R. W. TURNER THE WINNER

Mankato's Favorite Son Was Elected Grand Master Workman.

FEARL FOR RECEIVER

Proposition for Biennial Sessions Was Carried.

The Workmen's grand lodge kept strictly in line with its traditions yesterday by the election of a gentleman of strength, intelligence and whole-souled earnestness in cooperative fraternity, to the highest office in the grand jurisdiction. Robert W. Turner, the new grand master is such a man. He was elected practically by acclamation, all the other candidates—Judge Foote, J. H. Crider and T. O. Kelly, all exceptionally strong men—withdrawal in his favor at the opening of the third ballot.

Mr. Turner is a scholar—able to speak several languages—besides having wide practical information from personal experience in foreign lands. More than that he knows all those things of state and popular interest which all Kansans aspire to know. In addition he is a splendid orator and every Workman feels that he will be an honor to the banner jurisdiction of the world, as Kansas now is.

The other officers elected yesterday—completing the list of grand officers—were Frank E. Fearl, of Hutchinson, for grand receiver, defeating John W. Breidenthal and W. H. L. Pepperell, H. V. Nelson, of McPherson, for grand trustee, defeating Ed Messer, of this city, by a few votes and John Damm, of Salina, and W. H. Smith, of Atchison for grand overseer.

Leavenworth was selected as the next place of meeting. The big event of the grand lodge was the changing of the constitution so that the grand lodge will meet every two years instead of one. All the great modern accomplishments of the grand lodge have been made in Wichita. For years the question whether meetings would be held annually or biennially has been up before the grand lodge, but never were the friends of the biennial sessions able to secure the necessary two-thirds vote. Last year at Fort Scott the Wichita delegation said there was a reform atmosphere in this city and promised the grand lodge if it came over here the same of the Peerless Princess of the same would inspire the objectors to vote in favor of the proposition and sure enough it did. It also was in Wichita that the classified plan was adopted. These two have been the most important reforms made by the grand lodge in several years.

The debate on the proposition to change the constitution with reference to grand lodge meetings was interesting from start to finish and lasted practically three hours. The two ablest champions of the once-a-year meeting were Supreme Master McCall and Tom Conroy. The champions on the other side were legion. The arguments advanced for the yearly meetings was that it would increase enthusiasm among the Workmen who would attend and that this enthusiasm would be carried home and disseminated among the local members. The argument of the opposition was that annual sessions of the grand lodge cost $3000 and that if abandoned for the biennial sessions that sum would be saved every two years. This argument was supplemented by such sentimental arguments as the giving of the savings to aid worthy brothers in distress or widows and orphans. This argument had a material influence in determining the result. Others less sentimental urged that the per capita tax be reduced to the extent of the reduced expenses. It was clear from the start that the biennial proposition was popular and would be a winner.

One of the results of the change is that the officers elected at this and subsequent elections will hold office two years instead of one. The substitute prepared by Joseph Kings, for the resolution that caused such long discussion Tuesday, relative to depositories for the grand lodge funds, carried by a unanimous vote. It provides that within twenty days after his election the grand receiver shall select one or more banks for the deposit of funds, that if he fails to do so for more than twenty days the grand master shall notify him of his neglect and if for ten more days he neglects to do so the grand master shall declare his office vacant and appoint a grand receiver to succeed him. The substitute also prescribes the details of selecting the depositories, the character of security they shall give and the payment of the cost of the grand receiver's bond.

The law committee made several minor reports through its chairman, T. O. Kelly, all of which were accepted and approved without contest or controversy. The grand lodge will adjourn some time this afternoon. Nothing will come before it today but routine business.

Regarding his election and the good of the order generally, R. W. Turner, the new grand master, spoke as follows yesterday to a reporter for the Eagle:

"I feel very highly honored by the election to be the grand master workman of this great jurisdiction of Kansas, especially after being preferred to the able and distinguished brothers who were aspirants with me for the honor. The unanimity with which they all united to assist me in the duties and responsibilities that are to come reminds me of the invisible pictures that were mentioned by Brother Past Grand Master Wallace in his talk at the reception of Brother McCall. I have had in the last few days many glimpses of the beautiful pictures that are seen by every Workman. Wm. Woodhead, of Hoyt, is one of the delegates to the grand lodge. He is the eldest son of S. H. Lindsie, 708 South Water. Mr. Woodhead is so much pleased with Wichita that he says he will return to Hoyt and dispose of his business there and then move to this city. He and Mr. Lindsie are old friends, the latter having recently moved his family here from Hoyt.

Judice Foote of Topeka made a very catchy speech in favor of biennial sessions.
