go to Washington. My business took me to Washington. But I later decided when I found all the appointments being held up that I would go to Washington and see if I could do anything to see things cleared up. I had a matter before the supreme court anyway. My trip to Washington was in no sense one to get my own appointment through. I am not working now nor have worked for the place. I simply have agreed to take the position if I am appointed. But I did object to the long delay in getting appointments made. After I left Washington Mr. Watson's name was sent in; so my work may have done some good.

BARRON OFF TO NAIL DOWN POSTMASTERSHIP OF HONOLULU

It's goodbye Barron today: "When I come back, boys, when I come back you can put a postmaster tel around my neck!"

Thus cried Charles ("Soapbox") Barron, bound for Washington, in the interests of his candidacy for postmaster of Honolulu, as he sailed away on the liner Matsonia this morning. Smiling, waving his hat, shouting, Barron grew small and smaller as the ship moved out of the harbor and straightened her course for San Francisco.

Barron was at the wharf in good time. And though not taking bets on the success of his trip, he showed his confidence in every other way. He did not wear his much-discussed "opry" hat—that he says he will not need until he arrives in Washington and promenade with high officials or takes tea at the White House—nor did he wear the new tuxedo in seven-foot overcoat which he says he bought at a shocking bargain, but nevertheless he was clad in a way altogether becoming.

He wore a modish suit of clothes, half-way between green and brown, a low-crowned derby hat jammed far down over his head, a la Monte Carter, several niles of leis hung on every angle, and a small megaphone with which he was able to converse from the steamer deck with friends up at Punchbowl and way points. The crowd at the dock was a big one and a noisy one, and Barron's voice had to compete with the hoarse bray from the Matsonia's steam whistle, the musical offerings of Berger's band and the harmony from a quiet club on the upper deck. But Barron's voice, with the aid of the megaphone, emerged victorious over all other noises.

C. D. Pringle, candidate for collector of internal revenue, was at the wharf to bid him farewell and Pringle and Barron clung affectionately to opposite ends of two long streamers of paper ribbon. As the steamer moved off Barron began throwing the leis down to the dock and with every lei went a shout through the megaphone: "Here's a tel for the county committee!"

"Here's one for the territorial committee!" "Hooray for the Democrats!" "On to Washington—watch me, boys!"

Altogether, Barron's departure was quite the feature of the Matsonia sailing.

Barron takes with him a score of letters to men in public life upon whose good offices he relies for the success of his journey. Barron is well confident. He says he will win hands down, that his fight for the job will be hardly a fight at all; so easy his success will be. He doesn't know how long he will be gone. The length of his trip does not depend upon his personal appointment alone.

"When I win I am going to help my friends get their jobs," he says. "I am going to stay until things are settled."

So Barron may be an old man when he returns to Honolulu again. Returning to the sartorial element of his trip Washingtonward, Barron said: "Besides the 'opry' hat I have purchased an elegant fur-lined overcoat. I got it from a tragedian who wandered into Honolulu some time ago and preferred a meal ticket to that section of his wardrobe. Of course I got it cheap because the actor man was hungry. No, I did not make this purchase because I anticipate a chilly time in the capital but for the finished effect it will give me in filling social engagements. The fact that it was made for a man a trifle over six feet tall does not bother me. I sh go bible, I can turn it up at the bottom."

POLITICAL POT ON KAUAI HAS BEGUN TO BOIL

The Garden Island contains the following political gossip from Kauai: "Mr. T. Brandt of Waimea, and James Kula of Koloa are mentioned as very probable candidates on the Republican ticket for the house of representatives at the approaching election."

"Mr. Brandt is not an avowed candidate, but has been approached so earnestly by his friends that he has shown signs of yielding to their wishes. He would undoubtedly sweep the western end of the island, and would probably carry most of the other precincts as well. Mr. Kula is well known, is capable and popular, and would probably have little difficulty at the polls."

"Personal friends of E. A. Knudsen are responsible for the statement that the veteran legislator will be a candidate to succeed himself in the senate. Mr. Knudsen is still away from the islands, but it is understood that he has already signified his wishes and intentions in letters to party workers."

"Several others are on the edge of the lime-light, but not sufficiently visible to make them 'available' just at present. It seems likely, however, that there will be quite sufficient material from which the party may choose before the primaries come on."

"As far as the Garden Island can learn, no disposition has yet appeared on the surface to make any changes in the personnel of supervisors and other county officers. However, it is still early."

C. Brewer & Company, representatives for the Oceanic line, are advised that the steamer Sonoma has sailed from San Francisco and is due to arrive at Honolulu enroute for Pago Pago and Sydney at an early hour next Monday morning.

FEDERAL BLDG. TO COST NOT OVER $425,000

Price Asked for Mahuka Site Regarded Excessive by Asst.-Secy. Newton By C. S. ALBERT.

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence] WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 1.—The site for a new public building in Honolulu must not cost in excess of $425,000. If sufficient ground cannot be secured on the Mahuka site at that aggregate figure, another location will be selected.

This seems to be the ultimatum which the treasury officials, acting on advice furnished them by the supervising architect's office, will give to the people of Honolulu. Assistant Secretary Newton, who has charge of all public building matters, frankly informed the Star-Bulletin's correspondent that a final decision had been virtually reached to pay no more than $425,000 for a satisfactory and desirable site. He said the sum of $225,000 demanded for the Mahuka site would not be paid. He regarded the price asked for that land as excessive.

The conclusions reached by the treasury department authorities is largely based on a letter written by United States District Attorney Jeff McCarn to the department of justice. He was submitting a statement concerning the present status or condemnation proceedings. In effect he declared the property owners who controlled the selected site in Honolulu were attempting to "hold up" the government. He advised that this should be resisted. If necessary, he suggested, another site should be chosen, for which lower prices would be demanded.

The report from District Attorney McCarn was promptly forwarded on to the treasury department. The immediate effect was an announcement that the government would not pay $225,000 for the Mahuka site. The amount was asserted to be too high by $100,000. It was said the government was perfectly willing to pay $425,000. If that does not prove acceptable another location will be selected.

It was made plain that treasury department officials and those in the department of justice placed great reliance in the wisdom and efficiency of Mr. McCarn, believing he was on the spot and had carefully investigated the situation. It is unlikely that there will be any modification or the present attitude unless convincing arguments are brought to indicate the desirability of paying $225,000 for the site offered.

For the purpose of fumigation, the British freighter Harpalvee, from Newcastle, was brought to a berth at quarantine wharf yesterday afternoon. The vessel will be kept in detention for 24 hours before coming to a berth at Pier 3 to discharge coal consigned to the Inter Island Steam Navigation Company.

FIELD TRAINING WILL KEEP OAHU SOLDIERS BUSY

General Orders No. 10, Hawaiian department, are just out, designating the periods of field training for the Oahu garrison during 1914. A glance at the schedule shows that the troops will be kept busy out of doors until late in the fall, ending with combined maneuvers. The body of the order follows:

Field Training. Period: April 1, 1914, to October 31, 1914.

Small-Arms Target Practice, Regular Season. Period: April 1, 1914, to September 30, 1914, for troops of the 1st Hawaiian Brigade.

Training of Combined Arms. Period: September 1, 1914, to October 31, 1914.

The commanding general, 1st Hawaiian Brigade, will arrange with these headquarters for combined exercises of two or more arms, to be held during the months of September and October, commencing with the smaller units and working up to exercises by the entire brigade, reinforced by troops of all other arms.

The allotment of time during the field training period for organizations not brigaded, is made as follows:

(a) First Field Artillery: April and May—Battery and battalion instruction; pistol and sub-caliber practice. June, July and August—Regimental, battalion and battery instruction. September and October—Combined field exercises. June 1 to September 30, 1914—Service practice, at time most practicable and within the discretion of the regimental commander.

(b) Fourth Cavalry: April and May—Troop instruction. June and July—Target practice. Troop and squadron instruction. August 1 to October 31—Squadron and regimental instruction. September and October—Combined field exercises.

(c) Company I, 3d Battalion of Engineers: April 1 to August 31—Company instruction. Target practice during the month of August. September and October—Combined field exercises.

(d) Field Company E, Signal Corps: April 1 to August 31: Company instruction. Target practice at such times as is most convenient. September and October—Combined field exercises.

During the period of field training organizations of this command will arrange all instruction, as far as practicable, to comprise concrete exercises and problems, having in view the general defense of Oahu, as approved by the war department.

The assignment of organizations to areas for special study during this period will be the same as that prescribed in memorandum from these headquarters, dated March 18, 1913. This does not preclude special studies which may be ordered by the brigade commander for organizations of his brigade, or by a commander of a regiment not brigaded.

Reports concerning special studies made by organizations or detachments, will be forwarded through tactical commanders, to these headquarters.

Throughout the year regimental hands will be given two hours instruction each week, under the regimental surgeon, in the details of first aid to the injured and litter bearer drill.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Word from Jack Desha regarding the Hilo postoffice does a good deal to clear up the uncertainty regarding the appropriation. He says that $12,500 has been set aside for interior furnishing, this sum to come out of the $200,000 appropriation.

The case of Cyrus C. Miller came up for hearing before the United States Commissioner, George A. Davis, this afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock. U. S. District Attorney Jeff McCarn prosecuting. Miller is a negro. He is charged with selling liquor in a place of ill-repute, which he is accused of running.

Attorney-general Thayer filed in circuit court this morning a demurrer to the amended complaint of the Kewalo citizens, who are seeking to obtain an injunction against the reclamation fill in progress in that section. Argument on the demurrer was heard by Circuit Judge Robinson at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The demurrer alleges the amended complaint, like the original one, sets forth insufficient facts; also, that it does not show the reclamation work is illegal or contrary to the contract, which latter is not declared contrary to law. The complaint is by J. A. Magoon and others against Supt. J. W. Caldwell and the Lord-Young Engineering Company.

WATER METER SIGNS ARE NOW ON SALE

By an investment of 50 cents, purchasing a blue enameled sign bearing the white letter "M," property owners using water meters may now have the privilege of irrigating their lawns and gardens without fear of molestation. Superintendent Caldwell of the public works department announced today that the signs have arrived and will be on sale at the water-works department.

These signs cannot be used by citizens who are still obtaining their water supply under the flat-rate system, and the superintendent says the force of inspectors will redouble its efforts to prevent irrigation by this class of consumers, save in the hours prescribed by the department.

BISHOP LUCCOCK LEAVES MESSAGE FOR HAWAII NEI

a fulcrum for God's lever, with which he has lifted the world forward and upward. In some degree this is already true of the Hawaiian islands. The idea of industrial education which General Armstrong carried over from the Hawaiian islands and applied in his school for colored folk at Hamden-Sydney Institute in Virginia has done more for the uplift of the colored race, than New England has done in a hundred years through literature. Sun Yat Sen caught the light of progressive Christian civilization in Honolulu and lit up all China with it. How far you little candle throws its light. Such contributions to human progress will increase; for Hawaii is an experiment station in the relation of the races.

"The economic situation is perplexing. In the old game of 'cracking the whip' the chap at the end of the line caught the impulse of the swift, forward and torturous movement, and was frequently bruised. Little Hawaii is at the end of the tariff whip and is being bruised a bit. However, it is an old saying that one should not carry all his eggs in one basket. If in the new adjustment there is a redistribution of the treasures of the islands, the shock may do good. And then what sometimes seems disaster is but a new way of spelling opportunity. When the Erie railroad was completed and the event was celebrated at Buffalo, the terminus of the road on Lake Erie, W. H. Seward made a speech and prophesied—prophecy was Seward's strong point. He prophesied that the day would come when Buffalo would have two railroads and the Erie canal would still be in use. One of the New York papers came out soon after, and with the infinite wisdom that has always characterized the New York press, declared that it was a humiliation that a great state like New York, should have a governor who on such an important occasion would get drunk and talk like a fool—forsooth—two railroads at Buffalo and the Erie canal still in use. Well, there are more than 20 railroads at Buffalo and the state has spent $10,000,000 recently in deepening the Erie canal.

"The year 1915 is at the door. It will be an eventful year like that of 1492, when Columbus drove his caravels across the sea, pushing the horizon of the world 3000 miles westward, and changing the line of human progress in such a miraculous way. When the Panama canal is completed 'dividing the continent and uniting the world,' the voyage of Columbus will be finished and his dream fulfilled; a vessel can lift anchor in the ports of Europe and drop it in the ports of Asia. The man with a compass tells us that the curved line to the north of Hawaii is the shortest route from the Pacific gate of the canal to Japan and China. But progress does not move on a curved line or on a straight line but on a zigzag lane, and I am persuaded that Honolulu is at one of the angles of the zigzag line. Venice lost her halo by a change of sea-route; let us hope that Honolulu by a lengthening of the sea-route may gain her halo and sit as a queen in the Pacific.

"The most impressive things on the islands to me are not its palms or its palms, its canyons or its bays, but its high purpose of life. The ideals that are making the continent great flourish here as shown in its churches, its schools, its beneficent organizations. I know of no people who recognize an opportunity more accurately than those people or who respond to it more generously or heroically. They are working at the nation's task, at the world's task and are doing splendidly.

"I leave Hawaii with hands outstretched in benediction and with a prayer in my heart that she may real-

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES FORMULATES PLAN FOR FEEDING THE WORKLESS

By issuing one meal ticket a day to each of the single Spanish, Porto Rican and Russian men who visit the office in search of employment, and by giving grocery orders to each family which seeks the advice of the manager in the same matter, the Associated Charities believes that, for the present at least, it has solved the problem of feeding the workless, until it can secure work of some sort for them.

"It is just enough to keep them from starving," said Assistant Manager Mrs. Alice C. Jordan this morning, when explaining the new method as set forth in her report for February. "But the association believes that it has temporarily solved the problem."

The charities report for the month just passed shows that there were 66 new applications for relief, 32 new applications for employment, 46 old cases handled, 402 calls at the office and 58 visits made. Spaniards to the number of 26, six Porto Ricans and seven Portuguese, some single men and some with families, applied at the office for assistance during February. A large number of persons also applied for employment, many having been sent by Ralph A. Keenan, territorial immigration commissioner, and Ignacio de Arana, the Spanish consul.

According to Mrs. Jordan, one of the most peculiar cases handled by the association last month was that of an old man who, having arrived from the mainland a few days before, appeared at the office and informed the manager that he wanted to go at once to the Baldwin Home on Maui. His friends on the coast, he said, had told him that, on account of his old age, he could easily get into the home and that all he had to do would be to come to Honolulu. When informed by Mrs. Jordan that the Baldwin Home is only for aged persons who are natives of these islands, he seemed very willing to return to the coast, and eagerly accepted the offer of the Catholic Ladies' Aid Society to pay his return passage.
