JAMES D. DOUGHERTY CHOSEN DIRECTOR-GENERAL TO HEAD 1915 MID-PACIFIC CARNIVAL

"Get Together" Spirit to be Keypnote of Work of Directors as Brought Out at a Special Meeting This Morning—Plans for Next Year's Celebration Soon to be Outlined by the Board, Each Member Working With the New Director

RAYMOND C. BROWN TAKES POSITION
AS SECRETARY OF THE DIRECTORATE

President Paris Expresses Opinion That Carnival Can Be Financed Without Calling for an Assessment—Says That the Steamship Companies and Hotels, Which Are Benefited by the Festival, Might be Willing Donors to Fund

James D. Dougherty was elected director-general of the 1915 Mid-Pacific carnival at a special meeting this morning of the board of directors of the Carnival corporation. The motion to elect Mr. Dougherty was made by Major E. V. Smith, seconded by G. Fred Bush, vice-president of the directors, and unanimously carried. Mr. Dougherty then resigned as secretary of the board of directors, and Raymond C. Brown was chosen to fill that office.

The election of Mr. Dougherty does not come as a surprise to those who already are interesting themselves in the plans for next year's celebration. The excellent manner in which he conducted the carnival last year placed him in the field as the only candidate for the position in 1915, but, as brought out at the meeting this morning, it was only after many lengthy conferences with President E. H. Paris and other members of the board, that he finally gave his consent to serve. With the director-general now appointed, the carnival directors are prepared to launch their plans for the celebration next year.

In brief but earnest statements, the members of the board congratulated Mr. Dougherty on his election. There was a feeling of keen enthusiasm displayed in the words of the directors, and Mr. Dougherty's response was equally in keeping with the general spirit of the meeting.

"I had a great many conferences with President Paris in the matter before I decided to accept," he said, "and I want to say that, from experience gained during the last carnival, in carrying out the 1915 celebration, I can see no cause for there being repeated the few difficulties of last year. I want to work for the best interests of the carnival and for the best interests of the board of directors. If I fly too high, I want you to bring me down again, but gently."

President Paris said, as the director-general had been elected, that the "get together" spirit should be the keynote of the work of the directorate. He pointed out that the the director-general was laid over until the next meeting.

"I would like to have it understood that in no way did I desire to again serve as director-general of the Mid-Pacific carnival," said Mr. Dougherty after the meeting. "It was only at the earnest request of the board of directors that I accepted the position."

ALFRED NOBLE PASSES AWAY IN NEW YORK

Engineer Who Investigated the Pearl Harbor Drydock, Was Well Known Here

Word has reached here that Alfred Noble, probably the best known consulting civil engineer in America, died recently in New York, the result of an acute attack of pneumonia. Mr. Noble recently underwent an operation, and his weakened constitution, together with his advanced years was not proof against the disease.

Mr. Noble was selected by Secretary of the Navy Daniels to come to Honolulu and make an investigation of the Pearl Harbor drydock situation, when the navy civil engineers and the representatives of the contractors failed to come together on a general plan of construction. He came to Oahu last year, and spent several weeks in investigating conditions, finally submitting a report that brought to light a number of new features connected with the splendid very quietly at the Moana Hotel, but all those with whom he came in contact were impressed with his kindly nature, and warm geniality.

Alfred Noble was born at Livonia, Michigan, August 7, 1844. During the civil war he served three years in the army of the Potomac and after his retirement from military duty entered the University of Michigan, from which he graduated in 1870.

From that time until 1882 he was in charge of extensive improvement work on St. Mary's Falls Canal and St. Mary's River. Subsequently he supervised the construction of important railway and other bridges across the Mississippi, served on the United States Board of Deep Waterways, and was a member of the board of consulting engineers of the Panama Canal.

In 1903 he was president of the American Society of Engineers, and since 1897 had been prominent as a member of the Western Society of Engineers. His home was in New York City.

Some changes are being made in the subordinate positions in the Capitol building. It is said that Henry Yap and Eben Cushingham, of the secretary's office, are slated for the ax.

STATEMENT OF JEFF McCARN

I am not in the habit of trying cases in the press, and yet I fear my silence may lead to misunderstanding of the vicious attack of Attorney McBride—a misunderstanding that might prove to be an injustice. And since Mr. McBride states in this morning's Advertiser that he was the aggressor, thus modifying most materially his original statement, I feel that I should take the public into my confidence and yield to the request of the press representatives so far as to say that in my statement should be radically changed, for they will be disproved in court.

I never carry a concealed weapon on my person. I placed one a few weeks ago in a desk drawer in my office because of many threatening letters which I had received. On Tuesday about three minutes before I was assaulted I put this weapon into my pocket before stepping out into the hallway to interview some important witnesses because of a direct and urgent hint that I was to be attacked that very day, and because I knew that several were about to pass through the hall who are bitter personal enemies, among them Mr. McBride and some who are now under indictment in the federal court. Motives of malice or revenge were farthest from my thoughts, and I never attempted to use the weapon until I had been violently struck in the face by McBride, been thrown to the floor and kicked in the side and believed myself to be in a position of danger, not only because of his violence but also the violence of others. The kick in my side was far more injurious than the blow in the face. I am glad, however, I was restrained from using this weapon, even though many might justify its use in self-defense. I repeat with emphasis that I am glad I committed no offense with this weapon which I never carry in court or out of court, however, cowardly the attack of a brutal giant may have been.

The jibes at "gun playing" Tennessee, are unfair, as that splendid state has a stringent law against carrying concealed weapons, and more faithfully enforced than in most states.

As I was officially exonerated in the Thielen case and as many others know, I have been misrepresented in my official attitude toward the political situation in Honolulu, so the public should be on guard in this unfortunate case of last Tuesday. I do not ask for anything further than fair play and a suspension of judgment until all the facts are known.

I came to this beautiful city to reside for several years with an earnest purpose to maintain law and order. My attitude toward prize fighting, gambling, the illegal sale of liquor and all other violations of law is well known. Such attitude excites opposition. The opposition has sought to discredit me by laying to my charge many things which did not

$1,230,000 IS EXPENSE OF FUNERAL OF DOWAGER RULER OF THE JAPANESE

At a special session of the Japanese Diet held here today $1,230,000 was appropriated to cover the expenses of the funeral, which will be one of the largest and most impressive of its kind ever held in the empire. The remains of the late empress will be interred in the Monoyama cemetery where her husband, the late Emperor Mitsuhiro, is buried.

EVERYBODY WAS HAPPY IN LAND OF THE SOLDIER

Benefit for Army Relief Society
Proves Big Success, Honolulu Attendance Heavy

The County Fair at Schofield Barracks yesterday was the sample from which the wholesale order for tomorrow's fun was taken. About 1000 Honoluluans came out by train and auto to take in the sights, and it is a safe estimate that three times that number will be on hand from the city tomorrow. Yesterday's entertainment was for the benefit of the Army Relief Society, but there was the double purpose of bringing the Schofield and Honolulu people into closer touch, and in both ways the affair was a success.

The County Fair represented an enormous amount of work on the part of everyone connected with it, but the officers and ladies of the post felt themselves well repaid by the appreciation shown for their efforts. For weeks past everyone has been rustling to get up the exhibits, and to perfect the various stunts that went to make up the successful whole. As a result, the fair went with a snap, and there were no hitches to try the patience of the spectators.

The fair opened with a grand parade, which started from the railroad station at Jones Ranch, and led through the canvas exposition city to the circus grounds. Most of the ladies of the garrison figured in the delegation of militant suffragettes that marched in the parade, led by Mrs. Sturgis, wife of Colonel Sturgis of the artillery. The Pankhursts were there, in the familiar prison garb, and many other notables, each carrying aloft a banner with an appropriate inscription.

The Daughters of the Regiment was another feature of the parade, each of the four regiments at Schofield being represented by some of its ladies, smartly mounted, and accompanied by the proper escort of outriders. The Ad Club had its place in the procession and the various "Rube" outfits gotten up by post people filled out. Governor Pinkham was there, driving at the head of the line.

The show was somewhat delayed.

Former Candidate for the Supreme Bench Alleges Effort to Kill Claudius McBride Was Made by Local Federal Officer

[Associated Press Cable.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 7.—Judge Arthur A. Wilder today filed charges with the department of justice in which he alleges that U. S. District Attorney Jeff McCarn attempted to kill Attorney Claudius McBride in Honolulu last Tuesday. Judge Wilder demands that the department of justice oust McCarn from his federal office in Hawaii. The charges filed by Wilder have been replied to by McCarn, who maintains that he drew his gun on McBride in self-defense.

Jeff McCarn, when called over the telephone by a Star-Bulletin regarding the above message, said: "I have filed no answer to the charges, and do not propose to. I have no knowledge that any charges have been made against me in Washington."

KING GEORGE AND QUEEN MARY OPEN BRITISH MUSEUM

Institution Recently Completed
at Cost of $1,000,000—
Joins the Old Building

[Associated Press Cable.]
LONDON, May 7.—King George and Queen Mary today opened a new wing of the British Museum, which has just been completed at a cost of $1,000,000. It is the first part of a large scheme of extension.

In 1895 the government bought a considerable portion of the Duke of Bedford's property around the museum for $1,250,000 and a large area was cleared. The legacy of $850,000 bequeathed by Vincent Sturgis, loan for the enlargement of the museum gave impetus to the present extension. The bequest was intended particularly for the extension of the reading room and library, to which the testator was a frequent visitor.

The new building is in architectural harmony with the old museum. Its facade, which is flanked by two massive towers, is of Portland stone, the outer walls and pedestals of the forecourt being of Scotch granite. The main entrance is surmounted by a balcony, the parapet of which is formed by the stone laid in June, 1907, by the late King Edward. The doorway itself is formed of marble, surrounded with granite, and is closed by a bronze door, the upper panels of which are sculptured in relief.

The architectural composition of the building is severely simple. In the interior the object in view has been to deprive the extension of anything irrelevant to the main purpose, the primary idea being to make it a mere background for the exhibition of the nation's treasures.

An important feature of the new wing is the staircase which is the link between the old building and the new one. This is extremely simple in design, its walls are covered with marble, which has been selected more for its texture as a background for antique sculptures than for its veining.

The building comprises a basement as well as sub-ground, ground, mezzanine and top floors.

The top floors will accommodate the print department, in the basement floor will be utilized as a copy-right office and for book storage, while the mezzanine floor will be in part a public newspaper room.

The mezzanine floor will be largely given up to staff rooms, and it contains space for the future accommodation of music and maps, while the Stein collection of Eastern paintings is being temporarily housed there.
