TUESDAY . . . . . JULY 4, 1916.

THE CASE OF TWO TEACHERS.

Patriotism In Action

Patriotism is not merely sentiment—it is also action. Love of the Stars and Stripes is not merely feeling—it is working.

National pride is not merely emotional—it is practical. A patriotism which ends in the fulsome phrases of the spell-binding orator, full of "sound and fury, signifying nothing," is not the patriotism of a Washington, a Jackson, a Lincoln, a McKinley or a Roosevelt. They live in the throbbing history of the United States because they translated their patriotism into action.

A love of the Stars and Stripes which does not mean better work because those Stars and Stripes float over this country of ours is more than half useless. A national pride which does not make the individual realize his responsibilities and his part in upbuilding the community and the nation is more than half an idle pride.

There are no lack of patriotic men who never made an Independence Day oration, or marched in a parade or sang in a chorus or wrote a Fourth of July editorial. There are no lack of patriotic men who never preached patriotism, but who are living it day after day.

The American who builds a bridge so well that the engineers of other nations recognize it as model; the American who fights the tropic fevers to clean up some obscure foreign port; the American who tends the wounded and suffering in the hospital-bases of the Old World; the American who waters and plants the desert; the American who gives his time and his patience to teach less fortunate foreigners; the American who fights and conquers mountains and snows and jungles and rivers in exploring unknown lands and adding to human knowledge—these are patriots in action.

Their merits are recognized; their deeds are often lauded to fame.

Not all Americans have the opportunity for great deeds. But each in his place has abundant opportunity to live his patriotism. No community so small, no occupation so humble, no task so obscure, that the doing of it may not be a patriotic service.

When some millions of American citizens realize that the power of the ballot has made them potential masters of every political situation, there will be an end to much corruption, to much bossism, to rotten machines; there will be a substantial beginning to general competence in public office. Doing politics should be among the great patriotic activities of the American citizen, and in many cities and towns it is recognized. Not the dirty politics, but the politics directed toward public welfare, toward getting the best men into office, and backing them up once they are in office.

True patriotism and religion are closely akin. Both hold justice to be righteousness; integrity to be truth and honesty to be fair play and the more deal.

The Fourth of July, 1916, carries an especial appeal to the average American.

There never was before in the history of this republic such a demand for individual fearlessness, integrity of purpose, determination to work, and "backbone." The growing materialism, born of opulence and prosperity; the temptation of demagogues, of curiosity, tag at the character of the strong man and overwhelm the weak man. Preachers of isms, purveyors of false doctrines and ideals, are abroad. Clear thinking, clean living, were never more at a premium.

It is not to say that America is going to the nation boy-wows. The man who does not recognize and realize his country's strides is as blind as the man who does not recognize and realize his country's dangers. It's a good old country, it's a grand old country.

But the need for men of combined stanch purpose and humbleness of spirit, unmoved alike by the blustering of plutocracy and the whining of demagogues, the prate of classes and masses, was never greater. In other words, the most priceless possession of the patriotic American is plain common-sense.

With a frankness which puts the case very squarely and without equivocation, Superintendent of Public Instruction Kinney tells the Kauai Chamber of Commerce why Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Brown of Waimea failed of reappointment.

The gist of the several reasons is that of insubordination to orders which certainly appear reasonable. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have, moreover, says Superintendent Kinney, rendered themselves needlessly troublesome to their superior officers in a variety of ways.

Of Mr. and Mrs. Brown's side of the controversy the Star-Bulletin knows nothing. It is quite plain, even if they have some cause for objection to the department's orders, that they are not working in with the department's policy. It is quite plain that they are not respecting the constituted authority of the department. Their retention under such circumstances would be a mistake.

Now that Superintendent Kinney has set forth the reason for failure to reappoint the two teachers, they may make what answer they wish. But the general theory of the department of public instruction or any other department of any government must remain the same—that team-work, discipline and subordination to authority are essential to efficiency and success. Unless Mr. and Mrs. Brown are able to show that an absolute, unquestioned injustice has been done them, Superintendent Kinney's answer ought to close the controversy, with the statement of subordination to proper authority which the public may well bear in mind. The issue is broader than that of Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

CRITICISM FROM JAPAN.

Cablegrams to local Japanese papers yesterday brought the information that an attack is being made in Japan on the new text-book drafted for use by Nipponese educators of the territory in teaching Hawaiian-born Japanese children.

This text-book, it will be remembered, was adopted after much discussion—and adopted specifically to present historical and other facts from an American instead of a Japanese standpoint. Japanese school heads came to the conclusion that the children growing up in Hawaii were being taught from the wrong angle, and they began remedying the defect by the general use of a new book.

Newspapers of Japan are said to criticize this because it does not inspire the Hawaiian-born Japanese to patriotism for Japan and because, forsooth, it teaches the young Japanese here "only Americanism."

These newspapers forget that this is an American, not a Japanese community, and that the Japanese born here are American citizens. In their criticism the Japanese papers, if correctly reported, are contradicting Nippon's official administration. Consul-general Moroi has let no opportunity pass since he arrived to speak for the Americanization of the Japanese in Hawaii, and he has been foremost in urging the Americanization of the Japanese schools. The newspapers in his homeland which are reported to be criticizing these methods of Americanization might well take heed of his attitude. It is the only attitude either his or our country can heartily indorse.

Developments are coming so fast in local army circles these days that it's hard to keep track of them. New regiments are created almost in the twinkling of an eye. Given a free hand, the army administration can accomplish wonders in effective working.

Instead of hunting for jobs, unskilled labor in Hawaii is now condescending to accept remunerative employment.

Judge Stuart seems determined to resign. So far there is no great public movement to stop him.

War reports indicate that the French decided to loop the Damloup.

Begins to sound like old times with the stock-market "investors" cussing out Olaf.

WORK UPON HOME FOR NARCOTIC USERS STARTS

Preparation of Site For Bungalows Is Undertaken and Buildings to Follow

Work of preparing the site for the bungalows which will comprise the territorial home for narcotic habituates, is progressing satisfactorily at the grounds of the insane asylum at "alana. The job is being done by asylum labor.

As the site for the home is on a rocky side-hill adjoining the asylum, the work is necessarily more difficult to accomplish, and takes longer. The biggest part of it is excavating the landings for the 12 bungalows comprising the institution.

After the site is prepared, bids will be advertised for, on actual construction. The home will be for the cure of persons suffering from the drug habit, and those who are "dope fiends" in the true sense of the word. Plans for the institution have been prepared by the public works department.

Personal Mentions

HERBERT A. WADE, principal of the Haku school, Maui, is a guest at the Alexander Young Hotel waiting for the delayed Nippon Maru, to commence a two months' trip to Japan and China.

PROF. N. MORIYAMA, principal of the Japanese Central Institution on Nuuanu street, will leave on the Shinyo Maru on July 14, for Japan. He may not return to this country.

CLARENCE A. BROWN, civil engineer for W. A. Wall, engineer and surveyor, leaves on the Senoma today for a brief vacation on the mainland. Brown has been actively engaged for over a year with the engineering work connected with the designing and construction of the new lateral system that forms the distributing system for the Waialae tunnel water on the Oahu plantation.

LOCAL INTERVIEWS

FRED L. WALDRON: We hope to get enough business to keep us busy when the Great Northern goes back on the Honolulu run November 7.

L. C. THOMPSON, secretary, Outrigger Canoe Club: About a hundred of our members have paid up their annual dues to date. They became due last Saturday, July 1.

HENRY W. KINNEY, superintendent of public instruction: There is a fascination about newspaper work. I still remember my days on the city desk of the Bulletin, before it became the Star-Bulletin.

MAINLAND ARRIVALS ON LATEST STEAMER

Eddie Silva returned to Honolulu today on the Wilhelmina.

L. L. McCandless returned today on the Wilhelmina from a vacation trip to the mainland.

Allan Renton, a well known Ewa boy, returned on the Wilhelmina today, coming back from college for the vacation season.

Master Frank Thompson, Jr., a nephew of "Bill" Roth of San Francisco, arrived today on the Wilhelmina to visit relatives in this city.

D. S. Bowman, chief sanitary inspector of the Hilo board of health, returned this morning on the Wilhelmina from a vacation on the mainland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Basham and two children returned home today from a vacation passed in California. Mr. Basham is a pharmacist with Benson, Smith & Company.

Col. C. J. McCarthy, territorial treasurer, returned this morning on the Wilhelmina. He visited St. Louis while away and attended the Democratic convention there.

H. P. Faye, Jr., and A. L. Faye of Kauai, came back to the islands on the Wilhelmina this morning. The former is the son of H. P. Faye, manager of Kekaha Sugar Company.

HAWAIIAN 'HOME RULE' IS LIKED BY M'CANDLESS

Bourbon Warhorse Returns Pleased With Candidates and Party Platform

"We felt that, as nearly as possible, we should have home rule in Hawaii, and a plank providing for this is now in the Democratic national platform," declared L. L. McCandless, leader of the local Bourbon street faction of local Bourbons, upon his return to Honolulu today from the national convention at St. Louis.

McCandless was outwardly enthusiastic over the insertion of the home rule plank, and made no effort, during the interview, to conceal his satisfaction.

"The idea of the plank is that we believe that we have men here in Hawaii who are competent to fill all positions," he continued, when asked to explain the movement instituted by Hawaii's delegation to the big convention. "Of course, we have nothing against anyone from the mainland who has been appointed to a position here. They have all done very well, but it was felt that, in some instances, the president should have appointed someone from among the home residents."

McCandless pointed out that there were a good many reasons for the delegation feeling this way. He said that very often men from home are picked out to fill positions, but when the time comes, are not appointed. As an example, he cited the case of M. C. Pacheco who, he declared, would have been appointed postmaster had it not been for the objection of a local resident.

Speaking of President Wilson's status in the coming election McCandless stated that personally he feels that Mr. Wilson will be reelected. "The Mexican question has been a ticklish one," he added, "and there is a strong sentiment on the mainland that we go into Mexico. The St. Louis platform approves of the administration staying in Mexico until the question is settled and until the people establish a stable government."

McCandless stated that he knows nothing regarding the local governorship. As far as he knows Circuit Judge Stuart is not out after the position, he said.

Jesus Unlhi and Joela Kikahai, who represented Hawaii at the convention, returned with McCandless.

A farewell party is planned for today by prominent local Japanese in honor of S. Moriyama, who has resigned as principal of the Japanese Central Institute of Honolulu to return to Japan in the Shinyo Maru July 14.

KYOTO BENEFITS BY MITSUI MUNIFICENCE

A spacious botanical garden will be laid out in Kyoto within three years through the public spirit of the Mitsui family—the historic commercial family of Japan, says the Japan Times. It was the desire of the family to commemorate the recent coronation by a public gift, hence the sum of $250,000 has been placed at the disposal of the Kyoto prefecture. Of the total gift $50,000 will be expended at once for the garden and a certain portion of the remainder will be set aside for upkeep. It is said that the imperial household department will add $50,000 to the gift in appreciation of the Mitsui family's munificence.

A California plumber has found a way of putting up the plumbing before the work on the house has been commenced.

HONOR JAPANESE WHO BESIEGED TSING-TAU

TOKIO, Japan.—Honors for about 8000 Japanese soldiers who distinguished themselves at the capture of the German fortress at Tsingtau, which surrendered in the morning of November 7, 1914, were made public yesterday by the imperial household. The list includes both officers and men and another list includes decorations for several hundred men of the navy who participated in the bombardment of the fortress.

First on the list is Lieut. gen. Mitsumio Kamo, commander of the land forces at Tsingtau, who was given the first class of the Order of the Golden Kite, with the grand cordon of the Rising Sun, together with a yearly pension. Vice-Admiral Sada-kichi Kato, who commanded the attacking fleet, was decorated with the second class of the Order of the Golden Kite. All the decorations for the officers are accompanied with pensions. The honors for the rank and file of the soldiers and sailors consisted of decorations and a grant of money.

HERE'S A FISH STORY DECLARED TO BE TRUE

GONZALES, Tex.—The largest fish caught in this vicinity in many years was brought to town recently by Will Farmer, who made the catch in the San Marcos river, five miles above town. It was of the catfish variety and weighed 72 pounds.

GROWTH OF THE EVENING BULLETIN

Honolulu Star-Bulletin. Mr. Will you kindly permit me to state the following remarks, after reading your "historical paragraph" headed "How the Bulletin Started" published in the edition of last Saturday. Considering that it is stated: "Coming into existence first as J. W. Robertson & Co.'s Daily Bulletin, the pioneer of present daily journalism—at least merely a bulletin mostly of shipping news posted at the bookstore of the firm mentioned in the title, etc." It was its status on February 1, 1912. On March 1 the size of the sheet was increased in size and printed on both sides. The heading was changed to read "The Daily Bulletin, published by J. W. Robertson & Co." This publication was delivered "gratis" to the business portion of the city. On March 20 a subscription price of 10 cents a month was charged. On April 24 the paper was issued as a "page daily" with Henry L. Sheldon as the editor.

You can find this copy of the Bulletin in your archives the material will I think prove interesting reading. Henry L. Sheldon was the first editor of the Bulletin not G. Carson Kenyon.

Sheldon was paid $25 a week for his services.

This was the status of The Daily Bulletin in newspaperdom in January, 1888, when Walter Hill became the proprietor.

Yours truly,
J. W. ROBERTSON.
