

IN THE WOMAN'S WORLD

GIRLS OF TODAY DEMAND TOO MUCH OF THEIR MEN FRIENDS

As one of the chaperones at a recent ball noticed a group of young girls enter the room unescorted, she remarked about it. "Why, when I was a young girl," said she, "I should have felt sadly neglected if I had not even one invitation to attend such a function as this."

"Things must have changed greatly in the past thirty years, or else the girls and boys in Honolulu are different from the girls and boys whom I knew."

Another woman, a few years younger, perhaps, who had daughters of her own, turned, and said: "The times have not changed, my dear, but our girls have changed their ideas. Very few of the young men who occupy positions paying from eighty to a hundred dollars a month, can afford to take the girls to the theatre, and to use the slang phrase of the school girl, 'treat them right.' As you know I have never allowed my daughter to go out in the evening without me, and as I have had brothers of my own, I do not allow a young man to spend more or even as much as he can afford in entertaining my daughters."

The discussion was taken up by other members of the group and one of them told of some of the things a girl expects of the young man who acts as her escort.

"If she lives any distance off the car line he should come for her in a machine and after the theatre he must take her to a cafe for something to eat. The majority of the girls probably think that it is more 'grown up' to order a supper. Perhaps they do not know that it shows a lack of thought for a young woman to enter a cafe at a late hour without a chaperon, and that it is very poor taste indeed to order a heavy meal at that time of night."

"My daughter came into my room the other day," continued one of the ladies, "and as she seemed to be putting, I asked her what was the matter. With a doleful smile she said that a young man of her acquaintance had asked her to attend a dance, and to be ready to take the eight-fifteen car. She had refused to do so, and told me that she did not care to walk four long blocks in her dancing pumps. I was really horrified and as a result of this little interview the young miss has not been to a dance for several weeks."

The mothers of today do not know what to do with their daughters who demand so very much from their friends, because to them the conditions have so greatly changed in the past few years. When the mothers of this generation were belles of the season a young man and girl seldom went out without a chaperon unless they were in a crowd. Now the young folks do not wish to be attended by any one else. It would be hard to give the reason for this as it is not likely that anyone really knows.

Old-Fashioned Customs.
A group of boarding school girls were speaking of the times that their mothers called good, but which to them seemed decidedly poky. "Just think," said one of them. "My mother used to go with a whole crowd to church on Sunday evening, and walk home afterwards, and then think that she had had a jolly time." Does it not seem rather too bad that more of the young folks of today do not follow this old-fashioned custom, for it is not only a good way to spend Sunday evening, but is also a profitable one in the way of exercise.

Of course, the young men and young women of our parents' time looked forward more to the home-making than do the young people of this day and generation. Now that the women are coming to the front in politics, and are so desirous of holding a vote, more of their time is given over to contemplation of these things, than to the thought of home-making. If neither the young men nor young women are thinking of having homes of their own while they are still young, perhaps it does not matter if the whole of a young man's salary is spent in amusement.

Statistics show that both men and women are marrying at a more mature age today than they did in the days of our great grandmothers, one of the reasons for this may be that they can not afford to do otherwise. The girls who have had so much done for them while they are receiving the attentions of the young men, naturally expect many of these luxuries after they are married.

Many Girls Better Trained.

All of the girls of today do not make all of these demands upon their friends. There are still a number of mothers who have lived with their children so closely that their ways are similar, and who have taught their daughters that it is never right to put themselves under the obligation to men who are merely casual acquaintances. As a rule the young men who know these mothers and daughters, like them far better than they do the others. At least that is what the men themselves say. In the home there is usually a chafing dish and coffee or chocolate is made at home instead of at the restaurant. If the young girl could know how very attractive she is when cooking over a chafing dish she would probably insist upon having one, and upon making frequent use of it. While speaking with a young man on this subject he said that he hoped some day to have a home of his own, not a rented one, but one that he could call his own, and he said that if he were ever going to make this purchase he would have to stay clear of the girls for a while. When asked if he intended to live in the wonderful house all alone he replied in the negative, and said he knew that there were still some old-fashioned girls, who liked a man for what he was, and not for what he had and that he was sure that he would some day come across one of this type. "Now don't think that I am the only fellow who is planning to do this, for there are others, many of them friends of yours, but they still feel as though they wanted to spend something on the girls, but they go about it in an easy way. These fellows really prefer to take out more than one girl at a time, but the girls themselves demand so much that they can not afford it. I suppose a lot of these silly girls think that it is because we like one of them so much better than the others that we take her out alone, but that is not always the case. Most of us would rather take out two girls, it's a lot more fun, but we cannot afford to do it."

This was a surprise to the writer, girls, but it gave her something to think about, and no doubt it will you.

MILITANT WOMEN "PLAY OUT" MEN

LONDON, August 18.—If the suffragettes in this country have accomplished no other thing, they have succeeded in "playing out" more than one of the men who have had to cope with them.

When the late governor of Holloway prison, where most of the suffragette prisoners have been jailed, resigned a few weeks ago, it was said frankly that the break down in his health was the result of the storm and stress of having so many militant members of the sisterhood with their "hunger-strikes" and endless flare-ups under his roof, and it is an open secret that the coming retirement of the "watch-dog of the House of Commons," Chief Inspector Scantlebury, at a comparatively early age, is mostly due to the heavy responsibility that rested on him when the clamorers for a "vote" were besieging the House almost every night.

He says himself that the suffragettes gave him more worry than did the Bradlaugh Irish members in their "wild" days and fill the rest of the tribulant folk he had to deal with.

MOVING NEST.

The remarkable and, it is believed, unparalleled, fact of a pair of swallows building in one of the carriages of a local train which made frequent journeys between two local stations in Victoria is recorded, says the Australian Emu. The swallows had built their nest in the under iron framework of one of the second-class carriages of a train running daily from Stony Point to Mornington Junction and back, fifteen miles each way, but occasionally going on to Mornington Station, eight miles further. When examined at Somerville Station the nest contained five eggs, which were then warm. The nest, which appears to have been constructed at Mornington Junction terminus, is stated to have taken five weeks in building. The birds were not seen to be always following the train, but joined it at various points en route.

MRS. ELIZA ROY DIES AT HOME IN KONA

Pioneer Woman Passes Away Mourned by Friends All Over Territory

Mrs. Eliza Roy, one of Hawaii's pioneer women and known throughout the Territory, died at her home at Kainaliu, Kona, yesterday. Illness was due to old age. Mrs. Roy being in her eighty-first year. News of her death was received late yesterday by friends in this city.

In the passing away of Mrs. Eliza Roy, formerly Eliza Davis, of Waiuea, Hawaii, a link with the past has been broken. Born eighty years ago, she was essentially a part of the old regime, not only from the point of years, but as claiming relationship with the pioneers of Hawaii.

Isaac Davis, a near relative, was one who, with John Young, played an important part in the history of these islands. Exchanging the name of Davis for that of Johnson early in life, she afterwards married a Mr. Roy, her entire married life being in Kona, where her home was ever known as a hospitable one. There the stranger was sure of a welcome, and from early times the Johnson home stood for the open house peculiar to those days.

With a strong personality which commanded the respect of all and with many noble traits, Mrs. Roy was beloved by a large circle. Hers was the generous hand, but the quality of her kindness was unobtrusive and the suffering no record has been made. Eight children survive her: Mrs. Wm. A. Shipman, Mrs. Caroline J. Robinson, Mrs. John D. Paris, Mrs. T. C. White, Mrs. A. Wall and W. F. Roy.

With a strong faith in the unseen, to "Her soul, God's glorious image freed from clay," do doubt not has come the steadier light, the clearer day.

NEW TALENT FOR BIJOU

The Bijou theater management have secured two headline acts which they will present for the approval of the amusement public on Wednesday evening. The acts are the three Robinson brothers and Wilson, who travel under the title of "The finest entertainers," and the other act is the Lessee, who are en route to Australia. They are considered the classiest jugglers and lassoing acts in the business. The other vaudeville talent will bring the Bijou's bill up to its late high standard.

DR. SUN NOW EDITOR AND MAY BECOME BANKER

SHANGHAI, July 31.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first president of the revolutionary government of China has declared that should the international loan fail, he will proceed to the establishment of a central bank with a capital of £2,000,000, subscribed by Chinese capitalists resident in foreign countries. Dr. Sun made the statement that he had information to the effect that this sum had already been subscribed, the main purpose of the organizers being to secure concessions and develop them with Chinese capital.

It is known that Dr. Sun while in South China had an eye out for prospects for the development of public utilities, and in the meantime emissaries of the revolutionary government were busy visiting the different Chinese colonies in foreign lands securing subscriptions to domestic loans for the benefit of the Chinese. There has been some agitation along the lines of establishing a state bank in Kwangtung, but it has not yet materialized. It is not improbable that Dr. Sun's bank will be financed by the subscriptions originally made towards the domestic loan.

It is understood in the capital that Dr. Sun Yat Sen and Tang Shao-yi have taken over the property of the late China Gazette, at Shanghai, which will be converted into the organ of the Hungmenhui party. The paper was to make its appearance on the 1st inst. under the name of The China Republic.

RECREATIONS

HARTMAN COMPANY TO DRIVE AWAY BLUES

Are you blue? Go and see Ferris Hartman in "Mr. O Joy" at the opera house tonight. It will drive the blue devils out of you quicker than a wink. The comedy, musical, enough and bright enough, and funny enough to please any one, is to be produced here for the first time tonight. It will also be played at the evening performance tomorrow. The Saturday matinee will be the favorite, "The Campus" once more, to please those who failed to see it during the earlier part of the week. In the seat sales at the promotion committee rooms in the Young Building, there is a splendid yard stick wherewith to measure the popularity of the Hartman shows. The demand is as heavy as the traffic, otherwise the ticket man—can bear.
