NO PARLOR PATRIOTS, BUT MEN TO FACE U. S. PROBLEMS, IS NEED

W. R. Farrington Delivers Address on Citizenship at Schofield Barracks Thanksgiving

No parlor patriots, but men proud of their American citizenship and willing to accept its full responsibilities—in the field as well as in the counting-house—are the kind of men Uncle Sam needs today, emphasized Wallace R. Farrington in a Thanksgiving Day address yesterday at Schofield Barracks.

Exercises at the big army post were held in the 25th Infantry hall and in the 1st Infantry hall. Mr. Farrington's address was the chief feature of the patriotic celebration at the 25th Infantry hall. His subject was "Dynamite the Hypocrite." He said:

"When the Pilgrim Fathers met to give thanks for their many blessings, they did not fail to guard the door. They did not allow themselves to be lulled into a state of false security against the marauder.

"That is the thought uppermost in mind during this season when the people throughout all this broad land are assembled much as we are to recount their mercies and render an accounting of gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts.

"Those men were thankful for relief from famine. They saw daylight ahead after a long dark night of suffering.

"They were thankful also for the sentry at the gate. They knew, they did not fail to take note that they would not be there to give thanks, they would not have the crops to garner, had there been lacking the eternal physical vigilance represented by the armed guard.

"Thankful for 'Guards at the Gate.'"

"In the list of things for which we should give thanks on this day of public Thanksgiving is, first that we are American citizens, citizens of the United States of America, and further thankful for the guard at the date, the armed guard which you men here represent and of which you are an important unit.

"I do not know whether there were molliedoes and pacifists in the days of the Pilgrim Fathers. I do not know whether men and women rose up in that colony to protest against the policy of preparedness, physical preparedness and demanded a soft-headed plan of peace and love—while all about them was war, murderous, women-and-children-destroying war. I do not know and really it does not matter.

An Example of Militant Citizenship.

"What I do know and what I do care about, what shines out as the brilliant example of the whole period of pioneer life is, that then and there prevailed the power of a militant, an efficient, a fighting and a fully prepared citizenship. God helped those of the Pilgrim colony who helped themselves. The joy of release from the famine would never have been known, there would have been no one there to enjoy it had there been any lack of men not only willing to fight an ever-present enemy, but who also knew exactly what to do when the crisis arose.

"The pioneers of the United States of America are a magnificent example and inspiration whether you find them in New England, New York or Virginia, Kentucky, North, South, East or West. They were all hard and they all made mistakes. But they had courage of conviction and certainty of purpose. They had ideals and they had the stuff in them of which champions are made. They were unashamed of their cause and unafraid. They readily accepted the sacrifices and physical suffering, they took long chances with death from disease, starvation or well-timed bullets and a tricky foe. And they did it, not for the love of the game, not with the possible hope of luxury for them in their span of life. They did it that their posterity, the boys and girls who came after them, might have a brighter and happier heritage than the fathers and mothers could possibly hope to enjoy.

"These men and women in their day and generation laid the cornerstone of our nation, our own United States.

"They pioneered. It is given to you and me to perpetuate.

The Mission of the United States is to put a large patch of brightness in the international hell. To do this we must have the strong arm of power as well as the certainty of God's blessing, of which we have never been in doubt.

"If there is one lesson handed down to us by this Thanksgiving Day, one text that should be written on the outer wall of every home and every camp in this great present day country of ours, it is this:

"Trust in the Lord and keep your powder dry."

"If there is one place in this territory where that lesson of the first Thanksgiving is fully understood, it is in this assembly.

"We stand with the pioneers of the first New England Thanksgiving to bow our head in prayer and raise our voices in praise and thanksgiving to the Lord of the harvest, the Lord that giveth, the Lord that taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord. And at the same time we are reminded that there would have been no New England homes to make happy and no fruits of those sacrifices for us to enjoy if it were not for the men who knew when to shoot and how to shoot, for the men behind the gun.

"Perhaps you think I am saying this because this is a military post and I want to say something this morning to tickle your fancy. I hope what I have to say may deserve approval because I believe that the handwriting on the wall on this day and during the present period in which we live is so clear that one has but to copy it off. You can see it as well as I. It is good for all of us that we talk it over.

"The men of the first Thanksgiving pioneered. It is ours to perpetuate. When I say ours I mean you and me, not someone else. The easiest job in the world is to 'Let George do it.'"

War As An Alarm-bell.

"Two years ago we thought the world was better than it has proved to be in the last 16 months. We thought we were farther removed from the evil days of Indian fighting through which the men of 1600 had to pass. Now we know that we misjudged humanity. Now we know that our bounden duty is to be on guard, if we do indeed hope to perpetuate that for which the builders of the nation pioneered. We know that we must be alert to watch the enemy within our gates and also to the enemy without the fortress. This enemy may be either an outright spy carrying out his accepted mission; he may be an enemy in the form of a nominal citizen with divided allegiance, who so far as our nation's welfare is concerned is a man without a country; or he may be just plain nincompoop of the parlor variety, a man who says there is no danger and when danger comes gets under the bed, a man of the type that commits murder because 'he didn't know it was loaded.'"

"We know that this day calls, as never before in my lifetime and the life span of most of the active citizens of today, for men who are fearless, men who are loyal, men who can dare and, finally, men able to 'deliver the goods' whenever called upon, unflinching, forward-looking, clear-headed, American citizens.

"We need such men here, right here in this outpost. We give thanks that we have them; we pray for more of them. That's the kind of citizenship, ready for service which our country expects, needs, demands from you and me. That is what we have to do if we would perpetuate that handed down to us by the pioneers.

"Hawaii is called a peculiar community. And rightly so. It cannot do any harm for us to look some of its peculiarities squarely in the face. By so doing we may on this day not only give thanks for the things that are peculiar but also for the good American sense to meet them.

"I speak from the standpoint of a civilian who believes in the army, who believes in the navy, who believes in his country and has confidence in his fellow countrymen.

No Apologies Necessary.

"You and I are living in a section of the United States of America where forms of social courtesy oftentimes carried to excess sometimes make an American wonder whether in order to be thoroughly polite he should preface his remarks with an apology for his citizenship.

"You and I are living in an American territory, hyphenated to the core. And some of those about us do not seem to realize how pointedly the swelling sentiment of the men of the mainland has been epitomized by Roosevelt in his terse 'to be—' with the hyphen.' The president has said the same thing in different language.

"We are living in a community where little things count. And no one can overestimate the harm that can come from a proved readiness to criticize the president of the United States while speaking in the most complimentary terms of the alien potentate and the alien nation.

Do not interpret my words to mean that you and I as Americans should go about with a chip on our shoulders seeking trouble with the alien or making him feel unhappy. No indeed. Far be it from me to suggest that the unhappy lot of an alien should be made more unhappy.

"What I do suggest is that situated as the American population of this outpost is, it can very easily become de-nationalized unless the men of American ideal, American hopes and aspirations, American acts that speak louder than words, are forever on guard.

No Common Cause With Murder or Lawless Blockade.

"We want our nation to be friendly with Germany but we have no common cause with the murder of defenseless men, women and children, our fellow citizens.

"We want our nation to be friendly with Great Britain but we find no act of friendship in the violation of international law as in the days of 1812, which hampers and destroys our successful trade and disregards the rights of a neutral nation.

"We know that our nation stands for the rights of humanity and as loyal citizens of the United States we find not only a duty but a privilege in our support by word and act of our commander-in-chief, your leader and mine, the President of the United States.

"That is our sphere in life just at the present time and to fulfill our part we, you and I, must be forever on guard. Civilian or soldier our primary duty is the same. It is the plain duty of the citizen.

Wave of Nationalism Sweeps Country

"During my recent trip from coast to coast of the mainland of the United States I was deeply impressed because frequently reminded of the great wave of unswerving nationalism that is sweeping through the country. True to the high calling of America our countrymen are slow to anger and plenteous in mercy, some call it a form of lethargy. But when they are aroused, watch out. Not in my lifetime has there been a day when the motto of Decatur, 'My country, right or wrong, my country, better served the growing national spirit of our country. Not in my time has there been such an awakening to appreciation of the man who carries the gun, digs the trenches and plays at war while studying the drudgery of possibilities over against the day when the guardian trained or otherwise will mean the life or death of the nation, victor or vassal.

"We should give thanks today that the nation is awakening. We should raise our voice in thanksgiving and praise that our fellow-citizens are saying to the men with whom they touch elbows in daily life, 'Choose ye this day whom ye will serve.' If you cannot stand loyally by your leader, your flag and your country, you can get out! Harsh though this may sound, raspingly though it may fall on the ear of the parlor patriot, it is a soft-sweet tone when compared with the wild roar of war that rings in our ears; it is kindness personified when considered in terms of what our enemy within our ranks would lead us to.

The Example of the Fathers.

Pilgrim Fathers not only gave thanks that they had enough to eat, they were thankful that they were free, free from the curse of monarchy, free in a land of opportunity to carve out their destiny in their own way. They were thankful for the loyal souls, the steady hand, the strong arm and the kind heart of the courageous fighter.

"Thus did the pioneers give thanks and thereby shower upon you and me the bounty which the world has never before known.

"Thus does their example inspire us with gratitude that to us falls the duty, the responsibility and the glory of doing our share in a world crisis and each performing his individual, yet possible insignificant though essential part that the nation shall be always prepared to protect and carry forward the work done by the pioneer work which is left for you and me to perpetuate.

The Nation's Mission.

"And finally let us give thanks that in this great nation of ours with its glorious mission, the overwhelming power which it possesses, finds its source in the masses of plain, efficient citizens, men of high purpose and unflinching courage, men who love their country because it is our country and men who love the flag because it is our flag, the flag of the pioneer and our flag to perpetuate.

"As we bow in prayer, or as we tackle the daily task we can say with the ancients: 'To the souls of fire give more fire, and to those who are manifold, a foresight more than man's.'"

COULTER BLAMES KANEHOE STAGE FOR ACCIDENT

G. D. Coulter denied today he was in any way responsible for a near-accident to the Kanehoe stage Wednesday afternoon, when the stage almost went over the Fall at Hailup curve on the Pall road and eight persons narrowly escaped death. As evidence that he could not have been "coming at a very high rate of speed" when he met the stage coming down the grade, Coulter pointed to his Ford machine.

"That little machine could not possibly go very fast up the Pall. I was driving slowly when I met the stage, which came around the curve so fast that it swung to the outer edge of the road, broke through the fence, and the rear wheels almost went over. The passengers jumped out and were taken to their destination in another machine.

"The statement of Deputy Sheriff Davis that the stage was making fast time and ran from town, as the hair pin curve in 25 minutes, shows the stage driver was speeding."

Coulter says Deputy Sheriff Roscoe of Mokuau was in the machine with him, and made a report to the police.

THEY REFUSE TO EAT

At periods in most children's lives they fail to relish their meals and refuse to eat even the delicacies prepared to tempt their appetites. They lack ambition, and growth seems impeded, which causes anxiety and worry.

To compel them to eat is a grave mistake, because nutrition is impaired. Healthful exercise in fresh air and sunshine is important, but equally important is a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion three times a day to feed the tissues and furnish food-energy to improve their blood, aid nutrition and sharpen their appetites.

The highly concentrated medicinal food in Scott's Emulsion supplies the very elements children need to build up their strength. They relish Scott's—It is free from alcohol.
