

Daily Eagle
M. M. MURDOCK, R. P. MURDOCK,
Editors and Business Managers.

Wichita people out of town for the summer can have the Eagle follow them by giving their address to their carrier, or at the office, without extra charge.

Terms of Subscription.
DAILY, BY CARRIER, 10c PER WEEK.

(In Advance postage prepaid.)
Daily, one copy, one year, $4.00

AMUSEMENTS
CRAWFORD THEATER
E. L. MARTLING, Manager

Monday Matinee and Night, October 13
STETSON'S
Original Big Double Spectacular.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN CO.
Under the management of Leon W. Washburn.

ONE NIGHT ONLY
Tuesday, October 14
The Big Musical Comedy

"Over the Fence"
Fourth Year of This Big Fun Show

TOLER AUDITORIUM
H. G. Toler & Son, Proprietors

All Week, Excepting Wednesday
Noble Dramatic Co.
Band and Orchestra

Monday, October 13th
In the Grand Scenic Production of

"Michael Strogoff"
ELEGANTLY STAGED.

LECTURE
Miss Ellen Stone
October 22, '02
At Toler Auditorium

Typewriters bought, sold, repaired and rented. All makes. Sold on payments.

Now is the time to buy baby food.
Prices reasonable and prompt delivery.

A demonstration of Eastman's Daylight
Developing Machine will be given at Toler's.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
Has been used for over FIFTY YEARS

Attend Wichita Business College, Wash
Building, 114-116 North Market St.

Piano Tuner.
J. Leo Phillips will be here in October.

JOKE TO THE STUDENTS
James Davis, Founder of Friends University, was here.

Sturgeon & Lyman Invest in a New Livestock Vehicle.

Luther Watson Received Serious Injuries on a Farm.

HORSE ATTACKED HIM
Luther Watson, the son of J. H. Watson,

CASTORIA.
The Kind You Want Always Bought

MAY OPEN NEW STORE
Topeka Merchant May Locate in Wichita.

A. C. Storm, proprietor of a Topeka furnishing store, was in the city

CASTORIA.
The Kind You Want Always Bought

WICHITANS BACK FROM MEXICO

Colony of Americans to Be Founded in Chihuahua.

ALL WANTED IS IRRIGATION
Promoters Report Good Soil and Varied Vegetation.

H. H. Dedrick, the attorney, and J. Harvey Horner, who have been on a business trip to Mexico, returned to Wichita last Tuesday.

The gentlemen's business in the sister republic was to promote a colonization idea in the state of Chihuahua, and they report themselves as satisfied with the feasibility of the project and they will bend every effort and spend much energy in making the proposition go.

In the state of Chihuahua, near the city of Casa Grande and surrounding the town of Galliana is an immense tract of unoccupied land which needs only irrigation to make it the most productive in the world. It is so situated that by constructing a dam across a canyon the water so saved will be sufficient to irrigate 40,000 acres, and these acres will be added to the syndicate of individuals who shall construct the dam.

Likewise will the Mexican government allow to enter free of duty all implements, appliances and appliances that may be needed to the colonist who shall settle upon the land; but the government stipulates that the dam to be erected shall be of certain dimensions and construction, so that all possibility of accidents from faulty building shall be eliminated. The structure must be thirty-two feet in height, forty feet in thickness at the base and twenty-two feet at the top; it must be built of rock and cement, and no dirt will be allowed in its construction.

The Wichitans, after looking carefully over the ground and consulting the Mexican authorities, believe that they have a good thing in prospect and that with a railroad from Casa Grande to Galliana—a distance of forty-six miles—an American colony of hustlers can make a garden spot of this section.

In addition to the 40,000 acres which should prove a good thing, with water in abundance, there are about 30,000 acres of grazing land lying above the valley, and which can sustain vast numbers of cattle, sheep and goats.

Messrs. Dedrick and Horner report that the soil in the section they wish to gain possession of is so productive that with the irrigation promised five crops of alfalfa can be raised in a year; that they have seven corn grown there the stalks of which were sixteen feet high and which held three ears each, and that a crop easily reaches seventy or eighty bushels to the acre. All the cereals can be raised and all small fruits grown. They regard the country as a paradise for the farmer and a good place for the homing city dweller. The gentlemen affirm that there will never be a scarcity of water for all purposes of plentiful irrigation, as the Sierra Madre river, from which the water will be drawn and dammed, will always give a generous supply. The Wichitans are sanguine of interesting a sufficiency of capital in the enterprise, believing that such an investment can be shown to be a good thing. With a dam constructed and a railroad built by American capital the sale of farms and lots to American colonists ought to go.

One Fare for the Round Trip.
To Boston and return, via Nickel Plate road, October 7th to 11th, account meeting of Brotherhood of St. Andrews. By depositing tickets at Boston and paying fee of 5c, extended return limit of November 13th may be obtained. Through continued sleeping-cars and first-class service in every respect. Cheap rates to all New England points. Write John Y. Calahan, 112 Adams St., Chicago, for particulars.

BE SURE TO REGISTER TODAY.
ALL WERE WELL PLEASED.

B. F. Dunn Arrives at Washington With Excursionists.

Regular meeting of Wichita Lodge, No. 97, O. O. F., this evening at 7:30 sharp, over 100 North Main street. Degree staff, please be present, ready for work in initiatory degree. Visitors made welcome.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a bread, cake and pie sale all day Saturday, October 11, at Sturgeon's grocery store, corner of Second and Main street. All friends are requested to bring something for the sale.

Special Round-Trip Excursion Rates to New York.

Via Nickel Plate road. Tickets on sale October 10 to 18th, inclusive, good leaving New York not later than October 14th. Address John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 112 Adams street, Chicago, for reservation or sleeping-car space and other information.

LITTLE GRAIN MOVING
But Millers are Shipping a Great Deal of Flour.

The officials of the Missouri Pacific report that little wheat is being shipped at the present time. They say that there is plenty of wheat in the country, though which their road passes, but owing to the bad weather the past three or four weeks the farmers have found it impossible to haul their grain to market and the elevators along the line have about sold out their supply.

The railroad men say that there is very little corn being loaded, as it has been so wet to handle this cereal. They expect a big movement within a few weeks and are preparing for it.

Flour is moving from this section in large quantities. Every mill in the country near Wichita is shipping flour and the Missouri Pacific men say that they never had such heavy business in flour as they now have.

CASTORIA.
The Kind You Want Always Bought

Will make you SHREDDED WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT feel young again

CITY IN BRIEF.
J. Harvey Horner left last evening for Caldwell, Kan.

Mrs. J. J. Knapp has gone to Hastings, Nebraska, to visit friends.

Miss Mira Burt, of Chicago, is visiting the family of M. H. Burt.

Mr. Elbert Dumont, the architect, went to Kansas City last night.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Carleton returned from St. Louis yesterday morning.

Mrs. W. A. Stanford and daughter, Vivian, are in Iowa for a month's visit.

Mrs. Fred Heller and Miss Ella Heller left yesterday for a week's visit in Kansas City, Mo.

R. E. Torrington, division freight agent of the Santa Fe, left yesterday on a business trip to Guthrie, O. T.

T. B. Young was yesterday appointed administrator of the estate of Anna Wilder. The estate amounts to $400.

Dr. M. K. Pennington has returned from El Paso, Tex., and is looking after his business interests in Wichita.

Watershed Bros. will take two of their automobiles to the Cedarvale fair and will exhibit the Wichita product to the visitors.

J. D. Flinger, a representative of the Shawnee Fire Insurance company, with headquarters in Kansas City, was a Wichita visitor yesterday.

G. G. Gilkey, of Oshkosh, Wis., and Mrs. R. E. Root, of Onro, Wis., are visiting their sister, Mrs. C. W. Root, at her home, 436 South Water street.

Mr. T. L. Pegram, manager of the Rorabaugh store, has moved into the Sargent house on College Hill, where Mr. and Mrs. Pegram are at home to their friends.

Mrs. Mary Imhoff, who has been on a visit to Denver, Colo., returned yesterday and is at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. O. Simpson, 1942 South Emporia avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. N. McCormick left yesterday over the Santa Fe, for their home in Los Angeles, Cal., after spending the summer with their daughter, Mrs. E. P. Hill, of the West Side.

J. A. Quinn, superintendent of the western division of the Frisco, and J. P. Waldo, trainmaster of the same division, were in Wichita yesterday on business connected with the road.

A squad from company A. will go out for target practice on the Fairmount rifle range today. The squad will assemble at the armory at 9 a. m. and leave for the range on the 9:15 car.

C. H. Luling left last evening for Topeka, where he will attend a meeting of the World's Fair commission, which will receive from that state architect plans and specifications for the state building at St. Louis. The committee will today advertise for competitive designs.

COMING LOCAL EVENTS.
Regular meeting of Ida Rebekah Lodge, No. 119, tonight at 7:30, in their hall, corner Douglas avenue and Seneca street. Visitors welcome.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Central Christian church, will meet with Mrs. M. W. Cave, 161 North Market street this afternoon. Come early to quilt.

The regular monthly meeting of the C. W. B. M. of Central church will be held at the home of Mrs. E. H. Sanford, corner Eleventh and Carlos avenue, Friday at 2:30 p. m.

All Knights and Ladies of Security interested in the order should attend the installation of officers of Wichita Council No. 123, at the hall, over 111 South Main street, tonight.

The Young Men's Republican League will meet in adjourned session tonight at the Republican headquarters, 211 North Main street, for election of members and to arrange for parade.

Regular meeting of Wichita Lodge, No. 97, O. O. F., this evening at 7:30 sharp, over 10 North Main street. Degree staff, please be present, ready for work in initiatory degree. Visitors made welcome.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a bread, cake and pie sale all day Saturday, October 11, at Sturgeon's grocery store, corner of Second and Main street. All friends are requested to bring something for the sale.

Special Round-Trip Excursion Rates to New York.

Via Nickel Plate road. Tickets on sale October 10 to 18th, inclusive, good leaving New York not later than October 14th. Address John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 112 Adams street, Chicago, for reservation or sleeping-car space and other information.

LITTLE GRAIN MOVING
But Millers are Shipping a Great Deal of Flour.

The officials of the Missouri Pacific report that little wheat is being shipped at the present time. They say that there is plenty of wheat in the country, though which their road passes, but owing to the bad weather the past three or four weeks the farmers have found it impossible to haul their grain to market and the elevators along the line have about sold out their supply.

The railroad men say that there is very little corn being loaded, as it has been so wet to handle this cereal. They expect a big movement within a few weeks and are preparing for it.

Flour is moving from this section in large quantities. Every mill in the country near Wichita is shipping flour and the Missouri Pacific men say that they never had such heavy business in flour as they now have.

CASTORIA.
The Kind You Want Always Bought

HAVE RUN THEIR BLUFF

Continued from Fifth Page.

and written thereon the oath and affidavit of said presiding officer and secretary that the aforesaid certificate and statements therein made were duly authenticated certificate thereon that such oath had been taken and administered by a competent officer, by whom the same was duly signed and attested. And said certificate of Democratic nomination, when so executed, complied with and was made upon a blank form, approved by the attorney general, and furnished therefore by the secretary of the state, and showed by a representation thereof the aforesaid Democratic device and emblem to designate and distinguish the candidates of the Democratic party; and said certificate was, on the 2nd day of September, 1902, duly filed with said secretary of state, and no objection thereto has ever been filed.

That a delegate state convention of the aforesaid People's party portion of the qualified voters of the state of Kansas called by their said executive state committee, duly constituted and organized, was held in the city of Topeka on the 25th day of June, 1902, and said last named convention, being thereto duly authorized, resolved upon, adopted and declared its policy of public policy not promulgated by any other political party or organization of voters, as instructions to the persons to constitute its ticket upon the ballot and to be nominated by said People's party convention for the several offices to be filled at the ensuing state election of November 4th, 1902, to be holding upon said date, severally and adhered to and carried out by them respectively in the event of their election, among others the following:

In favor of graduated taxation, state insurance, and the establishing of a printing plant to be owned by the state to reduce expenditures for state printing.

And that said convention was then and there by the due and formal action of said People's party convention, duly nominated to go upon its ticket as the People's party candidate for the office of governor at said ensuing state election of November 4th, 1902, the following named persons, with their respective residences added to their signatures, which certificate contained the names of each person nominated by said convention, his residence, his business and the office for which he was nominated, and which certificate contained the name of the person nominated for the office of governor as that for which he had been so nominated as representing the People's party, and "Peoples Party" as the political designation which said convention represented; to which certificate was added and attached thereon the oath and affidavit of said presiding officer and secretary that the aforesaid certificate and statements therein were true, and the duly authenticated certificate thereon that such oath was executed, complied with and was made upon a blank form, approved by the attorney general and furnished therefore by the secretary of the state, and showed by a representation thereof the aforesaid Democratic device and emblem to designate and distinguish the candidates of the People's party; and said certificate was, on the 4th day of September, 1902, duly filed with the secretary of state, and no objection thereto has ever been filed.

That said convention endorses and approves of the said resolutions and declared its policy of public policy of both said Democratic and People's party nominations, and is willing to recognize and receive the same as the constitutional instructions of the people to their representatives and to pledge himself to the people to adhere to and carry out the same in the event of his election, shall pertain to the discharge of said office of governor, to which he has been so nominated by both of said conventions; that sections 1, 4, 6, 13 and 14 of chapter 123 of the Session Laws of 1901 provide that individual voters representing five per cent of all the voters may petition for the nomination of candidates to go upon the official ballot in their supreme and independent character of qualified electors of the state; and that said convention desired to accept both said Democratic and People's party nominations, each without prejudice to the other, and to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act, chapter 177, Session Laws of 1901, providing, without constitutional authority, that such conventions serve only as the subordinate means by which such nominations are made; and that said convention desired to have the secretary of state certify his name to the county clerk of each county in the state as the person nominated to the office of governor by, and to go printed and placed as such upon the official ballot to be used at said ensuing election, under the party appellation and title of both said Democratic party and People's party; and that said convention believed that the right so to do is included in and not repealed by the subsequent act,