

Daily Eagle

M. M. MURDOCK, R. P. MURDOCK, Publishers and Proprietors. Members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Associated Press.

Wichita people who for the summer can have the Eagle follow them by giving their address to their carrier, or at the office, without extra charge.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. DAILY, BY CARRIER, 10c PER WEEK. (In Advance, postage prepaid.) Daily, one copy, one year, $1.00

WEEKLY EAGLE. One copy, one year, $1.00. Readers of the Eagle, when in New York City or Chicago, can see copies of the paper at the office of our agents at the address given above.

Call for Schweitzer & Son's Grape Juice at your grocer's. Buy your picture frames and everything in your line at Martin's and get the big summer discount.

Atend Wichita Business College, Wall Building, 114-116 North Market St. Call for Schweitzer & Son's Grape Juice at your grocer's.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. Has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS OF MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING.

Notice. Office of City Clerk. Wichita, Kan., July 24, 1902. The following resolution was passed by the mayor and council of the city of Wichita, at a regular meeting held July 21, 1902.

RESOLUTION. Whereas the majority of the resident owners owning a majority in square feet of the lots or real estate liable to taxation for the payment of the paving, curbing and guttering of Douglas avenue, in the city of Wichita, Kansas, from the end of the pavement on West Douglas avenue to Seneca street, in said city, have petitioned the mayor and council of said city to pave and curb said Douglas avenue from the end of the pavement on West Douglas avenue to Seneca street; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the mayor and council of the city of Wichita, that it is hereby declared to be necessary to pave, curbing and curb Douglas avenue from the end of the pavement on West Douglas avenue to Seneca street; and that the clerk cause publication to be made of this resolution according to law.

Notice. Office of the City Clerk. Wichita, Kan., August 12, 1902. Property owners are hereby notified that the mayor and council have ordered constructed the following walks:

A five-foot permanent walk on the west side of Lawrence avenue from Zimmermanly to Harry.

A four-foot permanent walk on the north side of Texas from Kimbrough to Hanley.

A four-foot permanent walk on the south side of Texas from Elizabeth to Seneca.

A four-foot permanent walk on the east side of Main from Eleventh to Thirteenth.

A four-foot permanent walk on the west side of Jackson from Ninth to Thirteenth.

A four-foot permanent walk on the north side of Maple from Eycamore to Blum.

Unless said walks are constructed within thirty days from August 4, 1902, the city of Wichita will proceed to construct the same, and the cost, together with a penalty of 25 per cent, will be charged up against said lots.

Notice. Office of the City Clerk. Wichita, Kan., August 12, 1902. Property owners are hereby notified that the mayor and city council have, by resolution, declared to be a public necessity to construct a permanent curb on the east and west side of St. Francis from Central to Thirteenth.

On the east and west side of Lulu avenue from Douglas to Hunter.

On the north and south side of Second from Cleveland to alley west of Ohio.

And that the city clerk cause publication of resolution to be made according to law. J. L. LELAND, City Clerk.

Notice. All members of International Builders' Labor Union No. 2 are requested to be at hall at 8 o'clock Thursday, the 14th. By order of J. K. RIMM, President. M. DAVIS, Sec. Secretary.

THREE KINDS OF TIME

Used At Leoti Kans. and It Sets Stranger Crazy.

ALL TIME IS SWEAR TIME

Mountain Time Change Causes Many Funny Incidents.

(Special Correspondence of the Eagle) Leoti, Kan., August 13.—The north shortgrass country of the Seventh district is just the same as that to the south, where Representative Long was campaigning last week, save that it is less sparsely settled. The people are the same; there is the same cattle industry; prosperity has come to the north end and south end alike; there is the same heartiness and hospitality—and here as last week to the south, Mr. Long has met with flattering receptions.

There is one thing particularly noticeable this year—the meetings are the largest Mr. Long ever has had. He always has good crowds in these small places, but the meetings this year without a single exception, excel previous ones. Two years ago, the campaign of this part of the district was made somewhat later, and there was then on a national campaign. Yet the meetings this year drew larger audiences than then.

And inasmuch as there is very little political excitement this year, the only conclusion—the only reason for the large meetings—must be on account of the people's desire to see their representative. And coupled with this is their wish for his success, and for his ultimate election to the United States senate, for this sentiment permeates the shortgrass country as does none other.

Mr. Long spoke yesterday in this little city of 200 people. It is the county seat of Wichita county, Wichita county, lying next to the Colorado line of counties, is given over to the cattle business, and to feed-farming. It is well settled for this section, and every one is doing well in his business. Conditions never were more thoroughly satisfactory in this county than now.

Mr. Long's treatment of reciprocity with Cuba received the same attention and commendation here as elsewhere. There has not been in this section, in the two weeks' campaign, a single manifestation of opposition to this doctrine. Everyone seems to favor it and to regard it as but natural and just.

Judge Charles E. Lobdell, of this judicial district, was present at the Leoti meeting and spoke with Mr. Long. Judge Lobdell, who formerly lived at Dighton, now lives at Scott, and was appointed district judge a year ago. He is now a candidate for election. Judge Lobdell served in the legislature continuously from 1881 to 1890, and was speaker in 1886. He was then chief clerk of the house of representatives in 1890 and 1891, and last winter resigned the position of county attorney for Lane county to succeed Judge J. E. Andrews, Populist, of Ness county, who has been judge of this district for eight years. The district is close, but Judge Lobdell will likely be elected.

This is the old home—and present one, too—of Frank E. Grimes, treasurer of state and manager for United States Senator J. R. Burton. Grimes came here a good many years ago, and first in a small store and then in the real estate business managed to keep the wolf from the door. He served six years as register of deeds of the county, and then two terms in the legislature—from 1886 to 1890. He was elected treasurer of state in 1898 and re-elected in 1900, and recently "retired" from politics.

This county is for Chester I. Long for United States senator. It is for him so hard that it has two Republican candidates for the legislature—one instructed in a regular convention for him; the other out in a card declaring for him. As told in these columns yesterday, these men are Fred Friar, regular nominee, and Oera Wyckoff, independent, both from this county. Friar, being the regular nominee, will probably win, though the race will be a close one.

One could get along very well in this town if it were not for the different kinds of time observed by the inhabitants. Of course, strictly speaking, the time should be mountain time, or one hour later than Wichita time. It changes from central to mountain at Holistown, on the Missouri Pacific, as at Dodge City, on the Santa Fe. But about the only people who observe mountain time here are the railroad people. The Missouri Pacific is the road and its employees here use this time. Most of the inhabitants use central time, but a large portion of them go by "sun" time—just why, no one seems to know, and the conflict of the three causes much worry and profanity among visitors. For instance, a man arrives here from the west on the Missouri Pacific at 6:30 p. m., mountain time. He consults the hotel, and finds that as it is 7:30 by central time—the kind the hotel uses—he can get no supper. He has an appointment with some one for 8 o'clock, mountain time, as he supposes. The man comes about forty minutes ahead of that, or on "sun" time. Another may be due the same hour, and come one hour ahead of that. See the reason that he goes by central time. And to stay here long enough to make a conflict, would drive the ordinary man to distraction or something worse.

Clyde Alphin is a young man of this town who two years ago was working in his father's store. He had a high school education, and was somewhat uncertain what he should do. Now he has graduated from the State University law school and is the Republican nominee for county attorney. That's the way they do in the short grass country.

Monday the wind swept across this section almost in a gale, and it was very cool for this time of year. Yesterday the warm sunshine, which was not scorching, but merely pleasant, kissed the brown prairie, and only a soft breeze stirred. This is the shortgrass way; but with all the changes, the shortgrass people tell you there is no section of country on earth to compare with theirs—and they are two-thirds right.

WILL BEEHIVE 'EM

French Threaten to Show Soldiers a Hot Time IF THEY ATTACK NUNS

OKLAHOMA BANKS AND CONDITIONS

(Continued from Second Page) against deposits which fluctuate with far greater rapidity and in greater amount than in Oklahoma than in the older states. In Iowa, Illinois or Missouri, when a farmer sells his place and moves to another locality, the matter is quite an incident; and while conditions here are constantly improving, the fact that a man remains on a farm for a number of years is an incident. This necessitates loans being placed very largely on chattel mortgage security, the exemption law being very favorable to the debtor.

"The great volume of clearing for Oklahoma banks is done through Kansas City; and for the greater portion of the territory that city is the logical clearing point, as well as the logical market for cattle and wheat; the cotton being moved southward to the Gulf. The present prospect for a good cotton and corn crop was never better, and the Oklahoma banker, whose prosperity is closely dependent upon the growth of all the industries, and the prosperity of all classes of the people, has every reason for congratulation. He lives in a land of splendidly varied resources, and a people of magnificent skill and industry, a people who have with characteristic westery, in the period of thirteen years since the territory was first opened for settlement, transformed the wild plains and lonely woodlands, inhabited only by the red man, into a prosperous commonwealth, justly and honestly proud of its advance over all these lines which make a state great and a government glorious. This grand result has been contributed to in a large measure by the bankers of Oklahoma, who realize that the building up of their banks can be best accomplished by the upbuilding of every other legitimate industry. Their operations of expansion in this respect are ever greater. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"If the people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

WILL BEEHIVE 'EM

French Threaten to Show Soldiers a Hot Time IF THEY ATTACK NUNS

OKLAHOMA BANKS AND CONDITIONS

(Continued from Second Page) against deposits which fluctuate with far greater rapidity and in greater amount than in Oklahoma than in the older states. In Iowa, Illinois or Missouri, when a farmer sells his place and moves to another locality, the matter is quite an incident; and while conditions here are constantly improving, the fact that a man remains on a farm for a number of years is an incident. This necessitates loans being placed very largely on chattel mortgage security, the exemption law being very favorable to the debtor.

"The great volume of clearing for Oklahoma banks is done through Kansas City; and for the greater portion of the territory that city is the logical clearing point, as well as the logical market for cattle and wheat; the cotton being moved southward to the Gulf. The present prospect for a good cotton and corn crop was never better, and the Oklahoma banker, whose prosperity is closely dependent upon the growth of all the industries, and the prosperity of all classes of the people, has every reason for congratulation. He lives in a land of splendidly varied resources, and a people of magnificent skill and industry, a people who have with characteristic westery, in the period of thirteen years since the territory was first opened for settlement, transformed the wild plains and lonely woodlands, inhabited only by the red man, into a prosperous commonwealth, justly and honestly proud of its advance over all these lines which make a state great and a government glorious. This grand result has been contributed to in a large measure by the bankers of Oklahoma, who realize that the building up of their banks can be best accomplished by the upbuilding of every other legitimate industry. Their operations of expansion in this respect are ever greater. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"If the people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

WILL BEEHIVE 'EM

French Threaten to Show Soldiers a Hot Time IF THEY ATTACK NUNS

OKLAHOMA BANKS AND CONDITIONS

(Continued from Second Page) against deposits which fluctuate with far greater rapidity and in greater amount than in Oklahoma than in the older states. In Iowa, Illinois or Missouri, when a farmer sells his place and moves to another locality, the matter is quite an incident; and while conditions here are constantly improving, the fact that a man remains on a farm for a number of years is an incident. This necessitates loans being placed very largely on chattel mortgage security, the exemption law being very favorable to the debtor.

"The great volume of clearing for Oklahoma banks is done through Kansas City; and for the greater portion of the territory that city is the logical clearing point, as well as the logical market for cattle and wheat; the cotton being moved southward to the Gulf. The present prospect for a good cotton and corn crop was never better, and the Oklahoma banker, whose prosperity is closely dependent upon the growth of all the industries, and the prosperity of all classes of the people, has every reason for congratulation. He lives in a land of splendidly varied resources, and a people of magnificent skill and industry, a people who have with characteristic westery, in the period of thirteen years since the territory was first opened for settlement, transformed the wild plains and lonely woodlands, inhabited only by the red man, into a prosperous commonwealth, justly and honestly proud of its advance over all these lines which make a state great and a government glorious. This grand result has been contributed to in a large measure by the bankers of Oklahoma, who realize that the building up of their banks can be best accomplished by the upbuilding of every other legitimate industry. Their operations of expansion in this respect are ever greater. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"If the people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any such banks, they would have had them long ago. They are the custodians of the people's money, placed in their hands without a word being spoken, with fullest confidence that it will be properly invested, safely kept, and promptly paid on demand.

"The people want good, safe banks in which to deposit their money, and to which they may apply for proper accommodations to assist them in the conduct of their enterprises, banks which will centralize the surplus capital of their respective localities and place them in the legitimate channels of trade and industry, they may, in a large measure, have just such banks as they want. If they have had any