ON THE FIRING-LINE IN NATIONAL POLITICS.

[Note.—This is the first of a series of editorials summarizing aspects of the national political campaign. Others will follow at short intervals.]

No. 1.—Mr. Wilson Under Attack.

President Wilson has kept us out of war. That apparently is to be the main campaign slogan of Democracy in the coming conflict, and right upon that statement the anti-administration critics are training their 42-centimeter guns.

A good perspective of the political battle, whose first phase is now apparent, may be gained from Hawaii. The very remoteness of this territory from the principal political arenas gives opportunity for surveying the field from a vantage point. Critics of the president recognize Mr. Wilson's determination to maintain peace, but say that in practice his idealism has been weak and vacillating, his policy unsettled and self-contradictory, and that only luck has kept the United States out of war.

The main points upon which the president is being criticised are these:

The secrecy of administration procedure. It is declared that while he entered office declaring that the people would be taken into confidence, his administration has been the most secretive in many years. Suppression of vital facts regarding the Mexican and European situations are charged up to him with a wealth of detail.

He is alleged to have changed front on many occasions.

He went into office opposing the trade commission idea and continued to oppose it until the echoes of his campaign speeches had died away, then suddenly he forced, so the story goes, the inclusion of the trade commission plan in the anti-trust legislation.

His change of front on the tariff commission proposal is another point of criticism. He openly admitted changing his mind on this.

The reversal of attitude on national defense is another loophole through which the hostile sharpshooters are taking pot-shots at the president. For many months after the war broke out he decried agitation for "preparedness" and scored the "alarmists." Just over a year ago he said that nothing had occurred in Europe to change the American program. Beginning with July of last year, he evinced a new spirit, say the critics, and one which proved his previous policy to have been both mistaken and dangerous. Since the despatch of the note to Germany of July 21, 1915, demanding disavowal of the Lusitania sinking, the president is alleged to have been more and more active for a new "preparedness" program.

Even in his work for national defense the critics profess to see uncertainty and inability to grasp the situation. Thus they say that at the beginning of his recent speech-making tour he minimized the danger of the United States and advocated little more than the military program outlined in his message, while by the time he had reached St. Louis he was calling for "incomparably the greatest navy in the world."

The resignation of Secretary of War Garrison afforded the opposition gunners a shining opportunity to pour shrapnel into the Democratic trenches. They pointed out with glee that in his message to Congress the president put his stamp of approval on Secretary Garrison's program, or at least on the main principles of that program, and that a few weeks later the president declined to support his war secretary and yielded to the political influence represented by Congressman Hay, Senator Chamberlain and others. They characterize his support of the Philippine bill, including the Clarke amendment, as another instance of submission to political influence against his own better judgment and the resentment of Secretary Garrison.

The latest Mexican outrage has given additional speed to the anti-Wilson missiles being hurled so freely. "Watchful Waiting" is sneered at and scoffed at by Republican orators and anti-administration newspapers from Maine to California. There is no question that the Villa raid at Columbus has inspired the critics to renewed efforts and made some of the administration's defenders a trifle uneasy.

For all of these charges, briefly outlined above, the critics are furnishing a wealth of detail. This first phase of the political conflict will probably continue up to the holding of the national conventions. The second phase will include the convention season of June and soon after that the battle will enter the third phase, the real hand-to-hand fighting of the campaign, ending only in November. That it is going to be a ferocious battle indeed there is no doubt. Already the attacks on the president are assuming a tone which has evoked resentment from several quarters. Possibly the critics will overdo themselves and swing a not inconsiderable sentiment to the support of the president, whose office is always entitled to respect, and whose integrity of purpose and patriotic sincerity have never been seriously questioned by true Americans.

MOVIE "TALKS."

Through an arrangement just consummated, Miss Beatriz Michelena, the operatic star who recently achieved fame in the motion picture world as the heroine of such feature photographs as "Salomy Jane," "Mignon," "Salvation Nell," etc., will become a regular contributor to the Star-Bulletin.

Miss Michelena's articles will appear under the title "Talks With Screen Struck Girls," and will endeavor to give an uncolored insight into the conditions and difficulties surrounding the average girl's first endeavor to break into the motion picture profession.

Miss Michelena's talks will not only be of interest to the screen-struck girl, but to all patrons of the "movies"—and that means virtually everybody in Hawaii.

There are few women in America of Beatriz Michelena's youth who have had one half her experience in theatrical affairs. "As soon as I was able to toddle across the floor and lisp my first baby word, I began to prepare for my career," is the way she explains her own success. Her father is Fernando Michelena, in his day the greatest grand opera tenor in America, and her mother was a celebrated star of the lighter operatic stage. She herself, when but sixteen years of age, toured the country in the title role of "The Girl From Dixie," thus gaining the distinction of being the youngest prima donna before the public. Her other triumphs behind the footlights are a matter of operatic and stage history. Her more recent success on the screen has been of instantaneous brilliancy.

It is from this fund of experience and observation that she contributes her "talks." Not only can she speak first-hand of motion picture acting, but she has the added advantage of a comparative view as between stage and screen. In a letter to the editor telling of her viewpoint, Miss Michelena says, "The motion picture profession has outgrown the 'pretty face' stage and now requires talent and application as well. If we can make the 'screen-struck' girl realize this, we have accomplished a real good and shall be in a better position to give her this constructive advice."

The first "Talk With Screen-Struck Girls" will appear in tomorrow's issue. The "talks" will probably appear twice or thrice a week.

ALCOHOL AND PNEUMONIA.

The United States public health service brands strong drink as the most efficient ally of pneumonia. It declares that alcohol is the handmaiden of the disease which produces ten per cent of the deaths in the United States. This is no exaggeration. Experts have known for a long time that indulgence in alcoholic liquors lowers the individual vitality, and that the man who drinks is peculiarly susceptible to pneumonia. The United States public health service is a conservative body. It does not engage in alarmist propaganda. In following out the line of its official duties it has brought forcefully to the general public a fact which will bear endless repetition. The liberal and continuous user of alcoholic drinks will do well to heed this warning.

It is an eloquent testimony to the worth of a man that the American nation has entire confidence in "Fred" Funston's ability to handle the situation.

Every time the Chinese government troops get a good licking, it is announced that the revolution is now about ended.

Appears to have been a slight discrepancy in the report about that naval battle off Belgium.

A large part of the discussion on the Hay bill is chaff.

Isles of Peace, eh!

DEATH REMOVES COLE YOUNGER, NOTED OUTLAW

near Lees Summit, 20 miles from Kansas City, where Cole was born in 1884. Col. Younger was murdered by one of the bands of lawless guerrillas that infested the Missouri-Kansas border in war times. The sons said their father was slain by Kansans for the purpose of robbery. They immediately took up arms against the North. They joined Quantrell's guerrillas and had their part in the memorable sacking of Lawrence, Kansas.

When the war was over they and the Jameses became outlaws. Among the notorious robberies of the decade following the war that were laid at their door were:

The raid on the Liberty, Mo., bank in 1866. One bank defender was shot dead and $72,000 stolen.

The looting of Russellville, Ky., bank in 1868 for $17,000.

The Gallatin, Mo., bank robbery of 1868 in which the cashier was shot and killed.

Raids of Lexington and Savannah, Mo., banks in 1867.

Ten thousand dollars stolen from the Kansas City Fair Association in 1871, while 1000 persons looked on.

The Corydon, Ia., bank robbed of $40,000 the same year.

A dozen other sensational robberies for which the Younger and James boys were blamed were carried out successfully before the three Younger brothers were captured in Minnesota after a raid on a bank at Northfield, Minn., in 1876, in the course of which Cashier Hayward was killed. The Youngers were shot many times in battles with a posse, but finally were taken alive after a battle at Shieldsville, Minn.

Cole and his brothers pleaded guilty and were sentenced to prison for life. They entered the penitentiary at Stillwater, Minn., and became model prisoners. Bob died in the penitentiary in 1889. Cole and James Younger were paroled in 1901. The next year James shot himself, leaving a note ascribing his action to a refusal of the parole board to permit him to marry the girl he loved.

After Cole was paroled he was forced by Minnesota law to live in that state for three years. Then he returned to Missouri and settled down in a vine covered cottage which he bought for a niece in Lees Summit, the scene of his boyhood days. For a time he was connected with a show and later went on the lecture platform and became a good citizen.

In August, 1915, Younger was converted to religion at a revival meeting and became an active church worker.

"I've led an adventurous, turbulent life," he said. "The war brought on hate and strife and killing around here. I have been blamed for a lot of it with which I had nothing to do. They murdered my father and I was launched into a life of shooting and reprisals and rough riding, winding up with 25 years in the penitentiary. Now I'm an old man and I've come by God's mercy back to the place of my childhood to end my days."

Residents of the Beachwalk section of the Waikiki district will meet tonight at the home of President Alexander Lyle of the Beachwalk Improvement club to get the latest news about the concrete paving to be laid in the section.

The club has already voted in favor of the paving and the supervisors and engineers are putting the matter through as fast as possible. Tonight the city engineer and the road committee of the supervisors are invited by the club to meet with it and go over the final plans.

All residents of the section, whether members of the club or not, are invited to attend. President Lyle's home is on Beachwalk, just south of Kalakaua avenue.

Hawaiian trinkets owned by Mrs. E. F. Roberts, a former resident of Honolulu, have attracted much attention in a Los Angeles grocery window of late, according to the Municipal News of that city.

"Among the interesting articles in this collection," says the News, "are a silver knife and spoon that were a part of the personal property of King Kalakauna, and are engraved with the monarch's coat of arms; a funny little drum, coconut and shark skin, and over 125 years old; a napkin ring made of ferns woven; sandals made of lauhala, and 125 years old; a hula hula dancing skirt; a specimen of 'silver sword,' a plant which is found only in extinct volcanoes; a hat band, belt and handbag made of koa seed, a seed necklace; a poi calabash, a lauhala mat and fan, a Hawaiian flag, and numerous other articles."

BALDWIN HEIRS OFFER TO BUILD FINE NEW CHURCH

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence.]

PAIA, Maui, March 20.—A new building is in prospect for the Makawao-Union church.

At the close of the regular service on Sunday the members unanimously voted to accept the generous offer of the family of the late Hon. H. P. Baldwin to erect a permanent structure of cement or cut stone on the site of the old building. This building has been in use for 28 years. It was erected by Mr. Baldwin as a thank offering that his life was saved. It was in this site that the mill had been located in which he nearly lost his life when his arm was crushed. The new building is to be a memorial to Mr. Baldwin.

Mrs. H. A. Baldwin has given a fine new pipe organ which will be installed in the new edifice. Work will be commenced as soon as the plans can be completed for an up-to-date building.

PUBLIC WELCOME AT TALKS THIS EVENING ON "NEGLECTED GIRL"

Various people have inquired whether the conference on the subject of "The Neglected Girl" which is to be held this evening at Central Union Church parish house, is to be open to the public and Central Union is glad to take this opportunity of assuring the general public that one and all will be heartily welcomed. Miss Sadie C. Sterritt, principal of the Mollihill Girls' school, and Miss Agnes E. Maynard, probation officer, will give the results of their practical experience.
