SMILLY MAKES RICH HAUL OF OPIUM IN RAID

Chang Ah's Drug Store at Hotel and Maunakea Streets Had Rooms for Smokers

Shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon an informer entered the office of U. S. Marshal J. J. Smiddy and told that official that a certain Chinese doing business in Hotel street was buying opium in bulk, and retailing it to smaller dealers throughout the city.

The marshal asked the informer if he could point out the place where the opium was being kept. The informer answered that he could, and about 15 minutes later Smiddy raided a Chinese drug store at Maunakea and Hotel streets owned by one Chang Ah, and secured as evidence a quantity of opium and yen shue, as well as a collection of smoking accessories.

Chang Ah was arrested this morning and is being held by the federal authorities pending a hearing before U. S. Commissioner George S. Curry.

Yesterday's incident was the second successful opium raid that Marshal Smiddy has made within the last week. In the rear of the Chinese drug store was a room that was fitted up with bunks and pipes and, according to the marshal, ready for use by smokers of the poppy drug.

From this room a ladder led to another room in the second story of the building. This room also was fitted up for smoking purposes, says the marshal. Another ladder led to the roof. There were no stairways in the place.

MAILE BUTTER ARRIVES

SLENDER, YOUNG WOMAN IS HANDY WITH HER FISTS

Sorry Uncle Grabbed Her By Back of Neck Before She "Finished" Ah Wing

"Come out where there's more room and we'll have it out, I told him," said a Mrs. Kealoha, testifying in defense of herself this morning in the police court, where she was brought on the charge of assault and battery preferred by one Ah Wing.

"He had me by the hair and I was punching him good with my left hand and swinging on him with my right. I had the best of it and then along comes my uncle here, Joe Silver, and takes me by the back of the neck—so! (she put back one hand and gathered up the skin of her neck as a cat takes up a kitten.)

"He catches me there and pulls us apart, but I could have finished Ah Wing if he'd left me alone. Then Ah Wing puts in a charge of assault and battery against both Joe and me."

Mrs. Kealoha turned her young eyes around the courtroom defiantly—and the courtroom chuckled; so did Judge Monsarrat.

Ah Wing had been an impressive figure in the witness box—a thin, serious face, solemn eyes and reverend, gray hair. He had testified that he had been roughly handled—that his hair had been pulled and his face slapped, and several times at that. He objected strongly to such treatment and rubbed his face as if he remembered the weight of the woman's hand. When Mrs. Kealoha was called the court looked to see a mighty virago stride forth to the stand, but instead a pleasant faced, slender girl stood up—and turned eyes of contempt upon Ah Wing.

"It seems to me," said Attorney Chillingworth, summing up the case, "that this Chinaman tried to abuse the girl and found that he was up against an exponent of the high art of the squared circle. What punches did she say she used? A left jab and a right hook? As for Joe Silver, he was manifestly the hapless peace maker and got what peace makers usually get. I suggest that the court find no case here."

Judge Monsarrat returned a verdict of not guilty.

Observations made by oyster growers in Long Island Sound leads them to the opinion that for unaccountable reasons there has been no "set" on the oyster grounds this season.
