

WALK THE PARTRIDGE

How Alexander Paorri Caught French Ears.

LA REINE WON HIM FAME

Interesting Story of the Life of a Genius.

Paris, July 27.—Alexander Paorri is a name little known to the students of French literature abroad. They may feel surprised at the long notice given to his memory by the theatrical chronicle of last week. It is because the theater furnishes a great part of the living literature of France and Paorri came nearest of modern playwrights to the poets of the classic French drama. It was by force of study, for he was a Frenchman, rather than by birth, that he has given some of the critics the idea that he was of Greek lineage—an indirect compliment to their own dramatic literature, in which he succeeded. In reality, he was an Italian Levantine of the early days when the lingua franca reigned and Cook's tourists and Egyptian English were unknown. He was born, indeed, at Canosa, where his father was consul of good King Bomba of the Two Sicilies, but his childhood was passed at Smyrna, as he has said in one of his fine verses—"I was born in the Meles I sang beside the Seine." He was a youth of Italy and then in Switzerland, where, doubtless, he gained his knowledge of the language in which he was to write; but he was nearly thirty before he came to live in France.

It was shortly before the disaster of 1870, and he had not time to employ his pen in the patriotic drama to which his literary gifts were already committed before the crash came. There was first a little volume of poems, which fell almost like a meteor; there was a romance which had the same fate; and then, on the first day of May in the last bright morning of the Second Empire, he brought out his half-privately published "Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

Six years later the Comedie Française accepted Paorri's "Rome Vanquished," which he had written amid the ruin and desolation of war. In his dedication of this work to his adopted country he recalls in noble lines his high moral exaltation of this drama, a noble, vigorous tragedy—"Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

When you walk a hot tub you order one for a particular hour of a particular day. The bath man comes around with his apparatus at the hour named. He steps in front of your house, and lifting the tub over the top of the tank, he puts it over his head like a hood and carries it up to your room. Then he returns to the street and frays off the hot water from the tank into the bucket. Then he comes up and sets the tub on its legs and carries the tub and bucket away. He passes through the streets in an everyday sight to the Parisian and arouses no comment. When I asked the bath man to let me photograph him in one act of fulfilling his function he shrugged his shoulders and looked at me as though he thought it was queer. Then he made remarks about the wild Americans and their strange ways to the old woman who had charge of the office of the bath establishment. Paris is not only renowned to the bath man but he is also famous for his method of getting water. For every man of the bath man has a special way with the water which is very comfortable and which is very convenient in our present apartment houses.

STANLEY IN SHIRT WAIST.

Governor of Kansas Causes Sensation in State House. Topeka, Kan., July 27.—Governor Stanley has drawn official dignity to the white and dressed a shirt waist. A ray of sunshine was cast upon the state when the governor in this much talked of apparel. The governor was not moved, however, and the state of Kansas seems to run about about as smooth as ever. "It is the great faith in the young man," said Governor Stanley yesterday, as he leaned back in his chair, looking very cool and comfortable, and gave a hitch to his belt. "They adopted the shirt waist and I thought I would experiment and see if that judgment was sound. It is the shirt waist is a good thing. The wearing of a shirt waist may excite a small section of a man's dignity, but who cares for dignity in his waist? A person wants to be comfortable, and he certainly can be in a shirt waist. I guess I've got the habit now and I don't think I will abandon it." "Why not organize a Governor's Shirt Waist club?" asked the reporter. "Well, that might be a good thing," said the governor, "but I don't know how many I could interest in the movement."

COSSIP OF EUROPE

Little Interest in the Eughas Shooting Matches.

FASHION DEMANDS BIRDS

Symptoms of Pan-Slavonic Revival in Austria.

London, July 27.—The effect of the sharp lessons taught by the war in South Africa is seen in the radical changes that have been made in the conditions of shooting for the various prizes at the great annual rifle meeting at Brinsley, in England. In the old days, the one prominent victim was the partridge, and the attainment of this nearly all other considerations were sacrificed. Under the new rules, the competitors are subjected to various tests for rapidity as well as accuracy of fire, smartness in taking cover, hanging the magazine rifle, firing at short range, and steadiness while marching. In the Commander in Chief's cup, for instance, shot for by teams of regulars, militia, yeomanry, or volunteers, the man rises from cover, aims, pulls the trigger and get back under cover—all within four seconds, and the range is only 100 yards. The British cup of 80 yards is for rapid magazine fire, and in other contests the time for a shot is strictly limited. Even in the King's prize, the 500 and 800 ranges are increased to 600 and 800 respectively, the standing position, so suddenly introduced, has been an sudden abandonment, and even at 900 yards the prone position may be used instead of the kneeling one. And in this case sighting devices are allowed. In every way the conditions, as nearly as possible, have been made to resemble those likely to prevail in actual warfare, and the difficulties of the marksmen have been correspondingly increased.

QUEER PARIS CUSTOMS.

When a Gentleman Takes a Bath All City Knows It.

Paris, July 27.—When a Parisian takes a bath all Paris knows it. That is, when he takes a hot bath. The hot bath of the average Parisian is a function which is performed with ceremony. The Parisian has a hard time keeping clean. That he succeeds as well is very much to his credit. He labors under the disadvantage of having no adequate supply of water. There is plenty of water in Paris, to be sure, and an enormous quantity of it is used on the streets. All day long men with lines of hose which are made in metallic sections with flexible joints, each section mounted on wheels, go up and down the principal streets and boulevard distributing water with a free hand. The difficulty is not to get water on the street level, but to get it above that level. In reality, he is an Italian Levantine of the early days when the lingua franca reigned and Cook's tourists and Egyptian English were unknown. He was born, indeed, at Canosa, where his father was consul of good King Bomba of the Two Sicilies, but his childhood was passed at Smyrna, as he has said in one of his fine verses—"I was born in the Meles I sang beside the Seine." He was a youth of Italy and then in Switzerland, where, doubtless, he gained his knowledge of the language in which he was to write; but he was nearly thirty before he came to live in France.

It was shortly before the disaster of 1870, and he had not time to employ his pen in the patriotic drama to which his literary gifts were already committed before the crash came. There was first a little volume of poems, which fell almost like a meteor; there was a romance which had the same fate; and then, on the first day of May in the last bright morning of the Second Empire, he brought out his half-privately published "Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

Six years later the Comedie Française accepted Paorri's "Rome Vanquished," which he had written amid the ruin and desolation of war. In his dedication of this work to his adopted country he recalls in noble lines his high moral exaltation of this drama, a noble, vigorous tragedy—"Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

When you walk a hot tub you order one for a particular hour of a particular day. The bath man comes around with his apparatus at the hour named. He steps in front of your house, and lifting the tub over the top of the tank, he puts it over his head like a hood and carries it up to your room. Then he returns to the street and frays off the hot water from the tank into the bucket. Then he comes up and sets the tub on its legs and carries the tub and bucket away. He passes through the streets in an everyday sight to the Parisian and arouses no comment. When I asked the bath man to let me photograph him in one act of fulfilling his function he shrugged his shoulders and looked at me as though he thought it was queer. Then he made remarks about the wild Americans and their strange ways to the old woman who had charge of the office of the bath establishment. Paris is not only renowned to the bath man but he is also famous for his method of getting water. For every man of the bath man has a special way with the water which is very comfortable and which is very convenient in our present apartment houses.

STANLEY IN SHIRT WAIST.

Governor of Kansas Causes Sensation in State House. Topeka, Kan., July 27.—Governor Stanley has drawn official dignity to the white and dressed a shirt waist. A ray of sunshine was cast upon the state when the governor in this much talked of apparel. The governor was not moved, however, and the state of Kansas seems to run about about as smooth as ever. "It is the great faith in the young man," said Governor Stanley yesterday, as he leaned back in his chair, looking very cool and comfortable, and gave a hitch to his belt. "They adopted the shirt waist and I thought I would experiment and see if that judgment was sound. It is the shirt waist is a good thing. The wearing of a shirt waist may excite a small section of a man's dignity, but who cares for dignity in his waist? A person wants to be comfortable, and he certainly can be in a shirt waist. I guess I've got the habit now and I don't think I will abandon it." "Why not organize a Governor's Shirt Waist club?" asked the reporter. "Well, that might be a good thing," said the governor, "but I don't know how many I could interest in the movement."

COSSIP OF EUROPE

Little Interest in the Eughas Shooting Matches.

FASHION DEMANDS BIRDS

Symptoms of Pan-Slavonic Revival in Austria.

London, July 27.—The effect of the sharp lessons taught by the war in South Africa is seen in the radical changes that have been made in the conditions of shooting for the various prizes at the great annual rifle meeting at Brinsley, in England. In the old days, the one prominent victim was the partridge, and the attainment of this nearly all other considerations were sacrificed. Under the new rules, the competitors are subjected to various tests for rapidity as well as accuracy of fire, smartness in taking cover, hanging the magazine rifle, firing at short range, and steadiness while marching. In the Commander in Chief's cup, for instance, shot for by teams of regulars, militia, yeomanry, or volunteers, the man rises from cover, aims, pulls the trigger and get back under cover—all within four seconds, and the range is only 100 yards. The British cup of 80 yards is for rapid magazine fire, and in other contests the time for a shot is strictly limited. Even in the King's prize, the 500 and 800 ranges are increased to 600 and 800 respectively, the standing position, so suddenly introduced, has been an sudden abandonment, and even at 900 yards the prone position may be used instead of the kneeling one. And in this case sighting devices are allowed. In every way the conditions, as nearly as possible, have been made to resemble those likely to prevail in actual warfare, and the difficulties of the marksmen have been correspondingly increased.

QUEER PARIS CUSTOMS.

When a Gentleman Takes a Bath All City Knows It.

Paris, July 27.—When a Parisian takes a bath all Paris knows it. That is, when he takes a hot bath. The hot bath of the average Parisian is a function which is performed with ceremony. The Parisian has a hard time keeping clean. That he succeeds as well is very much to his credit. He labors under the disadvantage of having no adequate supply of water. There is plenty of water in Paris, to be sure, and an enormous quantity of it is used on the streets. All day long men with lines of hose which are made in metallic sections with flexible joints, each section mounted on wheels, go up and down the principal streets and boulevard distributing water with a free hand. The difficulty is not to get water on the street level, but to get it above that level. In reality, he is an Italian Levantine of the early days when the lingua franca reigned and Cook's tourists and Egyptian English were unknown. He was born, indeed, at Canosa, where his father was consul of good King Bomba of the Two Sicilies, but his childhood was passed at Smyrna, as he has said in one of his fine verses—"I was born in the Meles I sang beside the Seine." He was a youth of Italy and then in Switzerland, where, doubtless, he gained his knowledge of the language in which he was to write; but he was nearly thirty before he came to live in France.

It was shortly before the disaster of 1870, and he had not time to employ his pen in the patriotic drama to which his literary gifts were already committed before the crash came. There was first a little volume of poems, which fell almost like a meteor; there was a romance which had the same fate; and then, on the first day of May in the last bright morning of the Second Empire, he brought out his half-privately published "Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

Six years later the Comedie Française accepted Paorri's "Rome Vanquished," which he had written amid the ruin and desolation of war. In his dedication of this work to his adopted country he recalls in noble lines his high moral exaltation of this drama, a noble, vigorous tragedy—"Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

When you walk a hot tub you order one for a particular hour of a particular day. The bath man comes around with his apparatus at the hour named. He steps in front of your house, and lifting the tub over the top of the tank, he puts it over his head like a hood and carries it up to your room. Then he returns to the street and frays off the hot water from the tank into the bucket. Then he comes up and sets the tub on its legs and carries the tub and bucket away. He passes through the streets in an everyday sight to the Parisian and arouses no comment. When I asked the bath man to let me photograph him in one act of fulfilling his function he shrugged his shoulders and looked at me as though he thought it was queer. Then he made remarks about the wild Americans and their strange ways to the old woman who had charge of the office of the bath establishment. Paris is not only renowned to the bath man but he is also famous for his method of getting water. For every man of the bath man has a special way with the water which is very comfortable and which is very convenient in our present apartment houses.

STANLEY IN SHIRT WAIST.

Governor of Kansas Causes Sensation in State House. Topeka, Kan., July 27.—Governor Stanley has drawn official dignity to the white and dressed a shirt waist. A ray of sunshine was cast upon the state when the governor in this much talked of apparel. The governor was not moved, however, and the state of Kansas seems to run about about as smooth as ever. "It is the great faith in the young man," said Governor Stanley yesterday, as he leaned back in his chair, looking very cool and comfortable, and gave a hitch to his belt. "They adopted the shirt waist and I thought I would experiment and see if that judgment was sound. It is the shirt waist is a good thing. The wearing of a shirt waist may excite a small section of a man's dignity, but who cares for dignity in his waist? A person wants to be comfortable, and he certainly can be in a shirt waist. I guess I've got the habit now and I don't think I will abandon it." "Why not organize a Governor's Shirt Waist club?" asked the reporter. "Well, that might be a good thing," said the governor, "but I don't know how many I could interest in the movement."

COSSIP OF EUROPE

Little Interest in the Eughas Shooting Matches.

FASHION DEMANDS BIRDS

Symptoms of Pan-Slavonic Revival in Austria.

London, July 27.—The effect of the sharp lessons taught by the war in South Africa is seen in the radical changes that have been made in the conditions of shooting for the various prizes at the great annual rifle meeting at Brinsley, in England. In the old days, the one prominent victim was the partridge, and the attainment of this nearly all other considerations were sacrificed. Under the new rules, the competitors are subjected to various tests for rapidity as well as accuracy of fire, smartness in taking cover, hanging the magazine rifle, firing at short range, and steadiness while marching. In the Commander in Chief's cup, for instance, shot for by teams of regulars, militia, yeomanry, or volunteers, the man rises from cover, aims, pulls the trigger and get back under cover—all within four seconds, and the range is only 100 yards. The British cup of 80 yards is for rapid magazine fire, and in other contests the time for a shot is strictly limited. Even in the King's prize, the 500 and 800 ranges are increased to 600 and 800 respectively, the standing position, so suddenly introduced, has been an sudden abandonment, and even at 900 yards the prone position may be used instead of the kneeling one. And in this case sighting devices are allowed. In every way the conditions, as nearly as possible, have been made to resemble those likely to prevail in actual warfare, and the difficulties of the marksmen have been correspondingly increased.

QUEER PARIS CUSTOMS.

When a Gentleman Takes a Bath All City Knows It.

Paris, July 27.—When a Parisian takes a bath all Paris knows it. That is, when he takes a hot bath. The hot bath of the average Parisian is a function which is performed with ceremony. The Parisian has a hard time keeping clean. That he succeeds as well is very much to his credit. He labors under the disadvantage of having no adequate supply of water. There is plenty of water in Paris, to be sure, and an enormous quantity of it is used on the streets. All day long men with lines of hose which are made in metallic sections with flexible joints, each section mounted on wheels, go up and down the principal streets and boulevard distributing water with a free hand. The difficulty is not to get water on the street level, but to get it above that level. In reality, he is an Italian Levantine of the early days when the lingua franca reigned and Cook's tourists and Egyptian English were unknown. He was born, indeed, at Canosa, where his father was consul of good King Bomba of the Two Sicilies, but his childhood was passed at Smyrna, as he has said in one of his fine verses—"I was born in the Meles I sang beside the Seine." He was a youth of Italy and then in Switzerland, where, doubtless, he gained his knowledge of the language in which he was to write; but he was nearly thirty before he came to live in France.

It was shortly before the disaster of 1870, and he had not time to employ his pen in the patriotic drama to which his literary gifts were already committed before the crash came. There was first a little volume of poems, which fell almost like a meteor; there was a romance which had the same fate; and then, on the first day of May in the last bright morning of the Second Empire, he brought out his half-privately published "Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

Six years later the Comedie Française accepted Paorri's "Rome Vanquished," which he had written amid the ruin and desolation of war. In his dedication of this work to his adopted country he recalls in noble lines his high moral exaltation of this drama, a noble, vigorous tragedy—"Ulm, the Partridge." It was not a success; but it caught the ear of Saroy, who was at the end of the first ten years of the forty during which he called the average Frenchman in his appreciation of classical matters. He invited the somewhat famous poet to the new post on all his friends; but the play was a respectable failure.

When you walk a hot tub you order one for a particular hour of a particular day. The bath man comes around with his apparatus at the hour named. He steps in front of your house, and lifting the tub over the top of the tank, he puts it over his head like a hood and carries it up to your room. Then he returns to the street and frays off the hot water from the tank into the bucket. Then he comes up and sets the tub on its legs and carries the tub and bucket away. He passes through the streets in an everyday sight to the Parisian and arouses no comment. When I asked the bath man to let me photograph him in one act of fulfilling his function he shrugged his shoulders and looked at me as though he thought it was queer. Then he made remarks about the wild Americans and their strange ways to the old woman who had charge of the office of the bath establishment. Paris is not only renowned to the bath man but he is also famous for his method of getting water. For every man of the bath man has a special way with the water which is very comfortable and which is very convenient in our present apartment houses.

STANLEY IN SHIRT WAIST.

Governor of Kansas Causes Sensation in State House. Topeka, Kan., July 27.—Governor Stanley has drawn official dignity to the white and dressed a shirt waist. A ray of sunshine was cast upon the state when the governor in this much talked of apparel. The governor was not moved, however, and the state of Kansas seems to run about about as smooth as ever. "It is the great faith in the young man," said Governor Stanley yesterday, as he leaned back in his chair, looking very cool and comfortable, and gave a hitch to his belt. "They adopted the shirt waist and I thought I would experiment and see if that judgment was sound. It is the shirt waist is a good thing. The wearing of a shirt waist may excite a small section of a man's dignity, but who cares for dignity in his waist? A person wants to be comfortable, and he certainly can be in a shirt waist. I guess I've got the habit now and I don't think I will abandon it." "Why not organize a Governor's Shirt Waist club?" asked the reporter. "Well, that might be a good thing," said the governor, "but I don't know how many I could interest in the movement."

Special Round Trip Rates

VIA FRISCO LINE

To Portland, Ore., Seattle, Wash., Tacoma, Wash. On July 28th to 12th inclusive we will have tickets on sale to the above points at rate of $5 for the round trip, good returning August 31. Other questions regarding stop-overs, routes, time, limits will be answered by the city ticket office by PAUL L. NOBLE, City Ticket Agent. E. F. DUNN, Dist. Pass. Agent.

$15.00 For the Round Trip to

Pueblo Colorado Springs and Denver

Via Santa Fe Route

Date of sale: August 1st to 10th, Sept. 1st to 10th, inclusive. For further information call on or phone

Phone 119 L. R. DELANEY, Agt.

Excursion Rates to Colorado

Every day over the Great Rock Island Route

Three trains every week day. Two trains every Sunday.

New Train Service

VIA Missouri Pacific Ry.

TO WINFIELD, COFFEYVILLE, FT. SMITH, LITTLE ROCK AND HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

Commencing Sunday July 21st.

The Missouri Pacific railway will place in service a new train leaving Wichita at 9:25 a. m., running through to Coffeyville, via Conway Springs and Winfield, Kan., arriving at Winfield 1:30 p. m.; Coffeyville, 4:50 p. m.; Little Rock, 7:25 a. m.; Hot Springs, 9:30 a. m. This is the best and quickest route to the Southern Kansas and Arkansas points. H. C. TOWNSEND, G. P. A., St. Louis, Mo. E. E. BLECKLEY, P. and T. Agt. Cor. Douglas Ave. and Wichita street.

CHEAPER THAN EVER

TO COLORADO AND UTAH

Daily June 18th to Sept. 10th, 1901.

GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

ROUND TRIP RATES FROM Missouri River Points to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo

$15 July 1 to 9, $19 July 10 to Aug. 11. Similar Reduced Rates on Same Dates to Other Colorado and Utah Tourist Points.

Rates from Other Points on Rock Island Route Proportionately Lower on Same Dates of Sale. Return Limit October 3, 1901.

The Superb Train COLORADO FLYER

Leaves Kansas City daily at 6:30 p. m., Omaha 5:20 p. m., St. Joseph 4:30 p. m., arriving Denver 1:00 a. m., Colorado Springs (Monday) 10:25 a. m., Pueblo 11:50 a. m. Write for details and Colorado literature.

JOHN BERRASTIAN, G. P. A., Chicago. E. W. THOMPSON, A. G. P. A.

Are you interested in the new Oklahoma country?

Frisco Ticket Office

and ask for a copy of "A Few Facts Concerning the Next Opening of Indian Lands"

The most comprehensive pamphlet we have seen on this subject. PAUL L. NOBLE, City Ticket Agent. E. F. DUNN, District Passenger Agent. rate part it was constructed. Mr. Graham adds to the many stirring episodes that have been expressed concerning the great battle dispute the following to the subject. The man who is responsible for these vicious attacks are Captain F. E. Chadwick, who commanded the New York the day of the light it failed to get to Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans the only captain in the light who did in the coming tower. Rear Admiral Chadwick's attack on the hours of unprovoked and, unfortunately, because he did not come in the light. Rear Admiral William P. Sampson, who should be court-martialed for his action before Santiago on July 1, 1898, in weakening our battle line.

WICHITA WHOLESALE DIRECTORY

- JOBBER AND MANUFACTURERS
WALLENSTFIN & COHN
LEHMANN HIGGINSON GROCER CO.
JETT & WOOD
WICHITA WHOLESALE GROCERY CO.
J. D. McEVEN
GOLDSTANDT-POWELL HAT CO.
JOHN McCOMB
L. HAYS SADDLERY & LEATHER CO.
HOCKING-MOORE DRUG CO.
THE VAN ZANDT IMPLEMENT CO.
J. A. BISHOP
C. W. SOUTHWARD
NINE E. BURRUS
WETTERHOLD & NUDD
THE AYLESBURY MERCANTILE CO.
H. B. ALLEN DOTTING WORKS
THE CITIZENS' ICE AND COLD STORAGE CO.
S. D. SHAW BARBER SUPPLY CO.
EAGLE CORNICE, ROOFING AND METAL CO.
O. B. STOCKER
ARKANSAS VALLEY FENCE CO.
THE HOCKADAY HARDWARE CO.
THE PEARCE FURNITURE MANUFACTURING CO.
THE WICHITA WHOLESALE CIGAR CO.
ROSS BROS.
CHAS. LAWRENCE
W. H. KRAEMER, DIAMOND SETTER
AMERICAN CORNICE WORKS
ELECTRICAL SUPPLY AND CONSTRUCTION CO.
THE G. E. POTTS DRUG CO.
WICHITA STOVE AND IRON WORKS
DERMODY PLUMBING AND HEATING CO.
WICHITA SUIT, OVERALL AND SHIRT FACTORY
AMERICAN SODA AND BAKING POWDER CO.
KANSAS OPTICAL CO.
WICHITA TENT AND AWNING WORKS
A rubber-stamp merchant cuts no ice in the commercial world.
Nice Letter Heads Envelopes, Bill Heads
Are what you must have to be "it." The Eagle Job department has an invoice of New Faces in Type. Also a fine line of Papers.
Printed Stationery
Is the proper caper this year. We will fill your order while you wait.
Eagle Job Rooms
THE WEEKLY EAGLE: 52 WEEKS 50c