LURLINE IS DUE TUESDAY WITH BIG CARGO

Bringing few passengers and a small mail, but a record cargo, the Matsun steamship Lurline will arrive here Tuesday morning from San Francisco on her one hundredth voyage, according to a radio received this morning at Castle & Cooke's local agency.

Total freight on board is 9251 tons, of which 7758 is for Honolulu and 1593 for Hilo. Passengers for Honolulu number 47 cabin and eight steerage, mail 73 bags, express nine packages and 23 automobiles.

The principal items of freight are 11,093 bags of cement, 58,000 bricks, 10,000 bags flour, 1925 bags of lime, 1600 bags of plaster, 6500 bags of various grains, 1000 bags of potatoes, onions, etc., and one 14-ton tractor engine.

The Matsonia, which sails Wednesday morning, has already booked for the voyage 220 passengers, of whom only about 40 are island people, the rest being tourists. Freight from here on the Matsonia will be 9200 tons, consisting of 7300 tons of sugar, 900 tons of molasses and 2000 tons of miscellaneous cargo, included in which is 40,000 cases of canned pineapples.

The Matson company has just issued an order that passengers must identify and check their baggage themselves before boarding steamers of the Matson Navigation Company. No baggage will be placed on board unless so checked. This means that passengers must not leave the checking of baggage to the transfer companies, but must do it themselves.

Fog interfered with the standardization trials of the United States torpedo-boat destroyer Rowan.

QUARANTINE IS STILL IN FORCE AT LOCAL PORTS

The following letter has been received by Dr. F. E. Trotter, chief quarantaine officer for Honolulu, from A. H. Glennan, acting U. S. surgeon-general, relative to the inspection of vessels from Hawaiian ports at Pacific coast ports:

"Medical Officer in Charge, U. S. Public Health Service, Pacific Coast Quarantine Stations.

"Sir: You are authorized to discontinue, until further notice, the inspection of vessels entering your port from all ports of Hawaii, providing the Hawaiian port is the port of origin and not merely an intermediate port, during the passage of the vessel. Vessels clearing from foreign ports, touching at a Hawaiian port merely as a wayport, should be inspected as formerly, this exemption to apply only to local traffic between Hawaiian ports and United States ports.

"All vessels leaving the United States for Hawaiian ports will continue to be inspected at the latter ports, and it is assumed any requirements pertaining to deratization of vessels will be enforced by the quarantine officer at the port of arrival."

This letter does away with all doubt that vessels entering this port must be inspected by the health officers. First reports from the mainland said vessels running between the coast and the Hawaiian Islands need not be inspected here.

The Matson steamer Manoa which arrived at San Francisco August 25 was the first vessel to come under this ruling and the officers declared that the passengers greatly appreciated the time saved in docking. The Wilhelmina which arrived at San Francisco Tuesday was second.

FLOATING ZOO DRAWS MANY TO WATERFRONT

Rare Animals and Birds on Niagara Rival Best Collections in Menageries

Bears which carry their young in pouches, kangaroos that climb trees like monkeys, a fox as white as snow, bears with side whiskers the same as grandfather used to wear and dozens of other animals, some one might have heard of and others probably never did hear of, 2000 birds of many species, huc and noise, 100 tons of them, all on board the Niagara Friday, en route to Vancouver, where they will be disposed of by their owner, Ellis J. Josephs, world famous wild animal collector, who is returning from Africa and Australia, where he spent the last 12 months collecting them.

It was certainly an interesting sight and Honolulu people who visited the Niagara Friday were well paid for the trip, as many of the animals and birds were very rare and are seldom seen even in the most up-to-date zoo.

Among the rarest of his catch are two kea parrots from New Zealand, which alight on the backs of sheep and after tearing away the wool rip open the sheep and eat the kidney.

Another was the Tasmanian wolf or tiger, an animal of nocturnal habits, which is seldom seen and is the first one ever captured by Josephs during his 20 years in the bush. Long, grey and lean, he looked as if he would enjoy taking a chunk out of one's leg.

The most amusing members of the collection were the little Teddy bears, which are natives of Australia, and look just like furry ones the girls used to carry around when that fad was all the rage. They were purchased by Richard Trent to add to his already large collection of animals.

It was an interesting sight to witness Josephs' handling of the animals and birds, and it was evident that he loved every one of them, even the big, ferocious African leopard. Daisy, the elephant, will wrap her trunk about him in a loving embrace and the bears and tigers stopped their growling when he came near. His particular pet, however, is an old gray parrot, which has made 13 trips with him and is the only one of his collection that he absolutely refuses to sell.

What the bird said when the Star-Bulletin reporter said "Hello, Polly," the reporter would have to tell in private.

Other animals in the collection of particular interest were two sloth bears, 10 Tasmanian devils (not the kind with horns, but a species of the bear family, with fiendish dispositions), four cape hyax, 40 Australian "possums, which also carry their young in pouches, 134 kangaroos and wallabies, the latter a small species of kangaroo, nine wombats, seven emus and an Indian antelope, a dainty, little spotted animal hardly three feet high.

Among the birds were a whole cove of Spanish cockatoos, whose crests when raised resemble the Spanish flag, another filled with tiny doves four inches long which resembled the mourning dove of the Southwest, and in a large pen were hundreds of ducks of every imaginable color. And besides these were pheasants, cranes, finches, plovers, parrots, sparrows and many others of the big bird family.

Taken all together, the animals and birds which Josephs had on the Niagara are probably worth very nearly $200,000.
