GERMANY YIELDS TO U. S. DEMANDS ON SUBMARINE WAR

Battered Submarine F-4 Shown at Full Length With Her Pontoons

TWO MORE BODIES FOUND IN F-4 BUT NO IDENTIFICATION

Officer's Cap Near one Leads to Belief Remains are Those of Either Lieut. Ede, Commander, or Ensign Parker

NOTE BOOK BELIEVED TO HOLD BATTERY RECORD

No Special Data on Disaster as Far as Known—Writing Not Entirely Legible—Name-Plate of Wrecked Craft Will Be Kept as Flotilla Memento

Two more bodies of her crew were yielded up by the submarine today. So badly decomposed are they that identification has been impossible. The finding of shreds of an officer's cap near the bodies leads to the belief that one of them is either the remains of Lieut. Alfred L. Ede, commander of the craft, or Ensign Timothy A. Parker.

Shortly after 10 o'clock both bodies were found, according to Lieut. K. B. Crittenden this afternoon. They were discovered amid piles of battery plates, sand and debris. One of the bodies is that of a tall man, the skull is fairly intact, but the jawbones are missing so that the dental method of identification is impossible.

The longest body had one of its legs fairly well preserved. The hand and head were gone. Only a part of each skull was intact.

Both bodies were found in the starboard part of the battery compartment, and the fact that an officer's cap was found in a few inches of both leads to the belief that one of the bodies is that of an officer, and the other of an enlisted man of the crew. There were no insignia remaining on the cap to show the rank of its wearer.

NAME-PLATE OF SUBMARINE MEMENTO FOR 'F' FLOTILLA

To honor the memory of the comrades who went to their death in the F-4, the enlisted men of the submarine flotilla are to be given the name plate and number of the shattered submarine, Lieut. K. B. Crittenden, commander of the flotilla, announced this morning.

"As a matter of sentiment, we are giving the name plate and number to the men," he stated. "Both will be kept here, probably framed and placed in some appropriate location where the men may see them."

As soon as work started this morning, one of the flotilla's workmen began chiseling the letter F from the bow of the submarine as it lay in drydock, with the work of searching for bodies progressing. The number 4 was taken off later in the afternoon after the F had been removed.

Doubt if Note-book in Special Record. The so-called "memorandum" found late yesterday in the submarine is a battery record book, said Lieut. Crittenden this morning. "We haven't examined it yet, so we can't tell whether it contains any data which will help us ascertain definitely the cause of the accident," he said. "The book is about 8 by 16 inches in size, with the battery record kept in ink on the pages. It was in charge of Chief Electrician Harley Colwell, and I do not think it contains a record of the last moments of the F-4's crew."

The record book was in quite a good state of preservation, although somewhat discolored and eaten by action of sea water, and battery chemicals. The writing is said to be legible, although the book was not enclosed in any protective covering or case when found.

Work on the submarine was resumed at 8 o'clock this morning, and the workmen and officers concentrated their efforts in cleaning out the middle compartment, removing masses of battery plates and debris of various kinds. No bones or anything which might be identified as a body had been recovered down to 10 o'clock.

An electric blower fan was started early this morning blowing fresh air into the engine room, which was so filled with kerosene air yesterday that it was impossible to enter and try to take out any of the wreckage or what bodies might be there. Lieut. Crittenden said this compartment would probably be entered late this afternoon, and that it is possible there may be enough bodies, or portions of bodies.

This notable photograph in the remarkable series the Star-Bulletin is publishing of the submarine F-4 in drydock shows the vessel at full length, with five of the six big pontoons in view. These pontoons were submerged, then filled with air, and the submarine thus lifted from the bottom of the sea off the harbor. A section of the curious crowd that watched the drydocking of the submarine is also shown. STAR-BULLETIN STAFF PHOTO. COPYRIGHT, 1915, KODAGRAPH.

Von Bernstorff Gives Lansing Oral and Written Assurance German Naval Commanders Will Safeguard Lives

POLICY SAID TO HAVE BEEN SETTLED BEFORE SINKING OF S. S. ARABIC

Instructions Issued From Berlin Not to Attack Merchant Vessels Which Do Not Try to Flee or Resist Being Stopped

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1.—Germany has yielded to the demands of the United States, emphasized steadily through diplomatic channels, that the submarine warfare on commerce must be carried on with effective safeguards for neutral rights.

Germany has officially accepted the declarations of America regarding the conduct of the submarine campaign. Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador at Washington, both orally and in written form has given assurances to Secretary of State Lansing that the German navy will not violate neutral rights in contravention of the provisions laid down in the American notes.

The German ambassador's new instructions have been issued by German commanders that they must not be attacked by submarines without warning in the future, providing they do not attempt to flee or to resist when ordered to halt prior to search of the sea. "This policy," he adds, "was determined upon before the sinking of the Arabic."

ATTACKER MAY BE LOST

GERMAN SUBMARINE FIRES ON AMERICAN STEAMER QUILTS WHEN IDENTIFIED

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles) BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 1.—A German submarine, it was learned today, fired twice upon the American steamer Ruth Stark, bound from Liverpool to Boston. The first firing was done apparently as a warning to the steamer to stop, but the second firing was apparently aimed. After the identity of the American vessel had been established, she was allowed to proceed without further molestation.

SING CHANTS AT SUNRISE BEFORE HOME OF QUEEN

Gift Offerings, Band Serenade and Reception Will Mark Birthday of Liliuokalani

Following the custom of many years, Queen Liliuokalani will celebrate her 73d birthday anniversary tomorrow.

The festivities of the day will begin with a series of beautiful Hawaiian chants sung before Washington Place at sunrise, and immediately after the queen will place the hookupu, the ancestral custom of gift offerings which the Hawaiians will place before the queen, consisting usually of fruits and large masses of flowers.

Between 8 and 9 o'clock Mayor Lane will send the Hawaiian band to serenade the queen in front of her home and the band will return for the big reception which will be held between 11 and 12.

Governor Pinkham and other officials will call at this hour and the public at large will doubtless crowd the halls. Assisting at the reception will be Delegate and Princess Kalanianoʻe, Colonel and Mrs. C. P. Iaukea, and Mr. and Mrs. Dominis.

In the afternoon the queen will retire to her residence at Waikiki where a luncheon will be held for her close personal friends, chiefly ladies.

The 1st Mano Club of Hawaiian girls will sing during the afternoon.

Detectives Swift and Woo arrested Ah Piu, Ah Tin and Ah Chong in a Chinese liquor store at Mauna Kea and King streets this afternoon on charges of having lottery tickets in their possession.

"When the war is over and conditions have resumed the normal again Europe will have more sugar to export than ever before," said E. F. Dyer, head of the Dyer Construction Company, builder of sugar factories and apparatus, in a recent interview. "The consumption of sugar in Europe never has been great and it will be less after the war. Then, heretofore, there has been a trade agreement between the sugar producing nations of Europe to limit their exports of sugar to a certain amount."

FILIPINO WOULD BECOME UNITED STATES CITIZEN

Benigno Ylagan, who is a native of the Philippines and now a laborer at Aiea, has filed in the local circuit court a declaration of intention to become an American citizen.

In Clerk A. E. Murphy's recollection, Ylagan is the first Filipino to file a declaration in the local federal court during the last 9 years. The law is that only free white persons, or persons of African descent or nativity shall become American citizens.

However, Clerk Murphy says that the matter of naturalization rests entirely with the court. Ylagan came to Hawaii on November 28, 1912, in the Niie.

August was a busy month in the local federal court as far as naturalizations and petitions for naturalization were concerned. The report of Clerk A. E. Murphy, issued today, shows that 12 declarations of intention and four petitions for naturalization were admitted to citizenship during the month.

The declarations were filed as follows: Filipino, 1; Russian, 1; Portuguese, 3; Spanish, 6; and Britisher, 1.

One Britisher, 1 German, 1 Russian and a native of Sweden filed petitions for naturalization. Two Germans, 1 Austrian, 1 Spaniard and 1 native of Sweden were admitted to citizenship.

MARQUIS INOUE, 'GRAND OLD MAN' OF JAPAN, DIES

One of Four "Genro," Formerly "Power Behind Throne" in Days of Shogun

(Associated Press by Federal Wireles) TOKIO, Japan, Sept. 1.—Marquis Kaoru Inoue, one of the "Elder Statesmen," died here today of nephritis. He was 80 years of age.

(Special to the Nippu Jiji) TOKIO, Sept. 1.—Marquis K. Inoue died at 11 o'clock last night at his country villa at Okitsu, where he has been confined for the last few days suffering with nephritis.

Marquis K. Inoue was known to the diplomatic circles of the world as one of the four "genro" or elder statesmen, and was one of the most revered figures in the world of politics. He was formerly a great figure in the Shogun government and a power behind the throne to be reckoned with almost as much as the emperor himself.

In 1868 with the passing of the Shogun government a great part of the sway of Inoue passed away. He was then a young man of 37 in the height of vigor, and he refused to be kept out of his country's ruling voices despite the fact that the Mikado had now arrogated to himself and the so-called popular party an absolute authority which he delegated to whomsoever he pleased.

By degrees Inoue built up a position for himself in the councils of the state, and had come to be known as the representative of conservatism in Japan before his death. He died at the great age of 80 years.
