

BEVERIDGE SUBSTITUTE IS ROASTER

by irrigation in New Mexico as at present developed. It is hoped that a system for the impounding of waters, not only of the flood waters in streams, but also of the water from rains, will enable the people to more largely indulge in successful agriculture. This, however, is declared by scientists who have given the subject special and practical study to be a question of a generation, or even more. (Continuity of F. N. Newell, pp. 14, 17.)

"Agriculture by irrigation is very largely an adjunct to stock raising, although fruits and the cereals are also successfully grown by means of it. The second industry and first in point of importance is herding and stock raising. For cattle this is successful for five miles on either side of a stream, or on what are called 'water holes,' in the foothills. (Testimony of Martinez Amador, p. 16; F. N. Newell, pp. 15, 16; Governor Brodie, p. 15, and others.)

"The capacity of the territory for stock raising can therefore be determined with comparative accuracy. For horses a still wider range is possible while sheep thrive where neither horses nor cattle can prosper. But when sheep are introduced into a region it seriously interferes with the grazing of cattle, for the reason that the sheep closely crop all edible herbage, leaving nothing for the cattle to subsist upon.

The committee is very complimentary of Oklahoma. It reported as follows on Oklahoma and Indian Territory:

"In striking contrast to the unpreparedness for statehood of Arizona and New Mexico is the preparedness of Oklahoma and Indian Territory. The population of Oklahoma, according to the census of 1890, was 28,737, of the Indian Territory, 22,098. Personal inspection will convince anyone that the life of immigration since that census was taken has swollen the population in these two territories combined to at least a million and in all probability over that. Excellent lands still unoccupied in Oklahoma in 1890 have been taken up with amazing rapidity every day since and the progress continues, while the immigration into the Indian Territory can not be appreciated had even believed until the evidences of it are witnessed.

"And of the hundreds of thousands of people in the Indian Territory less than 87,000 are Indians. This fact is important to those who have taken it for granted that the population of the Indian Territory is of the latter race. The fact is that the Indian Territory can not be appreciated had even believed until the evidences of it are witnessed.

"All the conditions prevail which work for the absorption of this heterogeneous element into the body of our homogeneous citizenship.

"While no comparison is made of the Indians of the Indian Territory with the so-called Mexicans of New Mexico (although the latter are of Mexican, Indian and Spanish blood), this comparison can be justly made, that whereas in New Mexico, out of an aggregate population of 150,319, a great majority are Spanish-speaking natives, belonging by descent, tradition, instinct and speech to another civilization and system of institutions, in the Indian Territory, out of an aggregate population of between 500,000 and 500,000 less than 57,000 are Indians, the overwhelming body of the people being immigrants from other states of the Union, the children and products of our institutions, 'bone of our bone and blood of our blood.'

"The great body of Oklahoma is magnificently developed. It is a farming land unsurpassed in fertility and loveliness by any section of the Union. The principal towns, quite equal to those of the central states, are the universal rule, instead of the oasis-like exception. Four or five of Oklahoma's cities are beyond any praise in their solidity of their business houses, the affluence of their newspapers and the beauty and perfection of their streets.

"There is one daily newspaper in Oklahoma with a bona fide circulation of 18,000. There are wholesale houses that do a business of $1,000,000 a year, and one or two that reach the proportions of over two million annually. Railroad traffic, both passenger and freight, is unsurpassed by any similar agricultural region of the United States. The school development throughout the territory is superb. The homes and barns of the farmers in no other portion of the territory, and no portion of the territory is much older than a decade, are commodious, handsome and unsurpassed, if, indeed, on the average, they are equalled elsewhere in the whole country.

"The resources of Oklahoma territory are purely agricultural and all cereals are raised with ease and in abundance, and cotton is one of the staple products of this region.

"But the proposition to admit this territory as a single state is not tenable. Its size is much below that of any western state. It must not be forgotten that the originally Oklahoma was taken piecemeal from the Indian Territory. Its boundaries are accidental, accidental and grotesque, being unknown to or sought out by the committee at Las Cruces, and who impressed every member with his sincerity, wisdom and truthfulness, proves this. The testimony is as pathetic as it is convincing, and we call to it particularly at this time.

"In conclusion, the truth must be stated that the people of New Mexico do not want statehood. The testimony of Martinez Amador, a Mexican farmer, who (uncompensated and unasked, because unknown to us) sought out the committee at Las Cruces, and who impressed every member with his sincerity, wisdom and truthfulness, proves this. The testimony is as pathetic as it is convincing, and we call to it particularly at this time.

"The committee is further convinced that this proposition to statehood for New Mexico is by no means confined to this simple Mexican farmer and the great class for whom he speaks. It is true that no other rancher, farmer or merchant appeared before the committee to the same effect; but the committee has found reasons for believing that large numbers of them are earnestly against the proposition of New Mexican statehood. It is not believed that any advocate of New Mexican statehood competent to speak will testify, under oath, that there is unanimity in favor of the proposition even among the most substantial business men, farmers and cattlemen of the territory.

"It is the further belief of the committee that a large portion of the people are indifferent to and ignorant of the question. (Testimony of Martinez Amador, p. 16.) If it be said that that nothing is easier than to appeal to a people like the native New Mexican with statements that there is something which he has not in order which will be of value to him in order to make him desire it, without understanding in the least just what it is that he is deprived of. It is a cheap and familiar device, formerly used in our own states, but now happily abandoned before the enlightenment and independence of civil action and highly developed civilization. If it be said that this argument is not sound, the answer is that the people have more than once rejected a consultation for statehood.

"This suggests another and final grave condition, common alike to New Mexico and Arizona, namely, not only the smallness of their population, but the thin scattering of the same over enormous distances of vast domain. Arizona has 11 persons for each square mile; New Mexico has 1.6 persons for each square mile. Among this scattered population the means of communication are few and ineffective. The gravity of this political condition and in that close association which is the prime factor in a high civilization will be appreciated when you reflect that in Massachusetts the population is 245 to the square mile; in Pennsylvania, 140 to the square mile; in New Jersey, 233 to the square mile.

"In addition to the above the house bill known as the 'omnibus' bill is defective in many important particulars, some of which are worthy of note as indicating ideas prevailing there of a state under the constitutional form of government. For example, that portion of the so-called 'omnibus' bill providing for the admission of Arizona makes in the bill itself an appropriation for the constitutional convention. The following resolutions are given, with the following counties, with the population of each county:

County. Del. Popula- tion. Apache 2 8,295 Cochise 4 9,251 Coconino 4 4,973 Gila 2 14,182 Maricopa 5 29,467 Mohave 2 3,426 Navajo 2 8,829 Pima 3 14,880 Pinal 3 7,778 Santa Cruz 2 4,546 Yavapai 4 13,796 Yuma 2 4,115

"This apportionment requires either no comment or else extended explanation. The apportionment becomes more puzzling the more it is studied. The 'omnibus' bill also is singularly inharmonious in methods provided for the admission of the respective territories; and this lack of harmony in its provisions can be accounted for by the committee only upon the principle that the admission of each territory is a proposition standing by itself and that they are incapable of consideration bunched together. If this is not the explanation, the true explanation can probably be given by those who favor the so-called 'omnibus' bill.

"In conclusion, the committee asks the senate to consider the following resolutions: 'If it is a mistake not to admit these territories at the present time, it is a mistake which can be remedied by any future congress. If it is a mistake to admit them, and that mistake is consummated, it never can be undone.

"The committee feel that it is better and wiser for the territories themselves, and for the nation, that they shall wait until development which the resources claimed by their advocates will justify. When that occurs, when all of the requisites for statehood shall have been supplied, the members of the committee who are against the present admission of these territories in their present state will be an enthusiastic and earnest for their admission as their most ardent advocates.'
