HARDING LOOKS INTO FACTS OF SUGAR INDUSTRY

Ohio Senator-elect Visits Hawaii Cane-Fields and Gets First-Hand Information

Sugar growing, sugar cutting and harvesting, sugar troubles and difficulties, sugar shipping and transportation and the effect of a low tariff on sugar or the total abolition of a sugar tariff were explained in all phases to Senator-elect Warren Harding of Ohio, who is Hawaii's guest, yesterday at the plantation of the Hawaiian Agricultural Company on the island of Hawaii.

Mr. Harding returned to Honolulu on the Matsonia this morning more convinced than ever that free sugar would destroy the principal industry of Uncle Sam's paradise islands and that the islands need his help at Washington. In a decided voice, the senator repeated his declaration that he will defend the protective tariff on sugar when he is seated in the senate. As a result of the inspection trip on Hawaii, Mr. Harding announced today that he will cancel his passage on the Matsonia and will not leave until the Sierra departs for the mainland on Saturday. He will take an automobile trip around the island tomorrow and pineapple plantations as well as sugar estates will be visited.

The Kauai Chamber of Commerce held a special session Saturday and wired an invitation to the senator to visit the Garden Isle with the Promotion Committee's excursion Saturday and Sunday, but as the senator is scheduled to leave for the coast Saturday, he announced that he would be unable to accept the invitation.

"The trip to the volcano was wonderful," enthusiastically spoke Mr. Harding today. "Once in every man's life he is granted an opportunity to view one of nature's grandest works, an active volcano, and old Dame Nature was good to us Sunday. The site of that living fire reminds me of the story of the old Irishman who refused to believe there was no hell after seeing a volcano. It certainly surpasses anything I ever have seen."

"I'd have saved the original cost and maintenance expense of those chimneys and tanks—if I'd only known about Westinghouse Motor Drive."

Did you ever stop to think that Fire Risk and Fire Insurance Premiums would be reduced if you used Westinghouse Motor Drive? Our Chief of Power will gladly give you details. The motors themselves are exceedingly safe. You eliminate your heavy line shafts, which are a constant menace because their journal boxes are apt to overheat and set fire to the accumulated oil, waste, and dust. Then by using central station power you get rid of your engine and boiler room, which must otherwise be in communication with your plant. You can walk up your heating boiler with a fire-proof wall. It is a fact that insurance premiums on motor driven plants are lower in many localities than those on plants with line shaft drive. W Hawaiian Electric Company, Ltd.
