MAL-DE-MER IS FATE OF 'GOBS' ON MARBLEHEAD

Here is a fair sample of what the Naval Militia of Hawaii may expect on the occasion of its initial cruise, aboard the cruiser St. Louis, next month. It is taken from the Portland Telegram of one day last week, and says:

"Coal passers, deckhands, officers, cooks and all those comprising the crew of the Oregon Naval Militia breathed a sigh of relief yesterday evening when the cruiser Marblehead tied up at the Jefferson street dock at the end of her 18-day cruise to Sitka, Alaska.

"It was a cruise in which hard work and strict training were the chief requirements of each day. The citizen militiamen who never before could boast anything other than a fresh water voyage can now speak wisely of the 'perils of the deep.'"

"Seasickness was an almost constant companion on the outward trip. The Marblehead, a light vessel, was tossed about by the waves of the North Pacific, and mal de mer was the lot of almost every 'gob' on the boat, to say nothing of the commissioned officers.

"This cruise was of greater benefit to the members of the Oregon militia than any in the past, on account of the fact that there were only 55 of the regular navy men on board, and the citizen sailors were required to work the ship.

"Only one day was spent in Sitka, but this afforded the men ample opportunity to visit the city and acquaint themselves with the country. "At Bremerton the men were made acquainted with one of the hardest tasks of the ship. They had to load coal; and after 260 tons had been stored away on board and they had labored all day and long after midnight they were glad that coal heaving was not an every-day feature.

"Not even the 17 lawyers on board escaped work. An abundance of legal knowledge made no difference to the hardy bosun's mates."

KEEP YOUR PLUCK. Keep your pluck and take another hold; Don't whimper; it is useless to complain. Fortune still deals her favors to the bold.

There's never loss but somewhat is a gain. While you have left your body and your brain, In spite of all misfortune, be consoled.

There's always hope while these you still retain, Keep up your pluck and take another hold. The world to you may seem both hard and cold, And yet it is a good world, in the main.

If sympathy is in small measure doled, Don't whimper; it is useless to complain. With cheerful smiles conceal the hidden pain, Leave your vexations and your wrongs untold.

Fight, but if beaten, from weak tears refrain, Fortune still deals her favors to the bold. Oh, those invertebrates who fret and scold, Make faces at the cup they have to drain.

Dumbly despair at loss of land or gold! There's never loss but, somewhere is a gain. Be valiant. Bound, then strive to break the chain. That binds you. Show yourself of iron mold.

Sit down and weep and you will weep in vain, Work manfully and fate may be controlled. —Tit-Bits.

WALLACE BACK TO BROWNS. ST. LOUIS, Mo.—R. J. (Bobby) Wallace, former umpire for the American League, has signed to play the rest of the season with the St. Louis Browns. For years Wallace was star shortstop for St. Louis, but two seasons ago he joined the staff of umpires. Branch Ricker, business manager, said he had signed Wallace because Ernest Johnson, shortstop, had been injured and may not return to the game for three weeks.

MANILA GETTING INFANTRY REGT. UNDER NEW LAW

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 17.—Cable instructions from the War Department directing the formation of a new regiment of infantry in the Philippines are being carried out in accordance with the terms of the new army bill. Lieut.-Col. Walter H. Gordon of the 27th Infantry has been promoted to the colonelcy of the new regiment, which will be known as the 31st.

It is believed that the regiment will be recruited almost entirely from infantry regiments already serving in the islands, as most of the companies now here number 150 men, while under the new arrangement the companies will number a hundred men.

K BOATS SCORED FOUR TARGETS DURING NIGHT BATTLE-PRACTISE

Lieut. Lowry Writes in The Torpedo of Splendid Work Done By 3d Division

How the K submarines scored four "bullseyes" in night battle practise off Lahaina, Maui, under weather conditions which were extremely unfavorable, and thus made a score which it is believed no other division in the U. S. navy has equaled or excelled, is graphically told by Lieut. Frank J. Lowry, captain of the U. S. S. Alert, tender for the division, in the August number of The Torpedo, official publication of the third division.

"The routine was planned to utilize every minute of the day," he writes, "from 5:50 in the morning until pipe-down at night, in the early morning of the first day out, preparations were made for the day's torpedo practise. From 7:45 a. m. until about 4 in the afternoon the submarines practised approaching and firing torpedoes for elementary practise. From that time on until the following morning the submarines adjusted their torpedoes, while the Alert charged their batteries, air tanks, and made ready the pickup boats.

"All the efforts were not in vain. The score of the second elementary torpedo practise exceeded those of the first and were high enough to place the Third Submarine Division even or ahead of all other submarine divisions.

"The results of the day battle practise, placed the Third Submarine Division equal, if not ahead, of all other submarine divisions in the navy.

"The night battle practise was the culmination of hard work and the conscientious efforts of all hands from the division commander to the lowest rated man. The start was made in the heaviest wind and roughest sea we had encountered. There were many anxious moments, wondering whether the target and pickup boats were in the trough of the sea or under the waves. In spite of the unfavorable weather conditions at the starting point the run began.

"The first indication we had of where the submarines were was a masthead light, a whirl of water and the wake of a torpedo under the target. In about three minutes a second, then a third and a fourth. The score is not published but we all know what would have happened to a division of battleships and we are all reasonably sure that there is no other submarine division who made a better record than we did.

"All the credit for hits belongs to the submarine crews, but the tender's crew from the coal passers to the mess cooks, did their little bit which was just as necessary as making a torpedo run. We had to have steam, we had to eat, and, while there is nothing spectacular in shoveling coal or feeding a hungry crew, each man did his part and the results were achieved.

"The pickup crews are to be commended for their honest efforts throughout the practise. Although two torpedoes, out of about fifty shots fired, were lost, nothing that the pickup boats could have done would have saved them. No pickup boats ever handled a night practise better, in both lack of confusion and speed of recovery.

"In view of the high scores and spectacular runs, the means to the end are lost sight of, but those who have not received honorable mention or prize money, are not unknown and credit is given in quarterly marks."

'DARE-DEVIL' DODD RETIRES; HE CHASED COLUMBUS BANDITS

U. S. Army Officer Who Went After Mexican Raiders Is Now Too Old to Fight

Many army officers of Oahu who knew him well will be interested at learning that the official life of a gallant old warrior of the U. S. army expired July 26, when by reason of the fact that on that date he was 64 years old, Brig-Gen. George A. Dodd, the commander of the cavalry brigade of the punitive expedition into Mexico last spring, was retired from active service. In the ordinary routine of military affairs Gen. Dodd would have been retired with the rank of colonel. Only a few weeks ago, by order of the president, the higher rank of brigadier-general was conferred upon him in recognition of his distinguished services in Mexico, particularly his cavalry dash at Guerrero last March, when he went into successful action against a superior force of bandits after a ride of 55 miles in 17 hours.

In the forty years of his service in the regulars, "Dare-Devil" Dodd, as he is familiarly known, has seen as much hard fighting as any officer of the service. He is a native of Pennsylvania and was appointed to the Military Academy from that State, immediately after his graduation in 1876, when he was assigned as a second lieutenant to the famous Third Cavalry, the command that has seen more hard service on the border in the past four years than any regiment in the army.

At West Point his classmates included Hugh L. Scott, now a major-general and chief of the general staff; Brig-Gen. Ernest A. Garlington, the inspector general of the army, and Herbert W. Slocum, now commanding the Twelfth Cavalry, the attack upon which at Columbus, N. M., was the immediate cause of the expedition being sent into Mexico last spring.

The first ten years of Gen. Dodd's service were ten years of never-ceasing activity for the most part in actions against the hostile Indians of the Far West. He served through the Powder River expedition of 1877, helped to keep the Indians of the Red Cloud Agency quiet in 1878, won the commendation of his superiors for gallant service in the Ute expedition of 1879, was in command of a famous company of scouts in the Arizona outbreaks of 1883, and helped suppress Indian disturbances in what is now the state of Oklahoma in November, 1893.

Gen. Dodd was a captain in the Fourth Cavalry in the Spanish war. He was in the battle of San Juan and participated in the siege and operations against Santiago. He was commended for gallantry in the face of the enemy in the Santiago campaign.

NEW SUPER-DREADNOUGHT WILL BE PROOF AGAINST TORPEDOES

Great Battleship California Will Differ From Any War Vessel Afloat Today

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—The super-dreadnought California, the construction of which is to be begun at Mare Island, will be built on lines different from any warship now floating. NEW SUPER-DREADNOUGHT WILL BE PROOF AGAINST TORPEDOES

Great Battleship California Will Differ From Any War Vessel Afloat Today

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—The super-dreadnought California, the construction of which is to be begun at Mare Island, will be built on lines different from any warship now floating. It was learned today that by actual tests the navy department has satisfied itself that the vessels of the proposed type of the California cannot be sunk by the explosion of one or even more torpedoes.

The California will differ from all other battleships hitherto built, both in the construction of her bulkheads and in the increase in the number of compartments. It is declared she will be the supreme submarine resister of the world's navies, in effect, torpedo proof.

While the navy department reserves certain details, it has become known that the construction of the bulkheads has been so changed as to cause them to offer a resistance to torpedo attacks not possible under the existing plan.

It is also declared that an attack, however successful, by a torpedo on a certain area of bulkheads would not result, as at present, in general disaster to a large area of the vessel. The bulkheads are to be of steel, but they are not to be rigid.

The new bulkheads will have the power of resistance increased from 25 to 30 per cent over the old style. One of the navy experts said today that when a torpedo is exploded its line of least resistance is the armor first and then the bulkheads. The effect of the torpedo is, therefore, in exact proportion to the non-flexibility of the bulkheads. This is the problem that has been solved.

While the navy department does not reveal the precise manner in which the steel material of the bulkhead is put together it is confident of the results.

On the California the number of air tight compartments and other compartments will be increased about 20 per cent. This is limiting still further the area of damage caused by a mine or torpedo.

Electrical apparatus taking current from a light socket has been invented by a French scientist to purify the air in a room by literally pumping it into a reservoir and washing it.
