WHAT INTERNATIONAL CONSCIENCE DEMANDS.

There is a disposition, noticeable in a few of the mainland papers, to hope that in response to the firm American notes Germany will give up her submarine warfare. This hope, if it exists, is probably doomed to some disappointment.

It is too much to expect that Germany will abandon entirely her submarine campaign and it is too much to ask. A careful reading of the first and second American notes does not indicate that the United States government has asked it. What this country does ask, and what we may expect, is a modification of the campaign to avoid the needless sacrifice of human life in contravention to international law and the rights of humanity.

What America asks is that merchant vessels shall not be sunk without warning, that opportunity be afforded passengers and crew to make their escape, and particularly that ships shall not be torpedoed until it is definitely established that they are belligerent and not neutral ships.

If straws show which way the wind of war blows, America may hope that the next German note will indicate a spirit of readiness to observe the incontestable law of nations, which calls for halt and search of vessels before they are destroyed as belligerents, or as carrying contraband.

Both the Allies and the Germans have transgressed international law in their desperate efforts to gain a strategic advantage or to terrorize the opponent. A well-informed technical magazine, discussing the use of poisonous gases, says it is now established that both sides have used asphyxiation as a mode of combat, giving the Germans the doubtful credit of using the most cruel and death-dealing. Aviators of both sides have bombarded unfortified towns.

It is high time that the neutral nations of the world found some means of calling a halt to lawless practices. Certainly if these practices continue, and grow in variety and violence as they have grown during the past few months, the neutrals are likely to combine against the worst offender.

Admiral Trubbel's warning to his countrymen, published in Der Tag of Berlin and told of in yesterday's despatches, shows that one leader, at least, of the influential naval party sees the lack of wisdom in sacrificing America's friendship to continue the submarine campaign unmodified. There is such a thing as international conscience, and it is inexpressibly shocked at such incidents as those of the Lusitania and the Gulfight. And international conscience will endure long after this war has passed into a nightmare of the past.

EVERY RIGHT TO RESENT.

Hawaii has every right to resent the suggestion made in Washington that the organic act be so changed as to allow the naming of mainlanders for territorial judgeships.

The Washington correspondent of this paper, whose letter today reveals the plan on foot, rightfully dubs the proposed arrangement "the exportation of judges to Hawaii." It would be as much a commercial—in the sense of political trading—system as a judicial system. Against such a plan the territory has every reason to protest. If it were to be worked out primarily on the basis of ability and fitness, the injustice would not be so great; but this territory has past experience to prove that ability and fitness come second to political expediency in filling Hawaiian offices by mainland appointments.

The department of justice has fallen into a grave error in its handling of the judiciary appointments. Its first consideration is to see that the Republican judges are ousted. Then comes the task of filling the vacancies. As the news from Washington today shows, the number of "deserving Democrats" is so limited and their calibre so doubtful that the attorney-general is forced to consider the naming of mainlanders.

If the law is changed and judges appointed from the mainland, the judiciary of Hawaii will be at the mercy of party politics. Candidates for the bench will be chosen from the clamorous ranks of political henchmen. Judges will depend for reappointment not on their record for integrity, knowledge of the law and capacity to interpret it and administer it, but upon the shifting tides of party success or failure and upon being persona grata to the political cal satraps in Washington. Justice, instead of lifting the scales, will tote the carpet-bag.

DISPLACING JUDGE WHITNEY.

(From the Maui News)

It is certainly disheartening when a man of the calibre of Judge William L. Whitney, of the First Circuit Court and of the Juvenile Court of Honolulu, is refused reappointment solely because he happens to be a Republican and the administration apparently has a Democratic lawyer that needs the job. It is on behalf of the community that we refer, and not to Judge Whitney, who doubtless will have a good deal better job, financially considered, than he now has on the bench. Judge Whitney's conspicuous work for almost fifteen years as a district magistrate and a circuit judge, has been in connection with juvenile delinquents. A young man, he has been peculiarly fitted for dealing with this particularly difficult class of work. He has devoted his whole time and energy to it. His personality has made it possible for him to set youthful offenders and delinquents back upon the straight path, where most persons would have failed. He has been instrumental in framing special laws for the dealing with children, and his real sympathy and understanding has always urged him to the fore in all movements looking to the amelioration of the wrongs against childhood, or in the sordidness of life to the little unfortunates of the street.

And yet the attorney-general has notified Judge Whitney by cable from Washington that he does not intend to recommend his reappointment. It takes just such an act of crass stupidity to convince one that no mistake was made in selecting the animal which symbolizes the dominant political party.

LYNCH LAW.

From the account of a lynching near Macon, Georgia, yesterday:

One negro, who failed to give a satisfactory account of himself, was lynched, his young son strung up beside him and both bodies riddled with bullets. The posse have not yet succeeded in finding any of the negroes believed to be directly implicated in the killing.

Lynch law is generally careless. In this instance the mob killed two negroes not believed to be directly implicated in the killing. No wonder the country at large was horrified at the exhibition of Georgia justice in the Frank case.

There ought to be a rattling good crowd out at the Ad Club lunch tomorrow. In the first place, it's a rattling good program that's coming up, and in the second place, Honolulu should give a particularly warm welcome to Captain Brown of the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Thetis. The Thetis and her officers and crew are "Honolulu folks," and this is perhaps the first time that the businessmen of Honolulu have taken time to recognize the fact and attest their appreciation.

It is noticeable that news from the state department is now given out by Secretary Lansing. When Bryan was secretary his name rarely figured in the despatches.

The paragraphers who were cracking jokes a few months ago about moving-day for the poor old Sultan are now engaged in a right-about-face.

Don't forget to send your old magazines and papers to the Star-Bulletin office to be forwarded to the U. S. S. Princeton at Samoa.

Holland's preparations for war are something of an example to other neutral nations which may be drawn into the maelstrom.

Not even the thunder of war can distract the real fan's attention from the fact that Ty Cobb leads the big-league batters.

Those royalists who hope to make Albert king of the French are probably reckoning without one man—Albert.

Napoleon's shade doubtless observes with grim satisfaction the smashing of the Russian armies.

The Balkan monarchs are not above bargaining for their share of the war booty.

Heavy mortality is reported among the hyphens.

Huerta will do a little watchful waiting of his own.

M. G. GREENLY, instructor in biology at McKinley High School, left yesterday evening on the transport Thomas for a two month's vacation in the states.

GOVERNOR PINKHAM is expected to return on the Sibier, which is due here on July 16. Dr. Charles B. Cooper, of the governor's staff, will accompany him.

J. C. TAIT, Mrs. Tait, Jean and Edith Tait of Norfolk, Va., who arrived today in the steamer Wilhelmina, will visit in the islands before returning to the mainland.

C. E. RIPLEY, the architect, and Mrs. Ripley, returned to Honolulu in the steamer Wilhelmina today. They were accompanied by their daughter, Miss C. Ripley.

DR. MOTOJUMA, a young Japanese physician who, until about two and a half years ago practised in Honolulu, died recently in a hospital in Yokohama, a victim of tuberculosis.

EDWARD M. EHRHORN, territorial entomologist, will leave Honolulu in the Matson steamer Mauna, July 20, for the Pacific coast to remain one month. He will do the exposition.

MR. and MRS. HAROLD HABER of San Francisco will spend their honeymoon at Honolulu and in touring the islands. They were passengers in the steamer Wilhelmina arriving today.

MRS. K. C. BARTON, Wadleigh Barton, De Wolf Barton and Miss Catherine Barton of Omaha were numbered with the tourists brought by the Matson steamer Wilhelmina today.

COACH MIDKIFF of Punahou will sail tomorrow on the Mauna Kea for Hawaii. Mr. Midkiff will spend several weeks of his vacation in the Kohala district, and on the slope of Mauna Kea.

CHARLES R. FORBES, superintendent of public works, returned today in the steamer Wilhelmina. He made careful investigation of prison and wharf construction while on the mainland.

JUDGE JOHN A. MATTHEWMAN of the circuit court of West Hawaii, will arrive in the city next Tuesday to attend several local hearings on the water rights case of the Parker Ranch territory.

SYDNEY JORDAN and Miss Jordan expect to depart for the coast within a few days to remain through the summer months. Mr. Jordan will spend some time at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

MISS STELLA D. HALSEY, daughter of Richard L. Halsey, inspector in charge of the United States immigration service, is back from the states. Miss Halsey was a passenger in the Wilhelmina.

DR. H. B. DELATOUR, prominent physician of New York City, and Mrs. Delatour were passengers from the mainland in the steamer Wilhelmina arriving today. They may spend some weeks in the islands.

GEORGE D. FLOOD, a steamship man of the north Pacific coast, who arrived in the Wilhelmina this morning, will remain in this city to act as representative for the steamer Mackinaw, which is expected to call soon at

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

—JOHN EFFINGER (writing from San Francisco): Over 60 per cent of the total attendance at the fair grounds visit the Hawaii building.

A. E. LARIMER: This will be the last month of bowling on the Y. M. C. A. alleys for the season. During August they will be torn up and rebuilt. In September the Y. M. C. A. will reopen the finest bowling alleys that have ever been seen in Hawaii.

—ACTING GOVERNOR THAYER: There are a lot of old magazines and books in Honolulu that should be supplied to the sailors at Samoa. Recently there was an appeal made by Gen. Carter through mainland newspapers for magazines for soldiers of Hawaii and the Philippines. If the local soldiers need magazines, then I believe we should consider them first, but if not we ought to help out the Samoa navy men. It might be well for the commanding officer of the Samoa naval station to act as Gen. Carter did.

BACCHUS—GOD OF WINE.

In mythological lore, among many more

There stands forth a God divine: A God of the high, a God of the low Worshipped by rich, worshipped by poor. Was Bacchus—God of Wine.

Throughout the years midst mirth and tears

He's held his steady sway O'er nations young and nations old, Mankind weak and mankind bold Will he reign forever and aye?

Since all time in every clime He's been toasted by poets sublime, This stealer of brains, this robber of Brawn,

This weakener of a nation's spawn, Subtle Bacchus—God of the Vine.

He is usually there, it matters not where, The same to him, the place or the time, The palace great, the hovel drear, The harlot's hate, the drunkard's leer Have charm for this God of Wine.

So when we think of the habit of drink And it's detriment to all mankind, Breeding anger, breeding hate, Making us damn our fate, Bacchus should be called God of Crime.

—H. M. McCance.

WATERHOUSE CO. DISPLAYS MERIT OF UNDERWOOD

The exhibit of the Underwood Type-writer Company at the exposition in San Francisco has furnished the material for a most interesting window display for the Waterhouse Company, Ltd., the local representatives.

Aside from the assembled and "torn down" machines, there are on exhibition the original signed contest sheets Honolulu to take bunker coal.

JOAQUIN GARCIA, cashier of the First National Bank of Walluku, with Mrs. Garcia, will be among the departing passengers on the Lurline this afternoon. They will spend four or five months in the mainland.

EDWARD DEKUM is back from six weeks spent on the Pacific coast. He visited his old home in Portland, Ore. Mrs. Dekum did not return in the Wilhelmina but will remain on the mainland some weeks longer.

JULY PAKA and Mrs. Paka, who in recent years have become famous on the mainland theatrical and vaudeville circuits as professional singers and dancers, returned to Honolulu today in the Wilhelmina to remain some weeks.

COL. P. H. CALLAHAN, Mrs. Callahan, R. E. and Mrs. R. E. Callahan of Louisville, Ky., are members of a touring party arriving today in the Wilhelmina. They will visit Hawaii and the volcano before returning to the mainland.

ATTORNEY DAVID L. WITHERTON, accompanied by his son, Frederick B. Withington, arrived on the steamer Wilhelmina this morning. Attorney Withington has spent several months on the mainland, having important legal business both in Boston and Washington, appearing at the latter city before the United States supreme court. Frederick Withington has been studying law at Harvard.

ACut Glass Design has been revived

A Georgian Design (of the period 1715-1800) has been revived for certain pieces of Cut Glass, and we were extremely fortunate in being able to secure a number of these pieces.

Every lover of the beautiful and quaint will desire adding to his collection an article or two in this splendid design, and it is to such people that we extend an invitation to view our Cut Glass display.
