LAND OF SUMMER SEAS CASTS SPELL OVER SAN FRANCISCO

Enthusiastic Accounts of Celebration of Kamehameha Day at Fair in Coast Newspapers

"Hawaii, the land of 'summer seas flashing in the sun,' warded her tropical zephyrs over the Exposition yesterday and cast the spell of her charm over the thousands who visited the Hawaiian pavilion in the daylight hours or who succumbed to the lure of the 'Night In Hawaii' staged on the lagoon in front of the Palace of Fine Arts in the early evening, or attended the ball to Governor Pinkham in the California building in the late evening," says the San Francisco Examiner of June 12 commenting on the celebration of Kamehameha Day at the Panama Pacific Exposition. Every newspaper in San Francisco gave the Hawaiian celebration a lavish allowance of space, both preceding and following the celebration. The Examiner continued:

Above—President Charles C. Moore of the Exposition presenting a basket of jewels to Governor Pinkham of Hawaii, guest of honor at notable occasion. Below—Miss Libbie Nawahine Peck, Oahu's princess in the Queen of the Night Festival on the waters of the lagoon. Photos by George G. Fraser, San Francisco.

Queen Liliuokalani, the recent queen of the monarchy of Hawaii, who now lives in democratic state in the islands.

"A reception in the afternoon filled the pavilion to overflowing. The Hawaiian orchestra discoursed music throughout the reception and the members of the commission from Hawaii were assisted in receiving by a number of local hostesses. The official receiving line included Governor Pinkham, Mrs. G. W. Kirkaldy, Commissioner H. P. Wood and Mrs. Wood, Commissioner B. G. Rivenburgh and Mrs. Rivenburgh, Commissioner John Efinger and Mrs. Efinger, Senator J. L. Coke and Mrs. Coke and Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Paxon.

Record-breaking sales for the month of April and May have compelled the Chalmers Motor Company of Detroit.

The governor of the territory of Hawaii, Lucius E. Pinkham, who came across the Pacific ocean especially to assist in the celebration of Hawaii's Day at the Exposition, was the figure around which revolved the carnival of speeches, Hawaiian music, South Sea pageantry and Exposition cordiality. "Gov. Pinkham was presented with a basket of 'Novagems' from the Tower of Jewels by President Moore of the Exposition, who said, 'With them go our affection and our best wishes.' Governor Pinkham then left the platform in front of the Hawaiian pavilion where the exercises were held, to go to the lawn to the left and plant a royal palm tree, brought from Hawaii for the purpose. Throng of Hawaiians. "The planting was witnessed by the local Hawaiian colony, which numbers many hundreds who have business interests in the islands or summer homes there. The Royal Hawaiian orchestra sang native songs between the speeches which welcomed the governor, and the exercises closed with the band playing first the plaintive 'Aloha' and then the 'Star Spangled Banner.' "The other speakers besides Governor Pinkham and President Moore were H. P. Wood, resident commissioner from Hawaii, who was chairman of the day, Mayor Rolph, of San Francisco, and Arthur Arlett, representing the Governor of California. "Yesterday was named Hawaiian Day at the Exposition because of the fact that June 11 is a day set aside in Hawaii to the commemoration of the glorious achievements of the Kamehameha dynasty. It was celebrated all over the islands with the same fervor as in the bit of transplanted Hawaii at the Exposition. Typical Hawaiian Weather. "Yesterday's weather was, according to the testimony of the speakers, including Governor Pinkham, typical of Hawaiian. Certainly the setting was as like a bit of one of the purple isles as art and a friendly climate could make it. "Governor Pinkham was given prolonged applause as he stepped into the sunshine to speak to the multitudes which clogged Administration avenue with gayly-colored parasols, Panama hats and summery apparel. He told of the gentleness of the people of the islands and of their life under a care-free regime which has left them like children of nature. He recited the achievements of the United States Government in Hawaii, and of the purpose of the Territory's exhibit at the exposition. Tells of Island Defense. "Touching upon the recent visit to Hawaii of the insular possession committee of Congress, he said: "Our visiting legislators have had forced upon their attention by the most concrete military and naval situation extant, as concentrated in the island of Oahu, Hawaii, the problem of immediate preparedness and de-
