Senator O'Gorman Refuses to Vote For Suffrage Amendment.

Photo by American Press Association.

Disappointment on the part of 200 suffragists who called on United States Senator James A. O'Gorman was not disguised when he came out with the frank statement that he was unable to respond to their call to support the Susan B. Anthony amendment. This statement was met with audible sighs from all parts of the big office of the senator at 37 Wall Street, New York city. In the accompanying illustration are shown Mrs. William L. Colt, who headed the delegation, and Senator O'Gorman. The call upon Senator O'Gorman represented the first step in a nation wide campaign begun by the congressional union for woman suffrage to interview every one of the 531 members of congress before this body convenes in December.

Looking on the Sunny Side

There is a great difference in the various kinds of wrinkles stamped on the human face by emotions of one sort or another. There are the wrinkles of sorrow, laying across the forehead and around the eyes, giving the face, even when smiling, an expression of sadness, a pitiable look of grief. There are the wrinkles of discontent and anger, marking "crow's feet" between the eyes, drawing down the lips with querulous lines from nose to mouth and giving a general air of fretting to the whole face.

Then, last and best of all, are the lines of mirth, leaving fine wrinkles around the corners of the eyes and sometimes a semi-circular line in each cheek from smiling. The lines of mirth are all curves, rather becoming than otherwise. If we must have wrinkles at all, let us have these. They are the landmarks of many happy years gone before and many happy ones to come, for the man or woman who has learned to smile at life need never fear the future.

More and more we are coming to realize that happiness is within the reach of all if we will but stretch out our hands to take it. As the practical farmer said when a visitor admired the picturesque quaintness of his farm house, "Wal, it's all in the pint of view." And so it is with happiness. "It's all in the pint of view," for what some of us find happiness others would call misery.

Therefore, let us learn to adjust our viewpoint to the bright side of things. If we are not happy in our present environment let us look at things from another angle and perhaps they will not seem so gloomy. To be sure, we may not be so well off as some, but then, we are a great deal better off than others.

Then there is one great and all-sufficient remedy for all fancied unhappiness or dissatisfaction—work. If we work hard enough we will not have time to look for discontent. If sorrow or loss overtakes us on life's road, let us pick ourselves up and throw ourselves with extra vigor into the task of overcoming the obstacles in our paths. And when next we think of the grief, which once looked so big, we will find that we have left it far behind on the road and that now it looks like a speck in the distance.

It is only when you grieve or grow bitter over every jolt that the lines of sorrow or discontent leave their brand on your face. If you greet them with a smile your face will show the world that happiness has been your portion because you learned early in the game to look on the sunny side of life.

HOW BEGINNERS IN VOCAL WORK MUST 'WARM UP'

On arising, take several deep breaths (always in a well-aired room or out-of-doors). Draw in your breath for four or five seconds, then hold it for the same length of time. Then let out your breath slowly. Do these things several times every morning. Sing before meals rather than after meals. If you are a hearty eater, wait at least an hour after eating. Then sing gently, at first, until your voice "warms up," and you feel that you can sing easily, says an article of advice in the June Woman's World.

Do not square your shoulders, but stand at ease, upright and with your head slightly thrown back. You must breathe easily, for good singing is fully one-half good breathing. A simple test for breath-control is this: Hold some book you know well and after taking a good, long breath, read aloud. Do not draw! and do not hurry. Read easily and in the tone you use when talking to your friends. Take your watch in hand and see how many seconds you can continue reading without taking breath. You should be able to read 60 seconds on one breath. If you cannot do this you need breathing exercises.

If possible, arrange your affairs so that you can sing for a few minutes—no less than 10 and no more than 20—three times a day, morning, afternoon and evening. If you cannot do this, have a rest or some recreation after your day's work before you begin to sing. If your work keeps you much indoors a short walk is the best preparation for singing. If, at the end of the day, you are too tired to walk, lie down in a well-aired room and relax completely till well rested.
