WOODEN VESSELS 100 YEARS OLD STILL GOING. Wooden ships built in New England a century ago are still afloat and giving good service, according to a special despatch under a Bangor, Maine, date-line to the New York World. Old sailors and shipbuilders, according to this despatch, will say that it is the live oak in their frames that keeps the ancient seagoers together, but probably it is a combination of good timber, good handling and good luck that keeps them on top of the water. Since the little Philadelphia bark, True Love, which was built in 1797, disappeared from the American registry the honors of maritime age have been won by the little 45-ton schooner Polly, built at Amesbury, Mass., in 1805. The Polly had a remarkable career as a coaster, having carried, as some one has figured it, enough lumber, bricks and lime from Bangor, Rockland, Calais and other Maine ports to Boston to build a good sized city of wooden houses. Little Mary Goes Fishing Now. Several other roly-poly little schooners, most of them under 50 tons, that were built at about the same time as the Polly, were afloat up to a few years ago, and there is in active service today the schooner Mary, of seven tons, built at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1811, and now hailing from St. George, Me. The Mary is of the so-called "pinkie" model, with bluff bows, a long "run" aft and a high, pointed stern like one of the caravels of Columbus. She is a fisherman and has in her time made enough money to pay for a pretty good steamboat. Next comes the sturdy old coaster Hiram, built in 1819 at Biddeford, Me., and now hailing from Calais, Me., from which port she carries lumber to Boston and other New England points. Hempstead, L. I., produced in 1828 the little schooner Signal, which hails from Patchogue, L. I., and is still busy in the following year the schooner Monomoy, one of Maine's best known coasters, was launched at Somerset, Mass.

SEATTLE HAVING SHIPBUILDING PROSPERITY. Vessels worth $8,258,000 are building at Seattle, according to a news story in the Post-Intelligencer of that city. The craft, 23 in number, range from a halibut schooner to a great steel torpedo boat destroyer for the United States navy, which when ready to plow the seas will represent an expenditure of more than $1,000,000. The big demand for vessels of all types means prosperity not only for owners of shipbuilding yards, but for laboring men as well. Skilled mechanics are now at a premium and the increased number of positions will mean not only more work, but better wages. Every plant in the city is increasing its force of men and the shipbuilding prosperity assures an increase in Seattle's pay roll of many thousands of dollars. The amount of shipbuilding contracts now on hand in Seattle is divided among the various firms there as follows: Seattle Construction & Dry Dock Company, $6,700,000. Skinner-Eddy Corporation, $1,200,000. J. F. Duthie & Co., $30,000. Anderson Shipbuilding Yards, $110,000. Nilson & Kelez, $25,000. Johnson Bros. & Blanchard, $70,000. Elliott Bay Yacht & Engine Company, $11,000. Wilson Boat & Shipbuilding Company, $37,000. Edward Heath, Port Blakeley, $75,000. Total, $8,258,000. A large healthy pigeon seated on the minute hand of the Poughkeepsie, N. Y., town clock caused the mayor to miss his train by 20 minutes on a recent day.
