

MAINLAND SOCIETY WOMAN who spent several months in Honolulu remarked upon leaving the city that she had never visited a place where the leaders in society were so "at home." "Where is from?" she said. "The women visit each other in the entertainments given in a manner that is truly gracious. If Mr. Jones is successful at a tea, her bosom friend will immediately issue invitations for an even more elaborate and bad feeling is the result."

She went on to tell how many of the things that are introduced in society are brought about. At one time it seems a well known social custom appeared at an elaborate function wearing a chameleon. Her friends and followers immediately adopted the color while those who were constantly being to dethrone her, set about looking for something that would create a sensation. It is in this manner that many of the dances seen by reformers have been introduced in the drawing rooms of the elect.

The lady also spoke of the manner in which the gowns imported from Europe are accepted here. In most of the large cities society women express some doubt as to whether a gown was really imported from Paris while Honolulu society folks readily agree that must have come from there at that it is indeed lovely. As this lady said: "If ever a decide to move away from my own home town I shall surely come to Honolulu to live where the society matrons are all at peace with one another."

And so it is. There is always good feeling expressed when one hostess is a little more successful in enlisting her guests and there is but a rivalry as to the success of a particular person.

While Honoluluans are sometimes laughed at because of their willingness

Miss Doris Haywood, whose picture appears above, is the daughter of Mrs. William Haywood, well known in this city. Mrs. Haywood and her daughter have spent the greater share of their time during the past few years visiting fashionable resorts, and they are wintering in Honolulu. In Washington Miss Haywood is one of the most popular young women in society and her friends there are eagerly awaiting her return to them. Mr. and Mrs. Haywood came to Honolulu during the days of the Republic.

Mr. Haywood was the consul general and was with Harold Sewall, who occupied the position of United States minister. Previous to that time he held an important position in the government at Washington. Since her husband's death Mrs. Haywood and her daughter have spent the greater share of their time travelling around the world.

It renders the skin like the softness of velvet leaving it clear and peerly white and is highly desirable when preparing for daily or evening attire. As it is a liquid and non-greasy preparation, it remains unnoticed. When attending dances, balls or other entertainments, it prevents a greasy appearance of the complexion caused by the skin becoming heated.
