

SAN FRANCISCO LETTER.

EDITOR SATURDAY PRESS:—The sailing of the Suez on the morning gives me "opportunity to present the evidences of my distinguished consideration," and while the stock of news to draw from is meagre in the extreme, a word or so may not prove amiss, for with the adjournment of your "100 too" Legislature, and a consequent absence of its interesting proceedings, your prints must miss the "fat takes," and consequent editorial comment on the wisdom, financial ability, legal acumen, and economical ideas of the many law hammer-coated orators, of which the aforesaid legislature was largely composed. It has been my good fortune to have seen some of these same silver-tongued, after a hard day's work in the arena, after crossing-legged about a dish of poi and fish, some claw-hammer, some white-shirt, and I might almost say some everything; and can assert without fear of contradiction, that the last state of that man seemed more appropriate than the first.

PERSONALS. It may be in order for me to enquire if there are enough of our good old friends among the foreigners still residing in Honolulu, to properly represent the mercantile community, for with the arrival of every vessel, scores of your citizens are visiting us, the last two steamers proving no exception. Messrs. Aberton, Taylor, Spencer, Kennedy, Glade, Loom, Col. Allen and wife, Charles and George Carter, Roth, Helmsken and Kennedy formerly with Dillingham & Co., Mc Chesney, Macfie, Chapman, and last, but not the least, Gen. Comly and family. Some are about returning by this steamer, some have gone, or are going East, while those remaining here make the most of their time, enjoying the fair, theatres, rides, and certainly two young men of the Hawaiian community have caused a corner in the peach market. William Wilder and the twins have gone to Ohio, while Col. Judd and family are still enjoying the city preparatory to seeking crowns for the heretofore in the kingdom of the Hawaiians.

TRADE MATTERS. San Francisco is busy with orders in all branches of trade, but no complaint of overwork as yet; groceries and in fact staple goods in general command good figures. Freighters are lower with much like tonnage. Lumber is in demand at usual rates; all grades being full of orders, and many large mills declining from inability to saw sufficient for regular custom. Interest continues favorable for borrowers; building reports are satisfactory; vacant houses for rent cannot be obtained at favorable rates in eligible localities, while the disposition to foster manufacturing local interest continues, all of which induces the belief that we have entered upon a career of prosperity, based on a solid and enduring foundation.

STOCK GAMBLING. Heretofore, our state has been cursed by the periodical stock excitement, which, while drawing from saving banks the earnings of mechanics, has enriched only the few millionaires, but the disposition generally seems to have gambled to the "profession," while the stock excitement becomes less frequent. Values in stock matters increased very rapidly for a week, many well-known shares grew as if by magic three hundred per cent in a few days; but happily before the public fairly "caught on" the bottom dropped out, allowing a few to make wages, with little hope for further dear; the only explanation of the movement being that assessments had to be paid; the only way to the desirable end seemed to raise stocks for people to buy, which they would not touch at lower figures.

ELECTRICAL. The accounts from South America note the completion of telegraph lines through to Valparaiso. Messages can now be forwarded and answered in one hour from San Francisco, while electricity in another form has been successfully utilized by Edison, in New York, with the same facility as gas with meters in each house, the consumption being regulated at will by the occupants, while the expense of this most brilliant light is less than the most unsatisfactory gas of to-day.

NEGRO LABOR. Reports from Kansas claim they have there at least ten thousand negroes unemployed, and many in a starving condition. Why may not these people be utilized to solve the labor question of your country; accustomed in most instances to field labor, raising cane, and, for the last few years to short rations. The diet of your plantation, as claimed by the Chronicle might suit them, and the enervating influence of your climate might not affect them.

CHRONICALISMS. Talking of the Chronicle, can't you manage to slip us a few renegade lying loafers who will not work to be not ashamed, and whose accounts of the statements on plantations made out of whole cloth, for the Chronicle to sputter over? For the attacks on the Hawaiian Kingdom are not sufficiently frequent to remember where the last tirade left off, and is it not singular, that while the Chronicle abuses the candidate claimed as the special champion of the Hawaiian sugar monopoly in words almost actionable, it does not object to an insertion, at usual rates, of the nominee's card in its columns as "Hon. Paul Neumann, candidate for U. S. Senator on the Republican ticket;" but then, "bushness is bushness."

MUSICAL MATTERS. Reports of your musical society are not encouraging. This is to be regretted, for with the natural taste for music which your society has, the many excellent musicians therein, and the facility with which they read and render difficult pieces, it is certainly a matter of surprise that the attendance and interest should decline, their last concert being evidence of their ability in giving pleasure to all who hear them. By this steamer Mr. J. W. Varnley, for many years a resident of this city, leaves for Honolulu. Well known as a trainer of some of our best choirs, proficient in teaching the violin, piano, and cultivating the voice, being a fine bass singer and leader, also, he cannot fail of a satisfactory reception at your hands.

AMERICAN ENTHUSIASM. What is the cause of all this great outburst of United States' enthusiasm? Perhaps you are starting a duplicate of the order which has gained so many members through this country called the "Patriotic Sons of America," an order in which every native-born American citizen is glad to join, and whose power is being felt in the better administration of our naturalization laws, and it is to be hoped will prevent foreigners who can neither read nor write, swearing to understanding a constitution which they never saw, or, if seen, could not read. The order is not a "know-nothing" organization, but, simply a gathering of American-born from all parties and conditions of men, regardless of politics, or religion; and, as its name implies, a patriotic order. It is to be in future, I hope, that no foreigners can become a citizen any sooner than a native-born, which is, after a residence of twenty-one years.

SUNDAY PLATFORM IN POLITICS. As noted in my last, the Republicans adopted the Sunday plank, so called, and it has become a most prominent part of the platform. The gubernatorial campaign this year is to be fought on this question, shall we have a Sunday law or shall the law be repealed; the Sunday law remaining as a day for national worship and freedom from labor, closing of saloons, &c. The Democrats on their part insist upon a repeal of all Sunday laws, and desire a general "go as you please" style on that day; hand playing, liquor ad libitum, no quiet with general license, and the laws of a Sabbath set at naught.

THE MARKET, ETC. Your good people who are making purchases in our stores must be gratified at the bargains offered; for all goods of wearing material, dress goods, and, in fact, everything pertaining to one's wardrobe, can be purchased low for cash. The stores are full of articles at from ten to fifty per cent lower than ever before. Fruits arrive daily in the greatest profusion and variety, at prices within the reach of all; many tons being each day dumped from the wharf for want of demand. On the first three days of this month, during a temporary spell of hot weather, thirteen thousand (13,000) fine salmon were also thrown into the bay. August being a "close" month for these fish, the greed of the fishermen had induced them to catch out of season this large quantity, hoping for a few cool days in which their ill-gotten goods might be sold, but the fates and weather were against them, with the foregoing result, which is only mentioned as a sort of aggravating item to your islanders who have salmon only as a high priced,iced luxury. ADOLPHUS.

TAO VALLEY AND HALEKALA. A short Ramble amid Enchanting Scenery—Views in the Cloud-Land of Maui. Bound for Halekala, we set foot for the first time on the Island of Maui, at Maalaea, at half-past three o'clock in the morning, after spending the greater part of a beautiful moonlight night on the deck of the Lilikoi. A number of two-horse "expresses" were here in readiness for passengers, several of which were soon loaded and went off, each striving for the lead, those in the rear rapidly acquiring real estate.

A ride of seven miles over a fairly good road and we were in Wailuku. A bath and breakfast were then in order, after which we were also. A little delay occurred before we could procure horses, but finally mounted on good animals, engaged for a week at the rate of three dollars per day, we started for Spreckelsville, leaving Wailuku by one of its gates (as a gap in a wall of low hills might be called), we entered a region of what are (no matter what they might be called, nor what with water they might become) had lands, sand, sand—red sand, white sand, sand holes and sand hills with a little coarse grass here and there—plodded through this for several miles until we reached a smooth hard beach. A short gallop on this beach, just out of the reach of the waves, and we were in the seaport of Kahului. This is a busy little spot and will probably grow rapidly if the artisan well which Mr. Spreckels is putting down as an experiment proves a success. The tools were in very hard rock at a depth of one hundred and forty feet. Continuing on through several miles more sand we arrive at Spreckelsville.

Finding that a friend, whom we expected to make the ascent with us, could not be spared for several days, we concluded to improve the intervening time by seeing all we could of the plantation, including the immense mills with their new and valuable machinery, and the working of the steam-plows; also, in visiting the surrounding country and spending a most delightful day in Tao valley. This is like the Yosemite valley and yet different; it is more beautiful but less grand, and although we had expected much we were not disappointed. For miles we rode between nearly perpendicular and impassable mountain walls, not bare palms or cliffs, but what appeared to be mountains of moss, prodigious ruins covered with ferns and vines; turrets, ramparts and towers covered with the freshest verdure, while here and there gigantic sentinels in green uniform seemed to stand on guard. The trail led through luxuriant vegetation, groves of guava and kukui trees, forests of koa and beds of feathery ferns; while beside us leaping from rock to rock, dashing against and around the boulders in its course ran the brawling Wailuku. Perhaps this stream may have received its name "Waters of destruction," when Kamehameha dyed it red with the blood of his enemies, the day he drove Kamehameha's army over the precipice above it and conquered Maui.

Leaving our horses to graze on the abundant grass, we had a delightful ramble further up the stream and several narrow escapes from a slinking while crossing on slippery stepping-stones. Returning we found a party of native women and girls picnicking near a pretty waterfall which they had evidently been nearer, as they were letting the wind dry their long glossy black hair. A number of boys scattered among the trees, calling to each other while they filled bags with ripe guavas, revived memories of school holidays spent in New England woods gathering nuts.

Before leaving the valley we ascended to a plateau enclosed between two fountains of the stream; from here the valley had the appearance of a crater of which this plateau was the center, the walls being circular, only a small portion towards Wailuku having been destroyed. We longed to linger in Tao, "the beautiful," but we began to be aware that while our eyes were feasting, other portions of our bodies complained of neglect and called for food also. We returned overlooking with the satisfactory feeling that if anything should prevent us from ascending Halekala we would still be repaid for our trip.

But the chapter of accidents contained no such veto for us, so one morning our party of three, Toko, I must beg your pardon, though not a "featherless biped" like the rest of us, you are a companion who should not be ignored, for four then, three of which were mounted and provided with rubber coats, blankets, canned food and canteens, started for the beginning of the end of our trip. The weather was delightfully bright and fresh. After leaving the cane fields the road led us through rich rolling pasture lands. One of the horses, having developed a taste for crackers and lardery just before starting, we had to stop and replenish our stock at Kawapae; a small board projecting from a post beside the store attracted my attention, and upon it saw the name of "Dr. Kraft," a little back from the road stood his cottage in the prettiest part of a beautiful country. We did not have the pleasure of seeing the doctor as he had ridden over to Lahaina. Beyond this, on getting into the open country we unassisted and tethered the horses, lunched, rested and enjoyed the view; from here on the ascent was more rapid, and the country uninhabited until we reached Olinda. Mr. Alexander's summer place; here we found a cottage with an ex-confederate major in charge, who showed us where we could water our horses, and invited us in; had a little chat with him, admired the pretty flowers surrounding the house, but declined his cordial invitation to stop over night, as we desired to reach the summit before dark and it was already nearly three o'clock; the distance remaining was but six miles but its ascent averaged a thousand feet to the mile.

Up to this point it had been plain sailing and we had but little trouble in finding the trail. Beyond here—thanks to the directions and a rough sketch of the way given to us by one of the Civil Engineers at Spreckelsville, two hills make good land-marks. We started for the first, called "Pon Nihihi." The trail passed to the right of this, then turned off in the direction of the other which has a monument of stones on top, this must be left a short distance to the right; the rest of the trail is marked at intervals by small piles of stones. We continually expected to reach a point where vegetation would give way to utter desolation, naked lava and boulders, as is the case on Mauna Loa, but were surprised to find so much bunch-grass and scrub oheo, almost to the very edge of the crater. When within a mile of the top we passed "the cave," but having been warned that its occupants were both too numerous and sociable for comfort, we continued onward and upward and had a look into the crater just at sunset, with only a single glance however, for we had to hurry and arrange our camp before dark, and the horses hot, hungry and tired. Picking out a place partially sheltered from the wind about a hundred yards lower down we went to work lively, unpacked our traps, tethered out the horses, and got a fire started as it became dark; half an hour more of daylight and we could have gathered a supply of firewood which would have lasted through the night, as it was, we were obliged to scramble around among the rocks and feed for it. A cold supper and then to bed, and a hard one, but we passed a better night than we had been led to believe it possible under the circumstances. However, three persons, are no more than to lay comfortably under the same blankets. At four o'clock next morning we were up gathering wood for the fire; everything we touched was very cold. Just before daybreak we started for the top to see the sunrise, it was only a short distance but we were several times out of breath before getting there. It is, I believe, a common experience that the first sight of nearly all of Nature's greatest works and wonders is disappointing. I had found it so many times before, and again experienced it. The crater of Kilauea is more impressive at first, though it is only a few hundred feet deep, while the bottom here is two thousand below us. But if this big yawning, scorching hole was a disappointment, the cloud scenery as lit up by the rising sun was indescribably grand and beautiful. Oceans of clouds, icebergs, flocks, avalanches, glaciers, surely this must be the long sought for North pole and around us is the ever frozen sea. As the sun rose higher the clouds in addition to their beautiful shapes and forms took on new beauties of color. The view might have been painfully long drawn out if the sea had not risen up and formed a limiting wall. Returning to camp we waited for one of our party and breakfast. At last the missing one returned with a bunch of silver swords which he had had much trouble in finding and getting. He had seen two other bunches growing in the crater but had been unable to get them. Taking a rope with us we secured these also by lowering and slipping a noose over them from the rocks above. It is said that this plant has never been found except here and on Mauna Loa. The descent into the crater can easily be made, but we did not attempt it as we dreaded the ascent. Toko went down part way after some sheep, but concluded he did not care to make their acquaintance long before he had got near them.

The longer we stayed, the larger and deeper did the crater become. Instead of being round, or cup shaped, it is very irregular, and has two great arms branching at about an angle of sixty degrees to each other, ending in gaps, or breaches, in the crater wall; through which the clouds began to drift in and fill the crater before we left. The bottom also is very irregular, with a dozen or more regular cones, or miniature volcanoes, scattered about, which appear like sand hills, though some of them are said to be seven hundred feet high. The whole circumference is stated variously at from nineteen to twenty-seven miles, and its appearance has been described as being "like a bird's eye view of a dead city half hid in ashes, and carved in cold grey lava." We amused ourselves for a while rolling big stones into it, they started on a comparatively smooth slope, gradually increasing in velocity until rougher ground was reached when they would make immense leaps, breaking off shrubs every time they struck, and after they had disappeared we heard they were still striking out for the bottom by the dust they kicked up at every jump. Our return trip was a little varied by our getting into a cloud and losing the trail. We wandered around for a while and began to think we might have to wait some time, when the curtain lifted, and we discovered we were, and had been for quite a while, almost within a stone's throw of the Major's house. From there we returned to Spreckelsville without any further trouble, tired, sun-burnt and hungry, but well satisfied with our trip. A. W. D.
