CONGRESSIONAL FOLLY HOLDS BACK MILITARY PREPAREDNESS, HE SAYS

Editor Star-Bulletin Honolulu, T. H.

At this writing, as an American citizen, I feel it my indispensable duty both to my country and to my fellow man, to attempt a further discussion of "military unpreparedness," and I sincerely hope you will, as heretofore, find space in your valuable paper for publication of such few lines that follow: I would be presumptuous, indeed, to present myself against the distinguished and silver-tongued pacifists to whom it has pleased the American people to listen. If this were a country, it exhibits a state of mind feverish, fretful and fidgety, bounding recklessly from desperate expedient to another without any sober or settled purposes whatever. A new philosophy sprung up a few years ago called "phrenology." There is, I believe, something in it, but not quite so much as its ardent followers proclaim. According to its doctrines, the leading passion, propensity and characteristics of every man are developed in his physical conformation, chiefly in the structure of his head. Gall and Spurzheim, its founders, or most eminent propagators, being dead, I regret that neither of them can examine the heads of some of our illustrious senators and congressmen. But if these heads could be surveyed by Dr. Caldwell, late of Transylvania University, I am persuaded that he would find the organ of national destruction prominently developed.

Money is squandered for the maintenance of our army is almost twice the amount appropriated for maintenance of both the German and Swiss armies, and still either Germany or Switzerland have a much larger and better equipped army than we have. This being the case we are confronted with the perplexing question, "Why, and how can this be?" A person unfamiliar with army routine and procedure might imagine, or even suggest, that there might be illegitimate uses made of money appropriated for certain specific purposes in the army. For instance, I am told that some time ago money was appropriated for the purpose of installing clothes closets in certain quarters at Fort Rucker; but instead of using the money for the purpose pretended it was used to purchase dynamite to blow stones out of the parade ground. I am told that when a shortage in the army appropriation occurs that the soldier must part with one of their collar ornaments and a portion of their clothing allowance to make good said appropriation. I am told that when a civilian employe of the army travels from one station to another, he is allowed a Pullman car, and $4 per day including all stopovers, for his necessary expenses. And when an officer travels from one station to another, he is allowed $7.00 for every 100 miles of travel; but, when the soldier is to travel he is allowed 2 cents per mile for all necessary expenses; notice the contrast. Those who are unfamiliar with human anatomy would be made to believe that there is a vast difference in the capacity of stomachs, as well as the acuteness of appetites.

We will never have an efficient army under the present system of military administration; and, it will take nothing short of a long war, which in all probability is not very far hence, to force the American people to adopt a different and more progressive military policy in our country. General Wood would have us believe that by doubling the number of officers now in the army, the perplexing problem of national defense would be forever solved. Mr. Reader, nothing is more absurd. A 15-year-old school boy can see what General Wood wants. An expert cabinet maker or machinist, cannot produce good results without first having the very best of tools with which to work; so it is with the army officer, no matter how efficient he may be, if he has not the necessary tools to work with he is just about as helpless as an old maid would be were she given a command of an army corps in the field. We do not need more officers for our army, we have plenty of them to spare as it is; what we want to do is give them plenty of good tools with which to work, that the result of their efforts may be gratifying.

The so-called present system of creating a reserve force for our army, gotten up by General Wood, is a bore to the nation, and amounts to many times less than a mere farce. It is a failure, pure and simple, and does not display any part of wisdom in the judgment of the young men of our country or the nation's defense. We have listened to the pacifists and advocates of national disarmament with great delight, now we are on the verge of repenting in sorrow. Very truly yours,
F. I. GRAHAM.

AMEMBASSADOR SAVES PAPERS FROM SPIES
LENNIX, Mass.—The presence of mind of Dr. Constantin Theodore Dumba, ambassador for Austria-Hungary to the United States, in carrying with him a small bag of secret papers pertaining to Austrian affairs in the present conflict saved them from falling into the hands of Austrian enemies. The trunk and boxes of Ambassador Dumba, which were stored in the Lenox railway station, were pried open and the contents strewn all about the place in an effort to locate the papers. The attempted burglary was apparently the act of spies who had followed the ambassador from the White Mountains, where he had been in captivity.

At a special meeting of the Gold-Bond League of America, the capital stock was increased from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000.

told the American people the gospel truth about the army and navy; he has tried to arouse you to a knowledge of its dangers, and as a reward, he was told that he was only seeking self-advertisement. We have too many people who are trying to play the role of Cicerone and Andrew Jackson. Never have I known or read of an administrator, and so little composure and resignation, as that which now has the control of military affairs in our country. It exhibits a state of mind feverish, fretful and fidgety, bounding recklessly from desperate expedient to another without any sober or settled purposes whatever.
