DOOR MATS ARE SUGGESTED AS FINE INDUSTRY

Emil A. Berndt Points Out New and Profitable Use for the Coconut Fiber

Emil A. Berndt, vice-president and manager of W. W. Dimond and Company, this morning made a statement to the effect that one of the greatest industries that could be started in the Hawaiian islands, and one, he believes, from which the income would be greater than that from sugar or pineapples, would be the manufacture of door-mats and other articles of commerce from the fiber of the coconut.

"The enterprise which I believe this company is now trying to get should be made a Hawaii industry," said Mr. Berndt. "Although the market is now controlled by a trust, the industry should be started and made to stick here. It covers a big field; bigger, even, than sugar or pineapples. My idea for such an industry would be one central factory, say in Honolulu; a factory put up and backed by local capital. The small farmers then could be induced to grow coconuts and sell them direct to the factory. Open hands would reach forth from the mainland to take the output of the factory, and in this way every cent of money would be kept in the islands and a continually increasing revenue would be coming in. It would put Hawaii in line to get hold of the market. The demand for these mats is so great today that it is almost impossible to secure them for the retail trade. Besides the mats, such a factory in Honolulu could make other articles such as scrubbing brushes, and I know that coconut fiber is an excellent non-conductor of heat, and used largely in the making of refrigerators. Then, too, the copra could be utilized. I know of two local business men who are experimenting with the growing of coconuts, and they figure that one tree brings them $1 per year. I believe that there are great prospects ahead for Hawaii in the introduction of such an industry."

E. C. POHLMANN IMPORTS COSTLY PEN OF LEGHORNS

E. C. Pohlmann, owner of the Makiki Heights poultry ranch, has imported to Honolulu what he believes will prove to be the best pen of egg layers ever brought to these islands. The chickens arrived from San Gregorio, Cal., in the Lurline Tuesday, and number 12 hens and a rooster, all White Leghorns. They are not show birds, but those of the first-class laying variety. The high market value which has been placed on the birds is due to their records for egg-laying, as all the birds have records of laying more than 200 eggs per year, the best bird having reached the 236 mark. The male bird, a young and vigorous cockerel, is the offspring of a hen with a record of 241 eggs per year. The Makiki Heights ranch has had considerable experience in the breeding of White Leghorns and Orpingtons, and at an early date will receive from the mainland a pen of Orpingtons with records higher than 200 eggs. Taking as its motto "Quality, not quantity," the ranch has grown to be perhaps the best equipped in the islands, and Mr. Pohlmann believes that he has solved in the affirmative the question, "Does poultry raising in Hawaii pay?"
