A Robbery

By EDUARD L. PARDIE

"Mr. Murdock," said the president of the Second National bank of East Berkeley, "20,000 in currency are necessary to make us good at the People's Savings bank of Altruria. I wish you to take it to them by train. My opinion is that the safest way to carry it is in an ordinary suit case. Its bulk doesn't show as in the pocket, and if you proceed as any ordinary traveler would, not appearing watchful of your baggage, though watching it every instant, you should get it through safely."

"I have a great regard for your opinions, Mr. Cleverly, and if I am not guided by them I shall at least endeavor to use them to my advantage." Mr. Murdock took the bills, varying from $100 to $1,000 in denomination, and left the bank for his home, where he made a package of them in brown paper and, throwing some clothes in his suit case, called a carriage and left for the station. He had noticed a man standing on the street corner as he left the bank in a checkered suit and his beard cut goatee style. The person had not noticed him, but he had noticed the person. Murdock had little fear of any one knowing that he carried a large amount of money unless he discovered the fact of it before he left the bank. Many robberies occur from some rogue seeing a man draw money. The latter is followed and when a convenient opportunity occurs is robbed. Murdock remembered the man in the checkered suit, and when he saw him at the station buying a ticket he became profoundly interested in him. His seeing the fellow when he left the bank lounging on a street corner and soon after as a traveler might be a coincidence, but he didn't believe it was, at any rate the gentleman would need watching.

When the bank messenger boarded the train he sat waiting for the man with the goatee. He was not disappointed. A few minutes before the train left he sauntered into the car, crossed a satchel on to a seat, sat down, pulled a newspaper out of his pocket and seemingly became deeply interested in the news. Murdock glanced up at him as he passed by his seat and made up his mind that before his journey's end he would hear from him.

At the first stop a man with a red necktie got into the same car with Murdock and, taking a seat by himself, pulled his hat down over his eyes and apparently went to sleep. Something old Murdock that this man was bent upon the same errand as the other. What was that something? The same faculty that enables us to discriminate between faces, to recognize one we have not seen in thirty years with his back turned to us. Besides, Murdock's faculties were concentrated on the subject of being robbed. Convinced that the man was aboard the train with that intent, his faculties were acute in detecting others. He reasoned that the robbery would likely be committed by several rather than one, and he was ready to pick out those involved.

Murdock began to fidget in his seat. He turned and looked about him, and a suspicious glance at the last corner caught him. He took his suit case in his knees, opened it and felt of a brown paper parcel. Then he put the satchel down again. The man with the red necktie yawned, stretched himself and caught the eye of the one with the goatee. Murdock's back was toward them at the time, and he did not see this glance between them. Presently he got up, went to the water cooler and took a drink. While doing so he left his suit case on his seat, but kept his eye on his baggage. The man in the checkered suit stole a glance at the man with the red necktie.

Then Murdock took up the suit case again, opened it and took out a cigar, setting the case down beside him as carefully as though it contained glass, first on the outside of the seat, then, as if that position were not safe enough to suit him, he moved it to the inside. The man with the goatee and the one with the red necktie looked at each other with two pairs of cunning eyes, and a look of satisfaction appeared in the faces of both.

When the trainman called "Waterford!" the two observant men sat up in their seats. The next station was West Waterford, half a mile distant. There was a look of intensity in both the men, as if they were about to do something. When West Waterford was called they fidgeted in their seats. As the train moved off after the stop the man with the goatee dashed by Murdock, snatched his suit case and, followed by the red necktie man, jumped off the train, and both men, climbing into an automobile, were whisked away more rapidly than the railway cars.

"Stop thief!" yelled Murdock. Too late! The fugitives were gone and the suit case with them. Great excitement prevailed among the passengers, but Murdock, coolly drawing a cigar from his vest pocket, proceeded to light it. Then the others, thinking no great loss had been sustained, relaxed into the humdrum of travel.

When Murdock returned to his bank the president asked if the money had been delivered. Murdock told him that it had.

"Did you carry it in the suit case, as I told you to do?"

"No; I carried it in my pocket. I fooled two robbers with the suit case."

THINKS KOREAN YOUTH MAY BECOME FAMED PAINTER

Far away up on the windward side of the Island of Oahu near the township of Kona has been discovered a genius, an artistic genius, whose landscape paintings bid fair to rival those of Rubens or Millet, according to Miss L. R. Rogers, a teacher in Kona who claims the distinction of "finding" this new genius.

His name is Cho Sei Kijun, he is 27 years old, a Korean by birth, and is a teacher in the Korean school of Kona. Although up to two months ago he had never had a pencil in his hand except in writing, he has shown such proficiency under the tutelage of Miss Rogers that he will leave for the mainland this week, where he intends to study under Prof. J. S. Aukney of the University of Missouri.

Brings Protege to City. Miss Rogers was in town this morning with her protege and paid a visit to the office of School Inspector Gibson, where she exhibited some of her pupil's work, consisting of water-color and charcoal landscape drawings.

According to Miss Rogers, Cho Sei Kijun was instructed her in the Korean language when she discovered his talent. This was two months ago.

Cho was inscribing the Korean characters when his pencil broke. Miss Rogers sharpened it and adjusted a fine point to the lead by carefully sketching a tree in schoolboy fashion.

Cho watched her closely and no sooner had she handed him the pencil than he proceeded to sketch a similar tree, which, according to Miss Rogers, was perfect in perspective. The Korean lessons were abandoned, and instead Miss Rogers began instructing her former language teacher in the elementary principles of drawing.

Excels His Teacher. He progressed rapidly and two weeks ago Miss Rogers had taught him all she knew. Her pupil had forged rapidly ahead and now is thirsting for more instruction.

According to Miss Rogers, Professor Aukney of the University of Missouri is an artist of no mean ability and will undoubtedly bring out Cho's genius to its greatest extent.

Cho Sei Kijun has been here for six years. He comes from a good family in Korea, but when his father refused to allow him to leave the country, he ran away and came to Hawaii, where he has been teaching school.

SCHOFIELD WILL BOAST TWO REGIMENTS OF HORSE

Two regiments of Cavalry will be Stationed on Oahu for about a month next winter, when both the Fourth and Fifth horse will be at Schofield Barracks. The Fourth is scheduled to arrive in January, while the Fifth will not say good-bye to Hawaii until the following month. The incoming troops will go under canvas until the cavalry cantonment is vacated. During this period Schofield will have five regiments and auxiliary troops, and will be a veritable hive of soldiering.

The long expected orders for the transfer of the Fifth came yesterday. The Fourth, which will relieve it, is now scattered among the small posts of the Southwest, but this is not taken to mean that the Fifth will necessarily be exiled to the land of sand and sagebrush. A portion of the regiment will have had a four-year tour in the tropics, and it is quite likely that the Fifth will be given one of the larger Northern stations, in consequence.

When the Fourth arrives, command of Schofield Barracks will devolve on its commander, Colonel Edgar O. Steever, who is senior to Colonel McGunnigle. The arrival of every regiment, however, increases the duties and responsibilities of the post commander, and it is quite likely by that time that a brigadier general, junior to General Macomb, will be sent here to command at Lilehua.

The recent order attaching Colonel French to the Second Infantry is a puzzler to army officers here. It means that the Second now has three "paper" colonels, while the Colonel of the First will have to do all the work of his own regiment and command the post as well. Again, Colonel French is just one month senior to Colonel Rogers, so that the newcomer will supplant the man that has been practically in command of the regiment for the past few months.

There is another organization mixed up at Schofield, concerning the command of the First Field Artillery. Headquarters and one battalion of the regiment is at Schofield Barracks, while the other battalion is in the Philippines. But Colonel Rumbough has been in the East for some time on sick report, and it's unlikely that he will return to this climate. Therefore Major Cruikshank is really in command of the regiment, although the lieutenant colonel is in the Philippines. The Department of Hawaii has asked that Lieutenant Colonel Menoher be transferred to Hawaii, but the answer came that he could not be spared from his present post. So Major Cruikshank continues to run the regiment from headquarters here.

HENRY CLEWS SAYS CONVENTION RESULT WILL HELP BUSINESS

In his special letter of June 22, Henry Clews of New York makes the following among other remarks on the financial situation:

Another week of apathy has been passed on the Stock Exchange. There is however a much better undertone in course of development, and if nothing interferes the outlook is for improvement generally in the business situation.

Politics has now safely passed one of the most critical stages. Rampant radicalism has met with a necessary setback. It has been shown that neither party can afford to take the chances of nominating an extremely radical candidate. Apparently the sober sense of the American people is beginning to impress itself upon the politicians, and unless all signs are false the country is tired of erratic radicalism. While it wants progress and reform it is weary of useless political disturbance. The essential wants of the people have already been made known. Republican or Democratic platforms may contain some startling proposals in order to entice as many votes as possible; but pre-election promises and post-election performances rarely balance each other. Henceforth, therefore, business men will be able to pay less and less attention to politics and more and more to business. Of course startling changes would necessarily have an unsettling effect, but the political atmosphere has been materially clarified during the past week, and there is ample reason for growing confidence. Much business has been deferred during the last few months. New enterprises have been pigeonholed and merchants could not be expected to stock up until they know better what contingencies must be faced. Many business men are simply waiting for the starting signal. When this comes we may look for a gradual renewal of trade activity.

Railroad earnings are satisfactory, thirty-five reads reporting for the first week in June showing a gain of 7 per cent over last year. Bank clearings showed a gain of 10 per cent for the second week in June, and this in spite of limited speculation. Crop reports are more encouraging it being well understood that the condition of the leading crops has considerably improved since the Government report on June 1. Our foreign trade continues in very flattering conditions the total exports for the eleven months of the fiscal year amounting to $2,066,000,000, an increase of $153,000,000 over a year ago. During the same period our imports amounted to $1,522,000,000, of $117,000,000 more than a year ago.

Wall Street will be considerably interested in the effects of the July disbursements which are second to the January returns in importance. This year they are estimated at over $250,000,000, a considerable increase over the returns a year ago. There is apparently a good investment demand for securities combining both safety and profit. Low rate interest bonds are turning toward the better class of industrials and preferred issues. The market is for betterment, the situation is not without its drawbacks, which should not be ignored. New security issues since January I have been enormous. It is questionable whether any further important addition might not bring on a fit of financial indigestion. The enormous demand for new capital has not been confined to the United States. It is world-wide and has been just as marked in Germany, France and other countries as in the United States.

Fortunate as the United States is in a stronger position in such respects than most other countries largely because we have been marking time for the last year or two and pursuing a course of strict conservatism. We are consequently in an exceptionally sound condition financially, commercial and industrial. The only danger the possibilities of a crop failure or some political disturbance not yet foreseen. Unfortunately there is some chance of a serious deadlock between Congress and President Taft, who is almost certain to veto extravagant appropriation bills. For such a courageous policy Mr. Taft should have the support of the best elements in public life. Nevertheless, the country is weary and apprehensive regarding any further political strife at Washington.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Many noted attorneys have been interested in the case of Folke E. Brandt, formerly valet for Mortimer L. Schiff, who was sentenced to thirty years in prison five years ago after pleading guilty to burglary. Judge Richard L. Hand was appointed a special commissioner by Governor Dix to take evidence on which Governor Dix could base action on Brandt's application for a pardon. District Attorney Whitman is investigating the matter to see if there was a conspiracy to "railroad" Brandt to prison, and he has said that he expects the grand jury to return indictments. Mirabeau L. Towns is the attorney for Brandt, and Howard S.

Gans represented Schiff at the time Brandt was sentenced. Attorney General Thomas Carmody appeared before Judge Hand as the representative of the state.

ASQUITH TRIES TO AVERT STRIKE

London.—At a three-cornered conference between representatives of the striking miners, the operators and Premier Asquith the Premier made a final appeal to the contestants to make mutual concessions and end the strike. He pointed out the extreme seriousness of the situation and declared that unless the strike were settled the industries of the country, already badly crippled, would be completely paralyzed by the end of the week. Mr. Asquith made his appeal on the ground of humanity and asked the miners to go back to work and trust to Parliament to enforce their chief demand, the establishment of a minimum wage scale. Later he introduced in the House of Commons the miners' minimum wage bill.

SYRACUSE, Sicily.—When Italy prepared to bombard Tripoli the residents of that city hurried away in every possible direction. Hundreds went to Malta, while other hundreds came to this city. There were so many of them that it was impossible to provide shelter for them. They were allowed 2 francs (40 cents) daily to buy food until they could be sent back to Tripoli. These payments were made at the police station. The picture shows a group of refugees just after they had received their allowances. The refugees were of all nationalities—German, Italian, Turkish, etc. No distinction was made, and all received the same amount. Another picture shows the Italian destroyer Corazziere, which took part in the operations at Prevesa. So many Italian soldiers were sent here that the barracks could not accommodate them, and many slept in churches and doorways.

Prof. Metchnikoff, of the Pasteur Institute, Paris, believes that he can prove that old age is caused by two poisons, and claims that he has found a bacillus which will help to ward off the ailments of old age.

NEW-YORK, N. Y.—The new submarines, the E1 and the E2, went from the Brooklyn navy yard to Norfolk, Va. That their commanders had no idea of submerging them during the trip south was shown by both being canvas covered to the water line. On board the two submarines are two cat mascots. Before many months both these mascots will be deep-sea cats, for when they make dives the mascots will remain on board. Naval men are interested in the voyage of these two deep-sea fighters, for they are the first to be equipped with the Diesel oil-burning interior combustion engines. They are also the first submarines to be equipped with wireless, and during their journey to Norfolk they will keep in constant touch with land. The vessels are equipped with temporary masts, which will fold up and drop to the deck when a dive is made.

LAS VEGAS, N. M.—Holm O. Bursum, a wealthy sheep ranchman, was the Republican candidate for governor. He is an inveterate smoker and prefers a pipe to a cigar. When he was nominated every delegate drew a cob pipe from his pocket and began smoking. The candidate held a pipe in his hand as he thanked the convention for the nomination. The cob pipe has been the emblem of the Republicans in the campaign.
