the Oceanic lodge of Masons, making the second time elected to that high position, and in the York Rites he was of high degree and held many offices. Mr. Goetz was also a member of the Commercial Club, where he enjoyed the friendship of the clubmen.

His death comes at the age of 43 years. Though he had been slightly ill for a week he had remained at work and it was not until he left the office last evening that he realized the seriousness of his condition. Complaining of being ill on his way home, he was assisted to his residence by a friend, Dr. C. B. Cooper, was summoned, and later Dr. J. R. Judd was called for consultation. The efforts of the physicians were unavailing, for the patient continued to sink lower and lower, the end coming at 8:20 in the evening, with his wife at his bedside and a few friends.

Funeral Services Tomorrow

The funeral services will be held at the Masonic Temple tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 o'clock, with private services at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Goetz, Manoa Road. The interment will take place at the Nuuanu cemetery after the services at the temple. The pallbearers will be Wallace R. Farrington, George G. Guild, O. A. Bierbach, Ed. Towan, R. W. Breckons and L. G. Pratt. The remains were cremated this morning.

Of his sterling character the many friends of Mr. Goetz spoke this morning. Several of them knew of him in his youth when, as a boy, he was brought from Wisconsin by his parents to the then frontier region of Wyoming, where his father entered into business, and his son became an apprentice at printing and a student. He made his way through the public schools there, distinguishing himself before his teachers and parents for the quickness of his mind and studious habits. He later entered the university of the state, and put in two years studying there. It was while he was at this institution that he met the woman who became his wife, Miss Jessie Whitney, of South Dakota, who years later came to Honolulu. They were married 23 years ago.

Striking Tribute Paid

"Never," said Mr. Towan this morning, "was a devotion of a man for

I have attempted to write something which would express my personal tribute to the life and character of Mr. Goetz. I can't do it. "Bill" and I were too intimately associated for me to put in words what his death means to me. He was loyal, kind-hearted, absolutely efficient. Our associations were such in the work of the day, fraternal activities and other pleasures of life that we came to know each other from about every angle that could be imagined. Through all kinds of weather Goetz could always be depended upon.—W. R. Farrington.

his wife more beautiful. No one who knew him intimately could fail to appreciate this. Always the same tender and loving husband, his first thought was ever for the happiness of his wife.

"His disposition never changed. Wherever he was his good-nature and sincerity seemed to radiate from him and affect those with him. He was in every sense a man of high honor and esteem, capable, willing to do his part and more, and honest beyond words."

This is one tribute of many paid to the memory of the dead this morning. Mr. Towan was the first man to know him intimately here. In 1896 he brought him here for the old Hawaiian Star. His ability at once showed itself, and sometime later his services were secured by the Gazette Company, where he took up his work after one of his two trips to the mainland. In 1900 he was engaged as superintendent by the Evening Bulletin, and with the consolidation of the two afternoon papers he was made superintendent and head of the mechanical department. He had strong support for internal revenue collector in 1910, and, except for a political split in the Republican organization and officials, would probably have received the federal appointment.

Robert W. Breckons was a close friend of Mr. Goetz for years. They are both from Wyoming.

"For years I have enjoyed a strong friendship with Mr. Goetz," said the former district attorney this morning. "He was a quiet, modest, unassuming man, with marked ability. I have always thought him capable to hold any position he undertook. As an officer of the lodge, he was always ready with what reports he had to make, or the books he kept. He was never known to be behind in his work. He was worshipping master of the Oceanic lodge, which shows with what reverent respect they held him."

Mr. Goetz was married in 1900. There are no children. He leaves a mother, Mrs. Hader, who visited here with her grand-daughter this year.

Shrine Session Postponed
Immediately following the news that Mr. Goetz had passed away, it was announced that the ceremonial session and banquet of the Shriners set for tomorrow would be postponed, and today formal announcement is made that the Shriners have postponed their events from tomorrow until the following Saturday at the same place and hour.

LICENSE COMMISSION GRANTS WAIKIKI INN SPECIAL PRIVILEGES

Following a visit at Waikiki Inn yesterday afternoon, the liquor license commission held a special meeting at which it was agreed to allow Manager J. T. Scully the same Christmas and New Year's after-hour privileges as had been previously granted to the Moana and Young hotels. At a recent meeting the request for these privileges had been denied by the board, later to be reconsidered with the action as above stated.

Scully said this morning that he was running his house in conformity with the rules governing hotels and that his desire was to meet with the approval of the board in every particular and that he would gladly accept and abide by any suggestion that the board might make.

Mr. Schuman further said that he has not leased the site for any stated length of time.

The name of the first donor is withheld. Probation Officer Anderson has been instructed to receive gifts of phonograph records from the public for these institutions. These as well as magazines or other reading matter may be sent to Judge Whitney's chambers at the judiciary building.

Police Notes

William Frost was numbered among the persons who yesterday came under the surveillance of the police, it being charged that Frost had no visible means of support. When arraigned at district court this morning the defendant admitted that within the past five years he had been convicted on 12 different occasions for minor offenses. Frost was sentenced to serve 60 days at the reef.

The theft of a coat, proven to the satisfaction of District Magistrate Larmach at this morning session of police court, resulted in a sentence of three months being imposed upon Ullas, a Filipino, who was placed under arrest by officers connected with Captain of Detectives McDuffie's department. The defendant appeared at the lower court yesterday morning to face a charge of vagrancy and for this offense was given 30 days at the city and county bastille.

It was a decidedly battered remnant of a once elegant Panama hat that was exhibited before Acting Prosecuting Attorney Chillingworth and District Magistrate Larmach at police court this morning, the article having figured in an alleged assault in which two neighboring women were said to have been involved. Annie Kahoona was brought before the tribunal but the "cloud of witnesses" predicted to be ready to testify against the woman were conspicuous by their absence. The complainant's testimony proved insufficient to convict, and the defendant was discharged. Before the close of court a counter complaint was lodged which will be threshed out tomorrow.

When Manuel Tavares, called at the home of his mother-in-law yesterday afternoon for the purpose of removing a chicken coop, together with sundry alleged personal belongings, he met with a warm reception at the hands of his relatives. Tavares appeared at district court this morning, charging that his wife had employed extreme force in attempting to effect his removal from the parental domicile. He complained that he had received injuries through an encounter with an irate woman. Later, in company with a uniformed minion of law he said, the attack was renewed and Tavares declared that he was obliged to beat a hasty and unceremonious retreat. Mrs. Tavares, who was called to the witness stand told a different story and was given the benefit of the doubt, and was discharged from custody. Both parties were advised to keep away from each other until such time as the dove of peace again makes its abode on the family roof.

PURITANS AND GREEKS.

The reader of the Scarlet Letter gets a vivid idea of the Puritan conscience! It had its strength, but that took principally shows its narrowness and its cruelty. What a different thing was the attitude toward life of the most gifted people in history. The Greeks in their great period had nothing of what we call a sense of sin. When they did anything wrong, they called it "a bad shot"—something that was bound to happen from time to time and was best forgotten. As Livingston puts it, it was useless to spend thought and remorse on had shots; it was better to go forward and improve the aim for next time. Many a person of Puritan descent, tortured needlessly by remorse, could gain much by acquiring the habit of looking at any transgression as a defective aim, and making up his mind to get nearer the bull's eye next time.—From Harper's Weekly.
