Carrying Coal to Newcastle.
While Australia is generously supplied with coal, much fuel was imported into that country during the two months that many of the ports were held in the grip of the strikers. Before the labor trouble had been adjusted it is stated that coal was brought from Japan, India, South Africa and British Columbia. The resumption of the work at mines near Newcastle will insure a ready dispatch of steamers laden with the product, destined to Honolulu.

FATHER REGINALD TELLS OF FIRST
SECULAR PRESS

George R. Carter Elected President of the Hawaiian Historical Society

BY FR. REGINALD ZENDOORN.
After the first two Catholic missionaries to the Hawaiian Islands had been sent into exile, Bro. Melchior Bondu, a lay brother and mechanic who was legally the owner of the mission premises and property, remained at Honolulu. Daily he jotted down such events as might interest the exiled priests, and occasionally he sent copies of his journal to Father Bache-lot in California. The original journal is now kept in the archives of the Fathers of the Sacred Hearts at Braine-le-Comte. It covers the period which extends from the departure of the missionaries on the eve of Christmas, 1831, till the beginning of the year 1837, and throws interesting sidelights on Honolulu life of that time.

From this diary we see that the first secular printing press was established on the premises of the Catholic Mission, the actual spot being the place which is now occupied by the sanctuary of the cathedral. The history of its establishment is contained in the following entries which we translate as faithfully as possible from the imperfect French in which the journal is written:

"1836, May 30. The printer, Mr.
Hall, has arrived at Oahu. He is an American. He has rented the upper room of the house in the center for $10 a month, for one year. The contract has been made in writing." This was Nelson Hall, who must not be confounded with Mr. Edward O.
Hall, the missionary printer.

"June 13. Kekuanaoa has summoned me to the fort. There he asked me how many foreigners there were in my house. I told him that we had one newcomer. He further inquired what he did. I answered that he was a printer. Again he asked to what nationality he belonged. I said he was an American. He had already sent several natives to watch the printer. After I had answered all his questions, he said: 'This stranger has taken up a residence here without making himself and his profession known to me. Neither the king nor Kinawa know him. We don't want two printers here. You furnished him with a house against our will; you will have to send him away.' Then he added: 'You have no house any longer; I take your place from you.' I answered him at once: 'If the man is here against your will I am going to dismiss him. I did not know that you did not approve of him. Now that I know I will talk with Mr. Mackintosh about it; he is the one who has rented the printer's room.' I went to see Mr. Mackintosh and told him of the order I had received. Going to his house I met the British consul whom I informed of what was going on. He said he was going to take a hand in the matter. Then I told Mr. Mackintosh that if we left the press any longer in the house we were exposed to losing our establishment, which would be a considerable loss to us. He answered: 'Don't be afraid; I'll speak to our consul, Mr.
Reynolds, about it. We shall go to the fort and have a talk with the chief and if there is no means of staying at your place we shall take our belongings away.' He added:
'The chiefs here think they are gods; they would like to see us at their feet, but nothing doing; I won't submit to their whims.' Then he said: 'The chiefs think perhaps that the press belongs to you and that you want to print Jesuit matter. The missionaries here,' he continued, 'have no charity; they are devils. They have no printing paper any more and wanted to buy from us but we did not want to sell them any. They do what they can to bother the foreign residents.'
'I went to see Mr. Reynolds. I found there Mr. Mackintosh, Mr. Hall, the printer, and several other gentlemen. They asked me what was the matter and I told them what Keku-anaoa had said about the press and Mr. Hall. Then they started to talk English. They resolved to make a petition, to have it translated by Mr.
Bingham and sent it to the king."

"July 15. The king has answered Mr. Mackintosh's petition. He allows him to remain and to print. He has also sent a letter to Kinawa to tell her to leave us alone. He said he was glad to have another printing press." "July 30. The printers who live at our house have printed today their first newspaper. They are to issue one paper a week at six dollars a year."
This paper was entitled the Sandwich Islands Gazette.
The foregoing paper was read by Fr. Reginald Zendoorn at the annual meeting of the Hawaiian Historical Society Friday evening, being one of several that were heard during the session.
A high tribute was paid the late Prof. William D. Alexander when Bishop Henry B. Restarick and Rev.
W. D. Westervelt were appointed a committee to draft a memorial in commemoration of the life work of Mr.
Alexander to be spread on the minutes of the meeting. The meeting was held in the library of Hawaii and was well attended, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: George R. Carter, president; Prof.
C. H. Hitchcock, first vice-president; Dr. N. B. Emerson, second vice-president; C. Montague Cooke, Jr., third vice-president; Bruce Cartwright, Jr., treasurer; H. M. Ballou, recording secretary; Rev. W. D. Westervelt, corresponding secretary; Miss Allyn, librarian; Albert F. Judd, Alfred W.
Carter and Bishop Henry B. Restar-ick, additional trustees.
