At the Crawford. ARE YOU A MASON?

The Crawford theatre soon will be presented the big farce-comedy success "Are You a Mason," which is now in its third season. A finger nail analysis of "Are You a Mason?" would run something like this: distinctively original, a great laugh-producer, fun galore, comedy exceptionally pure, wit trenchant, dialogue bright and smooth. The story of the play concerns the Bloodgood family, the head of which is a gay old blade who has deceived his wife during many years by pretending to be a Mason—his wife having originally requested him to join a Masonic lodge. Frank Perry, a young New Yorker, has married one of the Bloodgood's three daughters. His wife has also requested him to join a Masonic lodge and he follows in the footsteps of his father-in-law and also makes the pretense of having joined the craft. The trials of the two husbands are made still more complicated by the appearance of a friend named Harlow who is asked by Mrs. Bloodgood to join the Masonic lodge. The presence later of a real Mason entangles affairs still further. The mixing continuing through the last act, when everything is satisfactorily explained, and all ends happily.

THE TYRANNY OF TEARS

Those husbands whose wives resort to tears as a weapon of offense and defense will be amused at Paul Gilmer's admirable management of his stage-wife in Haddon Chambers' amusing play, "The Tyranny of Tears," which will be presented here soon.

THE CARPENTER COMPANY

With the instinct of genuine dramatic genius, the author of the play, "For Her Sake," the new Russo-Siberian melodrama which is to be presented at the Crawford tonight, appears to have drawn from the uttermost extremes of society for the characters whom he purposed to involve in intrigue. The hero of the play is a Russian nobleman and army officer; the heroine is a Russian serf girl. With these for the central figures, the playwright has grouped together a big array of characters, embracing soldiers, convicts, people of fashion, travelers, nihilists and a half dozen other sorts of people. The company playing the piece, as may be inferred, is an unusually large one.

TWO JOLLY ROVERS

The "Two Jolly Rovers" carry strong leading specialties, including the St. Leon family of acrobats, eight in number—four ladies, four gentlemen, in feats of darning strength and aerial evolutions. Four Miltons in a musical comedy sketch, "Uncle Silas in Boston," presenting Mr. Frank Milton's realistic character of the New England farmer, also introducing Saxophone quartette, bell ringing, etc. The funny sketch duo, Bramare and Clark, in a melange of wit, songs and dances. Miss Gertrude in Hungarian character dances, Miss Lola Milton, rag-time singer. Mr. Billy Howard, German dialect comedian; all taken as a whole makes an evening's amusement rarely given on one program.

This company comes to Wichita next Thursday night, January 22, at the Crawford.

"Way Down East" last night played to the largest audience ever in the Crawford opera house. The standing room sign was hung up almost as soon as the doors opened. The advance sale had been phenomenal and the house was crowded from top to bottom. Mr. Martling stated last night that this was the largest house a show ever played to in this city.

And the play and players deserved it. Wm. A. Brady, manages lots of shows and everything that starts out of New York with Wm. A. Brady's stamp is good, the best that is going in every way—good pieces, actors of ability and good scenery. All these combined made the performance last night a most enjoyable one and one long to be remembered by the theater-going people of Wichita.

Some storm scenes have been given in Wichita before, but none so real as the one in the third act of "Way Down East." A person could almost feel the cold when the door was opened. Every part of the scenery is carried by the company and is especially adapted to the different scenes.

The persons who carried the various parts were of exceptional ability. There was Ed Gorman, the towns constable, with his cracked voice; Martha Perkins, the town gossip, played by Vera Ordein; Henry Auerbach as H. Heller, the chair boy who laughed at everything; A. H. Elberts as Prof. Sterling. All these were good. Ruby Bridges, as Anna Moore, and Grace Romine, as the squirrel's wife, played their parts as well as they could. The scene was emotion in each part and this was brought out in a most intense manner and kept the audience interested. These characters grew in strength as the play progressed.

One of the most of the so-called rural plays, "Way Down East" has a well defined plot, which is unfolded in a straightforward clean-cut way that never permits the interest to subside for a moment. It carries out the story without unnecessary words, and there are no long drawn out speeches to tire or retard the action of the play. The dialogue is indicative and to the point.

"Help around the house." Here she meets the man who betrayed her. He is an honored guest and is making love to the girl's niece. He tries to drive Anna away, but she becomes almost one of the family. David, the son, falls in love with her, and when a portion of her secret is exposed and she is driven out into the raging snowstorm she tells the whole truth, denounces the villain, and is followed into the night.

At the Toler. THE KILTIES ARE COMING

The famous Kilties' band of Canada, will give its first visit to Wichita Saturday afternoon and evening next. Headed by the great drum-major, buglers and bagpipers, they will parade at noon. The Western Musician says: "The Kilties' band (Gordon Highlanders of Canada) under the leadership of Mr. Wm. E. Robinson has during its extended tours of the United States taken a foremost place among the great musical organizations of this continent. The novelty of the Kilties' entertainment (which consists of band music, vocal choruses, Highland dancing, bagpiping, vocal soloists, grand drum major, boy dancer, buglers, drummers, etc.) coupled with the extremely picturesque kilts costume have given the Kilties a unique position among amusement organizations. The organization is not directly associated with any Canadian regiment, but its members are all British or Canadian born and are practically all graduates of Scottish-Canadian regiments. Mr. Cameron Brown of Bellville, Canada, owner of the organization and president of its various tours, is a well known Scottish Canadian and Mr. T. P. J. Power, director of tour, has been associated with several of the biggest musical successes, but the Kilties have proved the greatest of them all. The Kilties have scored emphatic successes in all the larger cities of the United States, the crowds taxing the capacity of the largest auditoriums; they playing in one evening to over 8,000 persons at Madison Square Garden, New York, was one of the most striking successes ever known in the metropolis; while the audience at the Coliseum, Chicago, showed the largest number of paid admissions ever known in Chicago. At the Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, a great hit was scored. The Buffalo Review remarking: "It was impossible for the belated one to get near enough to the bandstand to get a good look at them in their picturesque costumes; it is estimated that the crowd which surrounded the bandstand numbered at least 10,000 people."

REAL ESTATE IS ACTIVE Several Deals in Residence Property Have Been Reported. Real estate agents report an active market. There are a large number of buyers looking at the present time and sales are being made daily. There seems to be no question but that prices will advance rapidly as soon as spring opens. Desirable close-in properties that can be bought at a reasonable figure are readily sold. The better class of property that is for sale is located until the first of April. As soon as these leases expire there will be a movement in these properties since the purchasers for this class of property are settled for the winter and do not care to change until spring. The Hartford Western Land company report the following sales:

ADD THE DATE TO YOUR LIST OF USEFUL FOODS. The dried dates of commerce, like figs, are the richest all fruits and the date palm is the most highly prized tree in the east, and an object of peculiar veneration to millions of the human race to whom it furnishes chief sustenance in its "dates of agate and Jasper." The date is as much a staple article of diet to the Egyptian as rice to the Hindu, and furnishes a greater variety of food and other life necessities. They are used fresh or dried, besides being used to furnish, by distillation, wine and vinegar. The immature pincakes of the flowers they use for food; oil is expressed from the seeds, and they are also roasted to furnish coffee. From the leaves and stems they furnish baskets, weave mats, hammocks, thatching for their dwellings, while the wood of the tree gives them timber and cordage from its fibers. Every part seems necessary for their comfort and existence.

Compare with rice, the carbohydrate in the date is almost solely present in the form of sugar; in rice it is presented mainly in the form of starch. Dates and good rich milk furnish an ideal meal for a person engaged in sedentary labor. Authorities give the constituent parts of dates as follows. More than two-thirds solid matter; about four per cent of flesh-forming substance; nearly fifty per cent sugar; mineral matter and considerable waste material. The date dried, will support life as long and well as rice, as it contains about the same proportion of heat-forming substance as rice. While the fruit brought to this country is highly esteemed, it is in no way regarded as a necessary or even a valuable food, except by the few who seek to introduce the simple and natural foods in our diet. There are many reasons why dates should recommend themselves to the home-provider. Chief among these, of course is the actual food value of the fruit, coupled with its extreme cheapness. They can be obtained all the year round and are most plentiful when fresh fruits are scarce. They are to be found in almost any place, are easily transported and seldom if ever sell for more than ten cents per pound, sometimes less. They are excellent for children as well as tempting to their appetite. Cheap, wholesome and toothsome, it is surprising that the average housewife does not more fully appreciate this addition to her sometimes meagre list of winter "treasures" for the table.

Date Cereal Mush. This served with good cream will give a hearty, wholesome and digestible breakfast. Put a quart of boiling water in a kettle with a little salt and slowly stir into the boiling water, through your fingers, enough entire whole wheat meal, about a cupful, to thicken to a soft mush; as soon as the meal begins to remain on top, enough has been added and water is absorbed. If more meal is added the mush will be lumpy. Let cook gently for twenty minutes and then stir in a cup of scalded dates, cover and cook ten minutes longer, then serve hot or cold, with cream.

Dates With Cream. Remove, cut the dates in strips and place in a glass dish; sprinkle with a little orange or pineapple juice and heap a pint of whipped cream over the top. Let get very cold before serving.

Date Cream. Put a quart of milk in a double boiler with a tablespoonful of blanched and chopped almonds and let it scald. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and a cup of sugar and beat to a cream with a tablespoonful of butter; add the milk slowly to this mixture and then return to the double boiler. Stir and cook smooth and thick, then add two cupfuls of stoned and skinned dates. Turn into a glass dish and get away to get very cold. Serve with chocolate sauce. Chocolate may be added to this pudding instead of flavoring with almonds. In this case serve a vanilla sauce instead of chocolate.

Date Puffs. Add half teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder to three cups of white or whole wheat flour. Separate two eggs, beat the yolks light and add to a large tablespoonful of butter creamed with a tablespoonful of sugar; then add two cupfuls of milk and the flour, etc., and lastly the beaten whites of the eggs. Turn into greased pans or pop-over pans and bake in a hot oven for twenty or twenty-five minutes.

Date and Apple Fluff. Prepare the apples same as for apple sauce, and when partially cooked add an equal quantity of stoned dates and stir and cook until later are tender; then press all through a sieve; return to the fire and cook until quite dry and firm then add sugar and butter to taste and cook awhile longer, until as stiff as before. Cool and add the whites of four eggs beaten very stiff, to one and a half cupfuls of sauce. Stir the egg whites in as lightly as possible to mix. Serve in banded in glasses or turn into a pudding dish and sprinkle with powdered sugar and bake in a slow oven for twenty or twenty-five minutes. Serve with apricot, orange or hard sauce.
