CALLING NOT PROFITABLE. Some Changes in the Style of Thunder and Snow Flakes.

Through the long history of theatrical scene-painting—and it goes back to the shadowy days of the Maquies, when privileged spectators sat on the stage at the feet of the actors—there has been a strong desire among playgoers to penetrate the mysteries of stage-craft.

that the effect of a blizzard is produced in a moment and any place decreed by the sun-astrologer. Flashed lightning no longer requires zigzag reeds in a canvas, back of which vivid light periodically is flashed. It is produced by stereoscopic play. There is no sheet-lighting—literally speaking. But there is a thunder-sheet and a thunder-choir. The tin-der-sheet is antiquated. The chute is seriously modern. Yet no one ever has fallen from its open mouth. This cavity yawns directly under the roof, and a property-man must make the descent to drop the cannon-balls into the long wooden tube. The chute runs in an angular course around the stage, and is provided with valves of iron, against which the cannon-balls fall when the storm is violent and sharp reports of thunder are needed.

The scene-painter today must be at least an archaeologist, architect, illustrator, and painter. He first receives the manuscript of the play and at once its contents in one swift glance. He sketches on paper his idea of the scene, points and mounts each piece in the set on a miniature stage. The result is the "model" which he submits to the stage manager for suggestion or approval. In the small trial-picture no detail is omitted. In a meadow scene tiny wooden cattle were introduced to simulate realism, and the great artist often pauses in his painting to build a diminutive bench with a block of wood and four nails, or tacks to serve for legs.

The good that scene-painters do seldom lives long after them. And their actual income from the fabulous sums that managers spend every year in productions is less than a favorite "leading-man" receives. The money placed at their disposal is unlimited in planning a production, but their own compensation is seldom very great. Out of this they pay rent for their work, for the lighting scene-painters today (for the most part) are assistants. Forty dollars a week is the average remuneration of assistants.

TO A HIGH POSITION. Humor Has It that Bishop Hennessey is Slated for One.

The following dispatch was received in this city last night: "St. Louis, Oct. 29.—A letter received from a clergyman in New York who has just returned from Rome, states that the Right Rev. Bishop Hennessey of Wichita, Kan., is to be appointed coadjutor to Archbishop Kain. The appointment of Father Harry as auxiliary bishop, as requested by Archbishop Kain, will be made, but at the same time, or shortly thereafter, Bishop Hennessey will be appointed coadjutor, carrying with it the right of succession. Bishop Hennessey was pastor of St. John's church, this city, when appointed to his present position, and has a host of friends among the laity and clergy here, to whom the announcement of his coming appointment will prove an agreeable surprise."

TREES OF GERMAN FOILAGE. Court House Lawn to be Decorated With New Adornment.

Yesterday Marshall Beck received from Rochester, N. Y., eight trees of German foliage. They are the trees and their foliage is beautiful. At present, in their first growth, they resemble very much an apple tree sprig, but when they grow a little larger they will make a great addition to the appearance of the court house lawn. Mr. Beck will put them out today, and yesterday was busy with the measuring of the distance which he is going to place them. There will be four on each side of the court house, equally distant apart and half way between the building and the outer walk.

ADDITIONAL CITY NEWS

WITNESS FOR DEFENSE. Dr. S. N. Mayberry of Enid, O. T., Tells of Richards Case.

A new witness in the Richards case has appeared. He is Dr. S. N. Mayberry, of Enid, O. T. Dr. Mayberry will make a very valuable witness for the defense for he attended the baby that was alleged to have been murdered by the adopting parents. Dr. Richards and his wife were committed to the county jail on this charge. The baby that was alleged to have been killed was taken by Dr. Richards to keep as his own from a home in this city. When it was returned here it was in a terrible condition and did not live long. The defendants had had hearings, but each home has been continued because of the ill health of the doctor.

Dr. Mayberry is chief surgeon of the R. E. line, the Denver, Enid & Gulf and the Southwestern. He declares that he attended the baby when it was first taken sick and about ten days before it was brought up to Wichita. He says that he could hardly believe it when he read in the Eagle that Dr. Richards and his wife had been charged with the baby's murder. He says that he feels they are innocent of intentionally killing the baby and that he would have taken care of the one so young. He bases his belief on the experience he had with these same people when they lived at Rusk, O. T. While Dr. Richards got sick and Dr. Mayberry was called from Enid to look after the case. He found the patient in very bad shape. The doctor says that this was the first time that he ever knew the people had a baby and then only found it out by accident. He went through the house on the way out and found the wife of Dr. Richards rocking a baby in a cradle. He asked about the baby and inquired about it. The mother said that it was not very well and so he made an examination of the little one. He found that it was not kept clean and its little clothes were covered with sour stuff that it had vomited. He told the mother that the trouble was in the stomach and that she should keep the baby clean and only feed it certain food. He says Mrs. Richards seemed very interested and anxious to know just what to do for the child. He says that he never knew until some time afterwards that the baby was an adopted one.

Dr. Mayberry says that he has had some little business with Richards while he was at Rusk and although he found that he and his wife were rather poor people, he found them to be honest and good. When the case comes up for hearing in the city court, this gentleman will in all probability be subpoenaed by the defense to testify to what he knows of the case.

WAS MYSTERIOUS DEATH. Mrs. Nina Miller Died Very Suddenly at Her Home.

Mrs. Nina Miller, wife of W. S. Miller and daughter of Elder Burton Mathis, 26 years old died at her home near Coldwater, Kansas, October 29, 1902, was brought to Harper and buried in the Harper cemetery the 24th of October.

About four years ago she was converted and united with the First Baptist church of Wichita, was baptized by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Warman.

She was taken sick very suddenly soon after supper. The doctor was sent for and arrived at 10 o'clock a. m. He thought she came to her death by the effects of morphine, but it yet remains a profound mystery as to why or how it occurred, as nothing of the kind could be found about the house.

Her husband and a neighbor girl were the only ones present when she was taken sick.

CORN ON THE MOVE. Many Shipments Made to Texas from Kansas.

The corn of Kansas and especially of the southwest, has commenced to move, although the shortage in cars has been released but little. Shipments are being made to Texas and a great deal of corn, chop, and meal are going out of this state into the big state south of here.

Each of the southwest and other products are high priced in Wichita and this condition of affairs will not be relieved until the corn rolls in in such quantity that the supply will bring the price down. It costs so much to eat much now that it tastes like hot iron.
