HILL AND GORMAN EAT EACH OTHER

GORMAN APPEALS TO THE PATRIOTISM OF REPUBLICANS.

It Is Hill's Day for Whining, but He Gets Gorman's Where He Wants Him and Falls the Record on Him.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Stirring interest was given to the senate proceedings today by the speeches of Senators Gorman and Hill on various phases of the tariff and financial question. At times the debate between the two distinguished Democratic senators took on an added interest from the keen personal criticism and satire directed at each other. Mr. Gorman spoke for two hours. The speech was mainly remarkable in its array of facts to show that he tariff which Mr. Gorman took so large a part in framing was wholly insufficient in raising the revenue absolutely requisite to carry on the government. In presenting this view Mr. Gorman dwelt on the personal features of the contest over the Wilson bill and arraigned Mr. Hill for his attitude then and since on the tariff question. The speech of Mr. Hill was equally personal and equally vigorous and was received with the same close attention from his associates and intense interest in the galleries as had been shown to the Maryland senator. Mr. Hill directed his remarks mainly at Mr. Gorman who sat only a few feet away.

LESS LIP, MORE MONEY.

Senator Allen of Iowa contributed to the features of the day by a short but very effective presentation of the need of immediate legislation on the tariff to raise revenue instead of further fruitless agitation of currency revision. Mr. Gorman quoted from a report of the condition of the treasury on Jan. 13, showing that the deficit since July 1, 1894, of the treasury was $34,000,000. Mr. Carlisle called it was $34,000,000 on Jan. 12. Mr. Carlisle, while the tariff bill was pending, had estimated the receipts from the tariff for the fiscal year at $363,000,000 and the expenditures at $378,000,000, or a deficit of $15,000,000. The deficit was already double that sum and the year was but half over.

NOT ENOUGH FOR PENSIONS.

Not enough revenue was being raised from customs to pay the pensions. The bulk of the pension expenditures levied within our own borders. The customs revenue would be many millions short of the $140,000,000 required for pensions. Mr. Gorman asked, "I answer no." In 1892 the pension budget reached $150,000,000, its highest point. It is now down to the $100,000,000 mark. It is a sad thing to see the pensioners of the old soldiers die. It will be the average of $125,000,000 for the next ten years. The expenditures for postal service, the navy, rivers and harbors, must go on. The senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. Quay), has said that the Democratic party had been rebuked and named out of the government. Mr. Teller stated the cause on Saturday last when, addressing his Republican colleagues, he said that the Democratic fall had not been because the people had over-confidence in that party, but because they had not given the Democratic party a majority as big as ours—for our hands and by a thread.

WILL BE MAGNANIMOUS.

"I say now to the senator from Pennsylvania when he and his colleagues meet the question that confronts us now I will treat him and his friends in a spirit different from that which he has manifested to me. I will give him 10 minutes on any question affecting the finances of the government, unless any proposition to prevent the bankruptcy of the government or give the country sound currency, I will help you through in the hour of peril although you refused aid to us.

HILL GETS HIS STILTS ON.

Mr. Hill did not join in any such appeal. He appealed to his party associates. There was a ripple of applause at this point which was checked by the presiding officer. Why had the senator from Maryland been moved from the stilted attitude of indifference he had assumed today? Had he just heard the voices of the state conventions all over the country last fall? Did he not know that the senator from Pennsylvania had stood by the gallant few in this chamber and in the house who stood for redeeming the Chicago platform pledges? Why did he attack me (Hill) for attacking the president and the Democratic president did not attack the Democratic house of representatives? In 1894 the senator of his own state had declared for free raw material. The senator from Maryland had alluded to the section from which he came as unfavorable to compromise. "I am not certain," he added, "that the atmosphere of northern New York is not as good as that in a near-by state which breathes compromise." "That the atmosphere of northern New York is not as good as that in a near-by state which breathes compromise." (laughter.) Some things can be compressed. I cannot understand why the senator deems it necessary at this late day to attack me in order to vindicate his position on the tariff act.

WOULD GROVER HELP, REALLY?

"We have our own idea as to how this revenue should be raised. It is part of the Republican policy of protection. Now is the senator authorized to say that the president will help us in carrying this measure?"

MR. GORMAN DISCLAIMED ANY AUTHORITY TO SPEAK FOR THE PRESIDENT OR TO INDICATE HIS COURSE, BUT HE SAID HE WAS RESPONSIBLE WITH PATRIOTISM UNSWERVED BY PARTY FEELING HE FELT CONFIDENT THAT EVERY MAN FROM THE PRESIDENT DOWN TO THE HUMBLEST MAN IN THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY WOULD AID IN SECURING THAT END.

Mr. Aldrich again suggested that Mr. Gorman had meant that the government needed more revenue. "And now what remedy does the senator propose?" asked Mr. Aldrich.

"The first thing to do is to pass the APPROPRIATION FOR COLLECTING THE INCOME TAX.

"For one," he said, "I am convinced that the masses of the people who comprise the brain and sinews of the nation who love justice and honest dealing, the people whom Mr. Lincoln said could not be fooled all the time, will come back and render the country in favor of those who knew when their party was in the minority that there was a deficiency and who had the courage when in the minority to insist on trying to make the receipts meet the expenditures. They will give due credit and to the great statesmen whom they had treated unjustly."

ALDRICH KEEPS PRODDING.

"Why not pass some bill now to increase the revenue?" asked Mr. Aldrich.

"We have no power to do so. There are some measures on the calendar (alluding to the bills to place iron and coal on the free list and to abolish the difference in the question of duty that decrease the revenue," replied Mr. Gorman.

"We could alter their character," said Mr. Gorman.

"Will you aid us to take them up?" inquired Mr. Vest.

"If you will change their character, you will not take them up."

"Certainly," observed Mr. Vest with a smile, "if we will substitute the McKinley act."

In concluding Mr. Gorman said: "It would be good policy and good politics for the Republicans to join us; sink party differences, meet the emergency and not let the question be made a football of any longer."

Mr. Hill and Mr. Allison were instantly on their feet asking recognition. The latter was recognized. Mr. Allison complimented the Maryland senator for clearly and for the first time making it clear from the Democratic standpoint that the question was not to face with a great deficit. The senator had not mentioned the currency question. He had gone to the really great question, the government's grave emergency in lacking revenue now and threatened with still greater lack of revenue. And yet, with the situation before us, not to convene again for nearly a year from the present time.

REMEDY IS JUST WAITING.

"But there is a remedy at hand. There are bills pending from the house to further reduce the revenues from coal and iron. The duty of the hour is to take these bills and instead of passing them to further reduce revenues, to so frame them as to yield $50,000,000 additional to our revenues."

Mr. Allison expressed amusement that the president and secretary of the treasury should remain passive with no suggestion to congress as to the imperative necessity of increasing the revenues of the government. With the tremendous Democratic majority in congress it is a plain duty that they should be reminded in unmistakable language from the executive branch of the government that the revenues must be increased at once to a point sufficient to sustain the credit of the government. This was the present pressing duty. Mr. Allison expressed his opinion that the reform of greenbacks, or the many financial plans under discussion. He urged that the McKinley bill would have yielded ample revenue. But from the outset the normal action of that law was interrupted by the emergency of congress, and by urging it. Mr. Allison closed with a vigorous appeal to those in authority, the president, the secretary of the treasury, the administrator of the customs, to meet the emergency here and now instead of waiting for a full year.

HILL SAYS IT ISN'T FAIR.

Mr. Hill (Dem. N. Y.) said that the senator from Iowa had tried to trick him no reason why he should not have the opportunity. But in urging this vindication, the senator from Maryland had not only attacked the tariff but had also attacked the tariff. It was a peculiar situation to find senators who had voted against the law criticized for its existing provisions, to attack the tariff. The income tax he understood the senator from Maryland to be opposed to it, but after a time, presto! change—the senator from Maryland had changed his mind for a period of five years. Mr. Hill defined his position which was to repeal the tax. If it was to stand he would not support it. He would not support it if the commissioner of internal revenue should be enjoined from collecting the tax by the courts in the district of Columbia, pending the determination of its constitutionality, asked Mr. Vilas, (Dem. Wis.), would not that prevent the collection of the tax anywhere?

"It would not," replied Mr. Hill, who proceeded to argue that the injunction would only be in the district of Columbia and would not be in any other district.

THEY DISCUSS JURISDICTION.

"Why cannot a class get the benefit of a suit brought in the interest of a class?" That depends on the ground of residence," asked Mr. Vilas.

"The parties must be similarly situated," replied Mr. Hill.

"Do you mean that A. B. in the District of Columbia could not bring a suit on behalf of himself and all others in the district?" asked Mr. Hill.

"That could be done but it is the most that could be done. No suit against the commissioner could be brought save in the district," replied Mr. Hill.

RETURNING TO THE TARIFF LAW.

Returning to the tariff law Mr. Hill said he had no retractions to offer for the criticism he had made against the tariff when he and his colleagues met the question that confronts us now I will treat him and his friends in a spirit different from that which he has manifested to me. I will give him 10 minutes on any question affecting the finances of the government, unless any proposition to prevent the bankruptcy of the government or give the country sound currency, I will help you through in the hour of peril although you refused aid to us.

SENATORIAL FIGHTING CEASES WHILE THEY BURY THE DEAD.

First, Last and Only People's Party Government on Earth Consigned to Rest, While Senatorial Headquarters Are Left to Run Themselves and the Legislators Take a Day Off and Run Home to See the Folks—Aid Figures on Burton's Boom Bursting—How the Country Constituent May Infer.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 14.—The festivities of this evening and the services of the day over the political corpse of the first and last People's party government on earth, interferred to such an extent with the senatorial campaign that very little progress, if any, was made by either of the parties interested. The fact is there has been a kind of a truce since the members left Friday night. Each headquarters has been kept up just the same but they were manned by second or third class lieutenants, mostly all of the field officers having gone home to spend Sunday. J. Ralph Burton remained in town, went to the funeral of the late churches Sunday morning and appeared at dinner in the Copeland in the afternoon with an ultra fashionable Sunday suit on. Farmer A. W. Smith stood in the corridor and watched the movements of the party interested in the movement, particularly the swing of his excessive coat. This is a shy country maiden gazing on the temporary greatness of a pro tem queen in the drama.

WAITING FOR BUSTED BOOMS.

Burton's friends claim him to be the strongest candidate but Ady's friends smile and look as if they had compassion for them as victims of a delusion. A careful investigation would reveal perhaps that Burton has more votes than Ady, but that Ady's strength is more reliable in an actual engagement in caucus when the firing is hot. And speaking about this, no candidate for the caucus, but that Ady's strength is more reliable in an actual engagement in caucus when the firing is hot. And speaking about this, no candidate for the caucus, but that Ady's strength is more reliable in an actual engagement in caucus when the firing is hot.

WHERE INGNALS HIDES.

The ignals boom is not yet susceptible of measurement. It has lost ground since Friday so far as Topeka indications go. It may change when the members who have returned from home exchange views about the views of their constituents, for it is understood here that the ignals boom is more active in the mountains than with the representatives and the politicians. In the meantime Mr. Vilas and Cy Leland are working hard to get the ignals boom to take the third choice. All of Ady's calculations are to stay in the race till the end. He has probably more second choice votes than any other candidate in the field. Thatcher has the second district solid and he will probably keep their allegiance till many ballots are taken and then if he deems that his success is doubtful they will scatter them among the other men. The indications are that several ballots will be cast.

OKLAHOMA LEGISLATURE ENTERS TAINS A STATEHOOD BILL.

Vague and Indefinite and Leading no Whither in Particular, Observers Predict That Nothing Will Come of It—Also That the Oklahomans, Wise in Their Generation, Are Waiting for a Congress That Will Give Them What They Want—Legislative Relief for the Much Married.

Guthrie, O. T., Jan. 14.—(Special)—The members of the two houses of the legislature were all present at 2:30 this afternoon when President Pitzer of the council and Speaker Barnes of the house rapped their respective bodies to order. The greatest pleasure of an august legislator cannot be appreciated by one who has never tasted the delirium of public applause, but by the smile on the countenances of the members who had gone home to spend the Sunday the least joy is not that of having filled the ears of willing listeners—those of wife, sweetheart, the whole family or perhaps the rural cowboy, but the fact that a record of little incidents of personal vanity.

BILL FEELS HARDLY USED.

All Cut Up at the Way the Newspaper Have Turned About Him.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 14.—Escorted by his captors, Bill Cook came to town today. Cook said: "Walked out of the house on a ranch near Nogales, N. M., and these three men got the drop on me. I did not have any money. I have not been in the Indian territory since the last of October. All the late newspaper yarns about me and my crowd are diabolical lies. Jim Turner and I have been together and staying on ranches and doing nothing but keeping away from officers."

BLOOM STILL LINGERS.

Candidly, however, the members of the present legislature have hardly had time to try their wings either in a legislative or a social capacity. The Crookes among them. In truth, even the necessary small change for an occasional "smile" is scarce and most of the members are by the bye, waiting for the future.

TO ENLARGE THE JUDICIARY.

Bill Passes the House for the Relief of Indian Territory.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Philandering tactics again defeated the Grouse oleomargarine bill which was under consideration during the morning hour in the house today. By a special order the rules committee, the remainder of the day was consumed with business reported from the judiciary committee. One bill, however, was passed—that providing for additional judicial facilities for the Indian territory, the affairs in that country being a fruitful theme for discussion during the consideration of the bill.

EVERYBODY WAS GLAD.

Everybody seemed to rejoice at the change, and never did the government have so much charge of the people's affairs with such a unanimous public sentiment for success at his back. Even the little children who ran home from school in the noon recess seemed to be lighter in spirits.

TURNED ON THE LIGHTS.

The inauguration took place in the hall of the house of representatives, which was darkened against the invasion of the sun and a flood of electric light from the north side of the hall. At three minutes before 11 o'clock Marshall's band struck up and the music was heard in every part of the hall. The speaker's stand was thrown open and Governor Lewelling and Governor-elect Morrill walked in arm in arm and were greeted with a shout of welcome.
