

Ice Cream From Pure Pasteurized Island Milk and Cream

Island chickens, turkeys and eggs demand a higher price than the same kind of products which come from California and you are willing to pay the difference. Fresh meats and eggs taste better and you feel safer in using them.

Ice Cream made from fresh, island cream is equally superior to that made from California cream, because it tastes better and you feel safer in using it, yet the two are sold at the same price.

The following places use island cream that is fresh, pure and pasteurized

Why Tolerate Catarrh?

You have noticed, no doubt, that any cold aggravates nasal catarrh, and the flow of mucous amazes you that such objectionable matter could find lodgment in your head. To ignore this catarrh when the cold subsides is wrong because it continues to slowly injure the delicate linings of the nasal passages and clog them up.

To correct catarrh, cleanse the nostrils frequently with a solution of warm water and salt, insert vaseline on retiring, and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month. Scott's acts through the blood to feed the tissues, and contains soothing glycerine to check the inflammation and heal the sensitive membranes.

Scott's is pleasant to take.

LORD DERBY FLAYS AGED PEERS FOR CRITICIZING GOVERNMENT

Would Have House of Lords Deprived of Right of Free Speech, He Says

If popular confidence of the most universal character constitutes a source of influence to anyone in public life, then Lord Derby may be regarded as being, next to Lord Kitchener, the most influential figure in Great Britain at the present time, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune, who signs himself "Ex-Attache." His fellow countrymen of high and low degree repose a trust in him second only to that which they accord to the field marshal.

It is because of the weight which his words carry with his fellow countrymen that his amazing attack upon the house of lords in general and upon Lords St. Davids and Ribblesdale in particular, has furnished a great sensation. The attack was contained in a recruiting address which he delivered on the floor of the London stock exchange, where it was received with the wildest enthusiasm, and tokens of approval, particularly when he denounced Lord St. Davids as a liar and as a traitor.

Criticized Powerful Men.
Yet Lord Ribblesdale is the brother-in-law of Premier Asquith, has been chief whip of the liberal party, held ministerial office in connection with the royal household when Lord Derby was still a small boy in pinafores, was a favorite lord in waiting of Queen Victoria, and an intimate friend of King Edward, and has been to such an extent looked upon as representing everything that is best in English sport that he was the last peer to be selected for the now abolished government, post of master of the royal hunt.

As for Lord St. Davids, he, too, has rendered yeoman service to the liberal party, both as a member of the house of commons for many years and as a generous contributor to its campaign funds. In addition to possessing a very modern peerage, won by his own efforts, he has inherited one of the oldest baronetcies, created by James I in the first year of his reign.

Both Gave Sons to Country.
Lord Ribblesdale's "treason," which led Lord Derby to hold him up to national and international obloquy as a traitor, consisted in a speech by the former, in the house of lords, in which he criticized the Gallipoli campaign. His criticism was of a moderate character, and if he spoke with feeling it must be remembered that his only remaining son and heir was killed in the trenches in the Gallipoli campaign, his oldest son having given his life for his country in one of England's "little wars" in Somaliland, eleven years ago.

With regard to Lord St. Davids, he, too, deserves, if not consideration, at least some forbearance. For already overwhelmed with grief over the quite recent and tragically sudden death of his wife, he has within the last three months had his oldest son killed at the front in France.

Opposes Free Speech.
Both the speech of Lord Ribblesdale and that of Lord St. Davids were delivered in the house of lords, where, owing to the absence of that clause which prevails in the commons, and to that of any presiding officer clothed with such arbitrary powers as the speaker of the lower chamber, the peers are free to speak without restriction. Indeed, what with the censorship of the press and the readiness of the civil and military authorities to look upon charges of infractions of the defense act, any one guilty of expressing disapproval of the administration, or of the conduct of the naval and military operations, the much derided house of lords is, as in ancient times, prior to the existence of the commons, the only place in the United Kingdom where complete freedom of speech and liberty of criticism prevail.

This freedom Lord Derby seeks to curtail and even abolish. He insisted in his stock exchange speech that the authority of the censor should be extended to the house of lords, and that a curb should be put on the speeches delivered there, and that any peer who said there anything that could possibly be construed as of use to the enemy should receive the same punishment as a man who risked his life in getting information for the enemy—that is to say, as a spy or a traitor.

Naturally there is not the slightest prospect of the house of lords surrendering its liberty of speech, which it has enjoyed since the reign of King John and the signature of Magna Charter at Runnymede 700 years ago. All that the government can do in the matter is to punish, and, if necessary, suppress the newspapers publishing the debates in the upper chamber.

If Lord Derby was led to suggest any curb upon the house of which he is so distinguished a member, and if he permitted himself without due reflection to single out two bereaved and grief stricken fathers for particular obloquy, it is because he fears that anything in the nature of legislative criticism of the leadership of the British military forces will interfere with the complete success of his great recruiting enterprise. Moreover, he is one of those who hold that when the country is in the throes of war all criticism of those directing its operations should be silenced for the nonce, no matter what their mistakes or shortcomings.

"Billy" Russell's Service.
While this is extremely patriotic, not every one will be disposed to agree with him. The Crimean campaign 60 years ago was abominably mismanaged, and the ill-led troops were dying like flies before Sebastopol from exposure and starvation when the late Sir William Russell, the first and most famous of all-war correspondents, boldly risked flogging and even hanging by despatching from the front those wonderful letters of his to the London Times, revealing all the horrors of the campaign and its shameful mismanagement. He was at the time denounced as a traitor. But his letters brought about a ministerial crisis and led to a complete reorganization of the enterprise, and to eventual victory. Years afterwards "Billy" Russell was knighted by Queen Victoria for services which in 1855 had been denounced as nothing more or less than the work of a traitor.

Lord Derby's success as director-general of recruiting at the war department in Pall Mall has been, indeed, of a wonderful nature, due almost entirely to his gift for organization. That he has succeeded is apparent from the pledge which Lord Kitchener, according to an official French despatch from Athens and published with the imprimatur of the French censor at Paris last week, has given to the Greek government that by March next Great Britain will have over 4,000,000 soldiers under arms.

By his success Lord Derby may indeed be said to have saved the coalition cabinet from disaster. Two months ago it was confronted by the necessity of conscription, all the methods until then employed of securing recruits by means of voluntary enlistment having been apparently exhausted. A large number of supporters of the existing cabinet, however, were strongly opposed to compulsory service in any shape or form, deeming it contrary to the time-honored principles of British civil freedom.

NARCOTIC MEDICINES BARRED FROM DELIVERY THROUGH MAIL.
COLUMBUS, Ohio.—Medicines containing habit forming narcotic drugs, traffic in which is forbidden by the Harrison law, cannot be sold through a mail order business, Judge J. E. Sater decided in federal district court here. He dismissed a suit brought by the Dr. Nathan Tucker Asthma Specific Company of Mount Gilead, Ohio, to enjoin B. E. Williamson, federal internal revenue collector, from seizing the plant. The court's decision declared medicines containing narcotic drugs may be prescribed by physicians only after a personal examination of the patient before each prescription. Diagnosis by mail is held illegal. The decision is considered of far-reaching importance, since it is said many other proprietary remedies contain narcotic drugs or their derivatives and are sold by the mail order system.

PHOTO 2,000,000 POLES UNDER GERMAN ORDER

BERLIN, Germany.—Two million persons have been ordered by the German governor-general of Poland to have photographs taken in order that passports may be issued to all over 15 years of age, according to the Overseas News Agency.
One million photographs already ready have been made and this number is being increased at the rate of 30,000 a day. The work is being done by 60 photographers with 250 assistants.

"MOVIES" TO BE PART OF CHURCH SERVICES

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—Motion pictures will form a regular part of the evening services of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Memorial church. A motion picture machine has been purchased and is being installed in the church. Special wires in conduits, a special transformer and a steel fire-proof booth are parts of the equipment. A curtain will be suspended in front of the organ.

The motion pictures are not designed to take the place of the regular sermon, but will be a part of the regular services.
