institute, and the Norwood institute is the most exclusive and fashionable seminary for young ladies in Washington.

Wilson's cross-examination which Judge Wilson clung to throughout; was that the same standard of morality should be demanded of men as of women. Breckinridge at first denied, but then admitted the statement that he had written letters to Madeline Pollard in 1893. Mr. Wilson sprang some very pointed questions which indicated that he has in reserve testimony to show that the matter from Kentucky through the type-writing at the capital. Then for the first time the defendant seemed to lose his temper and made most strenuous denials. He testified that he had written letters in order, is a Miss Louise Lowell, now a clerk in the treasury department. The carriage ride of August, 1892, when Breckinridge made his first formal proposal of marriage to her, was the first subject Colonel Breckinridge was asked about when he resumed the stand today. He denied positively that any such ride had taken place, or that he had made any proposal. Continuing, he said: "I never asked plaintiff to give up any child; I never knew plaintiff to give up any child; I never knew the plaintiff had a living child; I never knew she was engaged to marry to the plaintiff before the death of my late wife."

Denying the conversation which Miss Pollard said took place in the Hoffman house April 30th he said he had not been absent for a moment from the side of his wife that day, as "she had not been married for eight hours."

Mr. Butterworth called his attention again to the interview in the office of Major Moore. "My recollection is that it was a much shorter visit than Major Moore has said it was and excited; the young woman did not deliver the letter to a woman, but referring to the second visit made by himself and Miss Pollard to Major Moore's office, Colonel Breckinridge said it was not true that she had been intimate with Major Moore that Breckinridge was the author of Miss Pollard's pregnancy. Miss Pollard demanded, he said further, that he be the only name to be put in the intimate with her. He emphatically and angrily declined to make such a statement, declaring to her that nobody could say he seduced her. "Did you," asked Mr. Butterworth, "have any improper relations with the plaintiff after the 29th of April, 1892?" (This was the date of the secret marriage in New York to Mrs. Wing Breckinridge's present wife.) "I did not," emphatically replied the colonel. "I am absolutely false. I never had improper intercourse with plaintiff after the 29th of April."

This concluded Breckinridge's direct examination. By further questioning, Mr. Wilson elicited the information that the colonel, since he had delivered a speech to a women's society in Nashville, and had been presented a basket of flowers. He denied that he had had any such present in his possession, and said that he had not seen the basket since he had said, and Mr. Wilson would not permit. "Are you a member of the Masonic fraternity?" "Yes."

"You knew Miss Pollard's father was a Mason?" "I did not. I knew he was an Odd Fellow."

pass upon," remarked Judge Wilson, and then asked him if he had not, after two or three months of this correspondence, cautioned his dear sister Louise not to leave the letters around, as curious persons might search bureau drawers? "I never, under any circumstances, wrote such letters," replied the colonel, and then he tapped the witness box sharply as he asserted: "If any such letter is in existence it is a forgery, and if notes of any such, they are forgery also."

More arguments from Messrs. Butterworth and Shelby against the right of Judge Wilson to cut into the witness, line upon line, regarding the substance of a letter not in evidence, to which Mr. Wilson replied that the defendant had denied ever having written to Miss Pollard he has a right to test his memory on that point, and added: "I will say frankly to you, that the man referred to here and I don't mind telling the court upon what evidence I base questions."

"Now, my brother Wilson is getting into argument, as he always does," said Mr. Butterworth. "If you object, I will drop it," said Mr. Wilson. "Now, that is not a fair way of putting it, I insist," continued Mr. Butterworth, "to say that to judge."

Miss Pollard had been really said, only when we met there was some sort of definite look, something more than a formal recognition.

"Nothing had been said about your meeting the night before?" "Nothing had been said about your meeting the night before?" "Nothing had been said about your meeting the night before?"

After going over again in the visit to the house of Sarah Goss Sunday, the lawyer asked if Mr. Breckinridge had taken Miss Pollard to the house of Mrs. Rose in Cincinnati, when they went there. He replied: "I want to be distinctly understood, I want to be distinctly understood, I want to be distinctly understood."

This was in October. The colonel had known Mrs. Rose in Louisville when she kept a cigar store, but not, "in an intimate way," and under circumstances involving another person; to his capacity as attorney.

"I had met her on the street. We had shaken hands and she knew I knew certain things about her which I had obtained professionally, and she gave me her card."

"When was that?" "When was that?" "When was that?"

"About eight months ago." "About eight months ago." "About eight months ago."

"And you kept her card all that time?" "No, I know her name and looked it up in the directory."

SEVEN MEN KILLED

REPLETE AND BLOODY BATTLE BETWEEN INDIANS AND WHITES

Trouble Over Trespassing Herds Causes a Clash Between Cattle-men and Red Men Resulting in a Fight in Which Two Whites and Five Indians Are Killed—Troops Now on the Road to Protect the Settlers.

EL RENO, O. T., April 2.—Information was brought to this city this evening of a desperate fight between Indians and white settlers in the Cheyenne country west of here in which two white men and five Indians were killed. The trouble originated over the white men grazing cattle on the Indians' land contrary to the wishes of the latter. Information of the battle was brought to the agency at Burlington and Fort Reno and the troops were immediately placed under marching orders. One troop of cavalry and an infantry company departed for the scene this evening. The Indians are not usually unruly, but they are in a position to cause much trouble. The cause is thickly settled and if they take a notion they have ample opportunity to destroy life and property.

OFFICERS VS. OUTLAWS.

U. S. Marshal Carr Encounters Dalton's Gang—Capt and Two Desperadoes Wounded.

GUTHRIE, April 2.—A dispatch to United States Marshal Nix, this evening states that United States Marshal Carr met Bill Dalton and several of his gang of outlaws near Sacred Heart Mission in the Pottawatomie reservation and a pitched battle with Winchester and revolvers ensued. Bill Dalton and one of his men named George Thorn were fatally wounded, but the others escaped. Deputy Marshal Carr also received dangerous wounds. It was believed the Daltons were preparing for a raid on the banks at Burlington and Guthrie. Bill Dalton is the oldest of the notorious Dalton brothers and is said to have been a member of the California legislature.

BACKBONE AND MUSCLE.

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 2.—[Special.]—Again we have lovely spring weather; and our city is full of "backbone and muscle," i. e., farmers with wagon loads of wheat, oats, hay, corn, horse, butter, eggs, and early vegetables, such as asparagus, lettuce, onions, etc. The political condition is boiling over, and such handshaking by the candidates, with the dear and much beloved voters? How do you know these gentlemen love the voter—black or white, mixed or unmixed; so he can vote. Both parties claim tally by a small majority, tomorrow will tell who is in the saddle.

Residence building has taken a fresh start. Some very handsome dwelling houses are being erected in our city, and the prospect of property is bright all over the city, i. e., freshly painted houses, new and handsome fences, lovely flower walks in front and side yards, etc.

We still hope for a steady, and shall hope, and trust, this will be our good fortune, until congress adjourns, more anon.

CAUGHT ON THE CROSSING.

PONCA CITY, O. T., April 2, 1894.—[Special.]—W. E. Varney, a drayman of this place, was very badly if not fatally injured about noon today at the railroad station. The thorough freight train from the north struck his dray on the crossing as he was crossing the track in south of the yards. He was driving a mule and a horse and both were killed. Mr. Varney's injuries are very severe, but how serious cannot yet be told. The approaching train was held from view at the crossing by freight cars standing in the yards.

AN OKLAHOMA SENSATION.

Special Dispatch to the Daily Eagle. OKLAHOMA CITY, April 2.—A few days since McMaisters filed a complaint before the probate court alleging a number of things against the late Senator Patrick Quinn. The Times-Journal contained matter also reflecting upon the court. The case came to trial this afternoon, and E. E. Brown, assistant to the probate court, read from the Times-Journal contained matter also reflecting upon the court. The case came to trial this afternoon, and E. E. Brown, assistant to the probate court, read from the Times-Journal contained matter also reflecting upon the court.

FIRE AT MENNESSEE.

HENNESSEE, O. T., April 2.—[Special.]—A little after midnight yesterday morning the barn belonging to E. E. Davis, Hennessee's auctioneer and news dealer, caught fire and burned with all its contents, except three horses and a buggy. Hennessee's barn was a considerable one in getting him out. The loss amounts to about $2,000.

AFFIRMED THE LOWER COURT.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.—The United States district court of appeals today affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of Geo J. Novak vs. The Union Pacific Railway company wherein Novak, a brakeman, recovered $50 damages for injuries received in a train wreck in eastern Washington.
